Yalta Parley Big Step Toward World Peace

FDR Says U.S. Must Assume Greater Responsibilities

Pleads for Support Of Decisions Reached

By D. HAROLD OLIVER
(AP Staff Writer)

Washington, March 1 —(AP)— President Roosevelt put squarely up to Congress today the question of underwriting world collaboration for future peace or bearing "the responsibility for another world conflict."

"There can be no middle ground here," Mr. Roosevelt said in a personal report on the big decisions in the Crimea which marked "a turning point in American history."

Speaking "in all frankness" to a joint session of the Senate and House of Representatives the President said that whether the momentous parleys with Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin are to be "widely fruitful or not lies to a great extent in our hands."

Mr. Roosevelt linked "the fate of the United States—and of the world—for decades to come" on the Dumbarton Oaks and other agreements soon to be submitted for Senate ratification.

Must Have Support.

"For unless you here in the halls of the American Congress—with the support of the American people —concur in the decisions reached at Yalta, and give them your active support," Mr. Roosevelt said, "any meeting will not have produced lasting results."

"World peace is not a party question, nor should it be a matter of party victory."

Standing—from only crowds looked down from galleries of the House Chamber upon the scene unique in history, Mr. Roosevelt described in a red plush chair brought from the White House study there in the well of the House, instead of the leader's desk, now facing row upon row of senators and representatives he reported on his 14,000-mile trip to Yalta.

Mr. Roosevelt was spotlighted by camera lamps and faced a battery of 13 microphones which carried his words to 30 million listeners. Crowds bearing special tickets flowed past police lines and thronged lamined galleries and corridors hours before the session was called to order.

"Unconditional Surrender" Stands.

For Germany, Mr. Roosevelt reiterated again an emphatic ultimatum of "unconditional surrender" and indicated simultaneously that a peace offer tender by the Nazi government was not contemplated.

"The German people," he said, "as well as the German leaders, must realize the sooner they give up and surrender, the sooner the individuals, the sooner the present agony will be over."

Mr. Roosevelt said decisions on German occupation reached by the Big Three at Yalta do not mean "enslavement for the German people, adding:

"Our objective in handling Germany's people is to secure the peace of the future world."

"The German people, as well as the German soldiers," he declared, "must realize that the sooner they give up and surrender, the sooner their present agony will be over. They must realize that with only complete surrender can they begin to re-establish themselves in the society of nations. The world might accept as decent neighbors."

Unconditional surrender of Japan is as essential as that of Germany "if our plans for world peace are to succeed," he declared, adding that Japanese militarism must be wiped out as thoroughly as German militarism.

Given Personal Report

Mr. Roosevelt went before Congress with his personal report on the historic conferences with Marshal Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill at Yalta just a little more than 24 hours after his return to the White House. During his 14,000-mile journey to the Middle East, the President also conferred with Mr. Churchill and other leaders at Malta and at Algiers. In Egypt he conferred with King Farouk and with the rulers of Ethiopia and Saudi Arabia.

The President described the Big Three meeting at Yalta as a new effort to find a common basis for peace.

He spoke the end of the system of unilateral action and exclusive alliances and spheres of influence and balances of power and all the other expedients which have been tried for centuries—and have failed," he said.

"We propose to substitute for all of these a universal organization in which all peace-loving nations will finally have a chance to join.

"I am confident that the Congress and the American people will accept the results of this conferences as the beginnings of a permanent structure of peace upon which we can begin to build, under God, that better world in which our children and grandchildren — yours and mine, the children and grandchildren of the whole world — must live," he insisted, whose speech was broadcast, recorded, and the Senators sitting before him that they will soon have an opportunity to make a great decision "which will determine for the fate of the United States —and of the world — for generations to come."

He apparently referred to the projected World Security organization, American participation in which will be passed on by the Senate some time in the future.

He expressed a hope that Congress would decide his journey was "a fruitful one."

"For unless you here in the halls of the American Congress, with the support of the American people, concur in the decisions reached at Yalta and give them your active support," he said, "any meeting will not have produced lasting results."

Mr. Roosevelt said the Senate and House of Representatives both would be represented at the San Francisco United Nations conference beginning April 25, with both major parties having equal representation.

"World peace," he said, "is not a party question—any more than is the winning of the war. The structure of world peace cannot be the work of one man, or one party, or one nation . . . It cannot be a structure of complete perfection at first."

Discussing the decisions of the Big Three agreement for united action in liberated areas, the President said in liberated areas, the President announced the specific agreement regarding Poland's future boundaries as an outstanding example of such joint action.

Asserting the whole Polish question, he said, "presented a source of trouble in post-war Europe and the United Nations were determined to find a common ground for its solution," the President said:

"We did"

Question of Meat Ration Revival Depends on Needs of Europeans

Ottawa, March 1. (CP)—Whether the Canadians again will be subject to meat rationing hinges largely on discussions now taking place between government officials, it was learned today.

Present meat supplies for Canada are sufficient to meet current needs but the question is what European requirements are likely to be in the next few months.

One official put the situation in these words:

"There is a lots of meat in Canada, but the requirements of the Armed Forces might be such that the domestic situation would be changed".

When meat rationing was lifted Feb. 26, 1944, the government's action was criticized in some quarters and was attributed primarily to shortages in shipping space due to the stepped overseas exports of Dr. Douglas Abbott, parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Ilsley. At the time of the announcement said "it is intended that meat rationing be resumed as soon as such a course will be helpful".

Whether the time now has come for a resumption of rationing would be helpful is one phase of the general review of the supply situation for meat and other agricultural products now underway. Interested in practically all agricultural products were recorded last year. With the exception of wheat, there are no stocks available on hand. With fast-moving developments in the war picture, the question whether the time has come to start accumulating reserves against increased food demands from the outside.

As an active participant in the U.N.R.R.A. program Canada's responsibility will include assembling and shipment of foodstuffs for the liberated areas. Agriculture, however, is beset by manpower limitations, can offer little hope of any material increases in output and if demands in shipping space have to be met by a redistribution of available supplies.

This will apply to dairy products as well as meat but at the moment interest centres in the meat situation, it was learned. The shipping bottleneck which taxed storage capacity at the time meat rationing was lifted now has eased and the movement of increasing quantities of meat overseas appears likely. Officials now are seeking an answer to whether this new situation will warrant reinstatement of meat rationing for Canadians.

RUSSIANS CROSS DEFENCE LINE EAST OF STETTIN

Section of Eastern Pomerania Appears To Be Virtually Cut off

By RICHARD KASISCHKE
(AP Staff Writer)

London, March 1 — (AP) — The Russians have crossed the Ihna River defense line east of Stettin in their offensive toward the Baltic, the German high command said today, and Moscow dispatches said a large section of Eastern Pomerania appeared to have been virtually cut off.

"Col.-Gen. K. K. Sokolsky's artillery has the Danzig-Stettin railway under fire in several sectors and there is no hope of moving from east to west," said a Moscow broadcast from Eddy Gilmore, Associated Press correspondent.

The German communique said Marshal Gregory Zhukov's 1st White Russian Army forced the crossings of the Ihna, a river flowing in an east-west direction of Stargard, a strategic road and rail junction, then turning north toward the Baltic Sea.

Farther east, the Germans said, Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky's 2nd White Russian Army forced the Germans into another retreat south of Koslin, 25 miles from the coastal railway, whose capture the Russians announced last night.

German Report Retreat

A retreat forecast of Rummelsburg, 18 miles east of Koslin, also was reported by the Germans.

Earlier German broadcasts said Marshal Rokossovsky had plunged 12 miles north of Schlife to Polzin, only 16 miles from the coast, and 30 miles north of captured Neustettin.

Offmore said Kolberg, Koslin and Stolp, the string of cities dotting the miles apart on the Stettin-Danzig railway, appeared to have been cut off from one another by artillery fire brought within range by Marshal Georgi Zhukov's armored and motorized swoop.

Rebellis Higher

The higher ceiling is set for appliances which have been rebuilt and are in good operating condition. Except for sewing machines, radio tubes and musical instruments, rebuilt ceiling prices shall be established as a percentage of the current new price of a similar make or model sold during the base period Sept. 15 to Oct. 11, 1941 — in the same locality where the sale takes place.

If the appliance require repairs they may not be sold for more than 60 per cent of the ceiling prices set for the same models if rebuilt.

Warranty Must be Given

If a private individual sells an appliance which is not rebuilt but is operating as good as new he may charge the ceiling price for a rebuilt model. But on such a sale he must give a warranty in favor of the purchaser as implied. Ceiling prices for goods varying from 30 days to six months. Under the order, the seller is required during this period to make any repairs or replacements at his own expense.

When the date of manufacture of an appliance cannot be determined or if the price ceiling cannot be established, an appliance may not be sold until the administrator of used goods has fixed a price ceiling for it.

GERMANY MAY LOSE PART OF LAND TO HOLLAND

Compensation For Enemy Devastation Clement Attlee Tells House of Commons

London, March 1 (CP) — The House of Commons tonight gave Prime Minister Churchill a thunderous, 413-to-0 vote of confidence.

London, March 1 — (CP) — Clement Attlee, Deputy Prime Minister, told the House of Commons today Germany might lose part of her land to Holland as compensation for enemy devastation.

"If it is necessary to take some German soil to make it up to the entirely innocent Dutch people who have been robbed and destroyed, I shall not complain," he declared as the House moved toward a vote of confidence demanded by Prime Minister Churchill to place Britain squarely behind the Big Three decisions at Yalta.

"Or if it is necessary to clear certain areas in order to enable the Polish people to lead a full free life, I shall not complain and I don't think the Germans have the right to complain."

Turning to Poland, Mr. Attlee asserted the Poles "can step back" too much to the past and said the "big Three" at Yalta had to settle two questions: how to win the war and how to win the peace.

U.S. INVASION OF PALAWAN IS. TOKYO REPORT

Occupation Will Go Far to Seal Off Jap Holdings in South Philippines

Manila, March 1 — (AP)—American invasion of Palawan Island, the occupation of which would go far toward sealing off Japanese holdings in the Southern Philippines from access to the South China Sea, was reported today by Tokyo radio.

Gen. MacArthur made no reference to such an operation in his Thursday communique which announced virtual destruction of the trapped enemy garrison of 6,000 on Corregidor Island in Manila Bay.

The enemy radio said that a regiment of Americans — possibly 3,000 strong — landed at a.m. Wednesday on Palawan, 250 miles southwest of Manila. The unconfirmed report told of a "violent battle" in progress.

If substantiated, Palawan would be the 16th island invaded by American forces in the Philippines. The island, 275 miles long and 25 miles wide at its widest point, is the dividing line between the Sulu and South China Seas.

Its location lands it would place United States forces along more than a 500-mile stretch of the South China Sea extending from Lingayen Gulf on Western Luzon in an arc to Palawan's southern tip. That zig lies within 90 miles of Netherlands Borneo.

ELECTIONS SOON

London, March 1 — (AP) — The Moscow radio broadcast a Tass dispatch last night quoting reports from Sofia that parliamentary elections will be held shortly in Bulgaria, to "consolidate the democratic system and provide an opportunity for the entire people to express their will through representative government."

H.M.S. Vanguard Name of Britain's Newest and Mightiest Battleship

By LOUIS WULFF
(Reuters Staff Writer)

London, March 1 — (Reuters) — H.M.S. Vanguard, the name of Britain's newest and mightiest battleship.

This secret, which has been kept under wraps since Princess Elizabeth launched the ship at a Clydeside shipyard on the Clyde last June, 30 was disclosed Wednesday night.

When Princess Elizabeth launched her, elaborate precautions were taken to prevent the ship's name being published. Microphones recording the ceremony for the BBC and for newsreel soundtracks were cut out as she named the battleship.

Many thousands of Clydeside shipworkers knew the name, and the Germans guessed it correctly some time ago, but up to now it has not been disclosed officially.

This dispatch gave no details of size or armament but the largest British battleships recorded in Jane's Fighting Ships are those of the Lion class, with displacement of more than 40,000 tons, compared with 35,000 tons of the King George V class.

The Lion class was scheduled to include four ships. Only two, the Lion and Temeraire, have been named.

Yanks Pour Thru Breached Defences 5 Miles From City

Increase Peril to Rich Ruhr By Strong Drive in North

(BY JAMES M. LONG)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, March 1. (AP)—Powerful U.S. 1st Army forces poured today through breached defences within five miles of Cologne, anchor of the great Rhineland metropolis under siege.

To the north, the U.S. 9th Army blazed down to the Rhine banks and increased the peril to the rich Ruhr in gains still marked by security silence. North of them the 1st Canadian Army pushed desperate German resistance on the north-west approaches to the Ruhr.

The U.S. 3rd drive astride the Moselle Valley crashed well past the outer defences of Trier, reaching the vicinity of Irsch, 2 1-2 miles from Trier, one of the ancient Roman cities in Western Germany. Trier was immediately threatened with encirlement and columns driving around its battlements on the southeast, south and west and northwest.

Within 25 Miles of Jonction

Canadian and British troops fought stubbornly with armor to break the enemy's last ditch stand in three places of the Hochwald gap between Weese and Kevelaer within 22 miles of the great Rhine port of Duisburg and the northern face of the Ruhr city of Weesl across the Rhine.

The Canadian and American 9th Armies were within 25 miles or so of a junction which might trap thousands of Germans west of the Rhine.

Allied warplanes were keeping a vigilant "watch on the Rhine" by night as a mass retreat eastward and shot up shipping and barges and tugs at one point.

Meanwhile, the withdrawal of Field Marshal Von Rundstedt's mauled and bleeding armies has not yet begun across the river, Roger D. Greene, Associated Press War Correspondent, reported from Field Marshal Montgomery's headquarters.

U.S. 1st Army tanks, self-propelled guns and infantry will be greeted as flame-throwers rumbled across the Erft River bridge which was reported today by the Germans.

Field Marshal Montgomery's headquarters announced that the Canadians only four miles away. The immediate significance of these moves was not clear, but there were indications that the Germans might be pulling back in the Roermond-Venlo strip to the embankment between the jaws of the American and Canadian assault forces.

Hundreds has been 10 crack divisions facing the Canadian Army, indicating the importance the Germans attached to this sector where a break-through would open the Ruhr to mass withdrawal from west of the Rhine.

Some 15 German divisions were believed to be quartered by operations of the Canadian, U.S. 9th Armies, but Canadian Army troops were eight miles from the Ruhr basin city of Wesel.

Dispatch passed through the 9th Army's blackout said its forces had driven forward the Ruhr along several approaches to a distance of the blackout was in itself a confirmation of reports that tank and motorized infantry forces still were driving those in their surge around Muenchen Gladbach (population 127,000), due west of Duesseldorf.

The dispatch said resistance was light in some places but was stiffening in some places retreating in a wide mesh in order to make often destroying their own pillboxes.

Coroner's Jury Returns Verdict In Snyder Case

The adjourned inquest looking into the death of the late Verton Snyder, who was found dead in his bed on Coleman Street last Saturday was concluded at the police station before Coroner Dr. A. J. Retson. Medical evidence was heard from Dr. O. S. Orser and Dr. MacKay revealing the deceased had been shot with a .32 calibre rifle bullet in the head. Police Inspector J. C. Hayes told of finding the body of the deceased mainly hanging, and R. H. MacKeen, Inspector Public Schools.

Included also are twenty-five articles dealing with the various phases of rural school life, administration, recreation, curricula and others. Parents and ratepayers are requested to read five of these topics in their completion of the questionnaire.

In an accompanying letter, Association officials point out that questionnaires have been used in war, we have learned the value of them" and express the hope that all school boards, township and county councils become sufficiently interested and become members of the Association.

Officials request that the questionnaires be completed and submitted to the Association secretary not later than March 15 so that immediate action may be taken on those Textures and Improvements that are recommended by the ratepayers and parents.

Officials of the Association are,—President, Kenneth Allen; Vice President, J. A. Warren; Secretary, Wendell Sine, and R. H. MacKeen, Inspector Public Schools.

Questionnaire Seeks Information Of School Needs

Through the media of questionnaires, officials of the Educational Association of South Hastings are endeavoring to obtain a consensus of educational needs of the schools within its area.

The questionnaires have been forwarded to the various school boards, which will distribute them to parents and ratepayers with the request for the fullest co-operation possible.

The Association, the first of its kind in this district was formed late last year and was an aftermath of the suggestion and efforts of Inspector of Public Schools R. H. MacKeen. Its objects are improvement of school environment; re-stimulation of rural community life; stimulation of adult education; closer relationship between school and community; improvement of school administration and the uniting of teachers, ratepayers and trustees in solving their own problems.

Among other features the questionnaire embodies four important questions, namely, "what features of your school do you like; what changes would you like to see in the present educational system; do you think that our public schools should be used as community centres, and how may the South Hastings Educational Association be of service to the trustees, teachers and ratepayers in this area."

Killed in Action

Serving with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Private Gerald Stanley MacFarlane, nineteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. MacFarlane, Herchimer Ave., was killed in action in Italy in December last. He came from Perry and lived with his family in 1936 and enlisted in May, 1940, going overseas in December of the same year. He was a former student at Prince of Wales School. Remaining members of his family are besides his parents, a brother, Alex, and three sisters, Mrs. F. Dunning, whose husband is serving overseas and Betty and Ellen at home.

First Month Of Spring Opens Quietly

March, which reported for 1945 duty today, while not exactly vested in lamb-like garments, made its debut in atmospheric habiliments far from those of the traditional lion.

Which, according to weather legend, augurs for an exit 31 days hence that will not exactly be conducive to dandelions, robins, and green grass in abundance.

A bright sun that shed increasingly more warmth from higher in the heavens was apparent, but there was a definite lack of vitality in its rays. Despite the fact that the traditional first day of March was at times actually sunny, Old Man Winter is loath to let go his grip and is still very much hanging tenaciously to the grip with which he seized the district last November.

But the old boy is obviously tired. The once-thick snow blanket that has cloaked the city for months is getting threadbare and gradually disappearing beneath the first rains and the increasing warmth of the days.

Grimy ice that has buried city streets and sidewalks is also disappearing in muddy rivulets to the river. Cheerful English sparrows are hopping around the trunks of the maples and pecking optimistically at the grains released by the melting snow.

And with the coming of warmer winds, and the promise of those things that make Spring the most welcome season of the year, penny-up city dwellers are thinking of the outdoors, pulling fuel and other winter problems away, they hope, until winter winds blow again.

Children are visualizing gew hats and dresses. The men are wiping dust from fishing tackle, golf clubs and garden tools.

The winter has been long and the ice still more deep than each new morning sun brings a promise of brighter warmer days to come.

'Billy' Greatrix on Visit to City Finds Time Has Wrought Many Changes

Mr. W. R. Greatrix, a popular Belleville boy of sixty years ago, and son of the late Rev. Richard Greatrix, is spending a few days in town and is staying at the New Queens Hotel. He has been looking up old friends and renewing the scenes of his boyhood days. He finds, however, that many of the old friends have long since passed on and owing to the changes wrought by time, the scenes as he remembers them are few; there are busy buildings where by memories certain stores and vacant spaces have been built upon. However, he is enjoying his visit and the old timers whom he has met have been pleased to greet him and talk over former experiences.

"Billy" Greatrix was right in the thick of things when the old Belleville Rifle Club was in full swing and the block that was located at the corner of William and Queen Streets and took in the property on the corner of Ann and Queen Streets and north for some distance. Here the bicycle meets were held and crack riders from a distance assembled here to contest for high wheels for valuable prizes. "Billy" was among the best of these cycle riders and he won many prizes, including the Corby Challenge Cup which he held for two years. He was six and he now holds the cup which he won in 1894. He started his apprenticeship in the drug store of the late Dr. F. Dundas, when and after graduating he lived in various places finally locating in Toronto where he was in the drug business for years. Later he returned to Belleville, holding down a position in Canada and the United States. For twenty years he has lived retired in Toronto.

"Billy's" old home town is changed a great deal in the heart of Belleville City and although many changes are here and there and the town does not appear familiar to him in many ways he still loves Belleville, the place where he was born.

Relationship of Plant Life to Good Fishing Explained to Anglers Assoc.

Relationship of the quantity of the plant and animal food in lakes and streams to the probability of water being a fish producer or not fishing was graphically explained by members of the Belleville and District Fish and Game Protective Association on Wednesday evening as they were addressed by Dr. Ralph William Hartzheim, biologist with the Ontario Department of Game.

Well over two hundred local sportsmen members of the district association, increased by attendance, obtained valuable information on fish life and habits which, for various reasons may stand them in good turn when angling finds favor. Membership of the local association has greatly increased since the new year according to President Ken Short.

Illustrating his lecture with lantern slide pictures, graphs and charts, Prof. Hartzheim indicated where the three department laboratories for the study of fish and fish life are situated, one actually is in the Lake Nipigon district, another at Lake Nipissing and a third in Algonquin Park.

Many Forms Fish Food.

He described the seemingly countless microscopic forms of plant and animal life which are to be found in all waters, and upon which the life of the fish depends. He told how the smallest fish live on these microscopic plants and animals and how the larger game fish feed on the smaller fish.

The work of his department was to find out the possibilities and the possible lack of plant or animal life in waters and if possible to correct the deficiency. The relation of the food of plant and animal life, small and large, to the various species of fish, fish game fish may exist in certain waters, was also in the spotlight in explaining the result may be disastrous fish life.

He described the kind of the spawning habits of bass and why lake trout spawn in the fall, the kind of water depths during the fore part of the year and in deeper water at other times.

Trout Like Fast Water.

The characteristic trout stream was described and a continuous series of rapids and pools. Food of the trout's liking was to be found in the fast waters, the kind of water the trout like was described, the method by which many species of fish, fish food, enter the lakes and mouths with water and then forcing it out through the gills, the silt and straining of which by the animal life, was explained. Game fish lived on small fish and bug and tadpoled gill rakers.

President J. E. Short acted as chairman for the meeting and gave a short report on the recent provincial meeting held in Toronto. Two pictures one on trout fishing and the other concentrating the correct manner of bunge fishing were shown for the enjoyment of the members.

Fire Destroys Modern Barn In Sidney Twp.

Stirling, March 1 —(Special)— Loss estimated at approximately $4,500 resulted Wednesday afternoon when the large modern frame barn owned by Mrs. Neil Davis, 4th concession Sidney township, one mile west of Foxboro, was completely destroyed by fire including feed contents amounting to about 60 tons of hay.

The entire stock of cows amounting to 19 head and a number of horses were saved from the building by neighbors, while the cream separator and other small items of machinery were also saved. The cause of the fire is unknown but it started in the barn basement in what had formerly been used as a hen pen.

No one was home at the time of the fire, Mrs. Davis and daughter, Helen, being in Belleville attending a funeral when the fire broke out.

To James Reynolds, a neighbor living directly across the road, goes the credit of saving the Davis livestock from the burning barn. Attracted to the Davis barn by bursting of the cows, Mr. Reynolds opened the stable door to be met with a cloud of smoke. He immediately started freeing the cows but by the time the stable was emptied the smoke was so thick that it was only a few feet was possible.

Had he been allowed to the barn only five minutes later it would have been impossible to save the cattle, Mr. Reynolds told the Ontario Intelligencer Thursday morning.

With the assistance of a second neighbor, Ira Hartley, the large, old farm wagon was saved from the barn driveway. Other farm machinery was stored in a nearby steel covered shed which did not burn.

Neighbors worked practically all night in extinguishing fire in a straw stack fearing that the wind might blow up the flames and spread to other buildings. The machine shed was emptied and filled temporarily by house the Davis stock.

Earlier in the winter when water was scarce at the Davis farm, Mrs. Davis and her daughters were forced to melt snow for a period to supply water for their stock.

Sales In Stamp Drive Lagging

With slightly more than one week to go the current war savings stamp drive being sponsored by the local and district branches is still far from reaching its objective in the Belleville area. This was reported this morning by local campaign officials.

To date a total of 34,000 stamps have been sold in the Belleville district, it was announced, which must be disposed of before the local objective of $1,000,000 is completely ends on March 9th.

Canvass officials in the Belleville area are continuing to do a splendid job in sale of stamps in connection with the drive, according to reports. Splendid prizes are being offered by local sponsors of the drive for the top stamp sales pupil in each of the schools.

Although the "Friday is Stamp Day" drive may be lagging a trifle in the Belleville area, prospects across the Dominion are encouraging, according to Lieutenant-Governor of the Bank of Canada, having expressed his confidence that the objective would be reached.

In a recent message to N. S. Brandon, Ontario director of sales for the campaign, Mr. Towers said: "I have been examining city records of food stamp sales in Ontario and feel sure that the accomplishment to date must be very gratifying to you and your associates. Present figures indicate the objective will be reached and I am confident the final total of the campaign will carry us to results far in excess of last year."

FDR SAYS

Most Hopeful Agreement.

Mr. Churchill said that he was convinced that the agreement on Poland, under the circumstances, is the most hopeful agreement possible for a free, independent and prosperous Polish state.

The President emphasized the unity of the three Allies and said they are determined to continue to be united so that "the ideal of saving world peace will become a reality."

Referring to some agreements reached at Yalta as "military secrets" he said the Germans are learning about some of them already. "So they surmise and they will learn more about them today and the next day—and every day."

On the way back from the Mediterranean Mr. Roosevelt told reporters the Yalta conferences had produced some secret understandings—necessarily secret, he called them—which would become apparent in time.

Agree on Voting Procedure.

In his report to Congress the President said the Big Three had agreed on voting procedure in the proposed world security council—a point not settled at Dumbarton Oaks, he added.

"It is not yet possible to announce the terms of that agreement publicly, but it will be in a very short time."

The basis for the agreement, he said, was an American proposal "which after discussion was unanimously adopted by the other two nations."

Although France was not represented at the conference, the President said "no one should detect in this recognition there accorded of her role in the reconstruction of Europe and the world."

He pointed out that France had been invited to accept a zone of occupation in Germany, to join as a sponsor of the United Nations Conference, and "will have a permanent member on the International Security Council with the right of veto power, just as there will be associated in the joint recommendations of the control commission in Germany."

One result of the agreement to exchange daily information between the Allied armies under General Eisenhower and Marshal Stalin, and those in Italy without the necessity of going through the Chiefs of Staff in Washington and London is the fact, he said, was the recent bombing by Allied aircraft "at points which are directly related to the Russian advance on Berlin."

The President began his address in a light vein. After saying he came back refreshed and invigored despite the long journey, he added:

"The Roosevelts are not, as you may have noticed, averse to travel. It's in our blood."

He said there were two main purposes at the conference, the first to defeat Germany with the greatest possible speed and the second to continue to build for last-

February Weather Almost Identical With Year Ago

From a standpoint of weather the months of February this year and in 1944 were for all practical purposes almost identical twins according to statistics made public from the Belleville Water Purification Plant today.

The mean temperature for February this year and last was 20 degrees; total precipitation was almost the same; there were five days of zero weather in both months and less than one precipitation fell on the same number of days.

High temperature for the month just passed was 39 degrees with five below being the coldest recorded. There was 1.06 inches of rain and 12.3 inches of snow making a total precipitation of 2.20 inches. Precipitation fell on 24 days of the month.

Last year there was a greater contrast in temperature during the month with the high being 43 degrees and a low of 16 below zero. Rainfall was .34 inches and snowfall 27.2 inches making a total precipitation of 2.66 inches. Precipitation fell on 23 days.

In Brand New Merchandise To Be Cleared at Once!

Space in this advertisement does not permit the listing of all the hundreds of items on sale at this time. Our main floor and basement are jammed with values of every description. Don't miss an opportunity to visit Christian's during this big sale.

We're Not Taking Chances

The entire contents of our basement warehouse is to be offered at a sacrifice as insurance against possible flood damage this spring.

The experience of our firm in the past has been that, nearly every spring, due to unusually heavy snow and so forth, our basement warehouse has been flooded causing terrific loss. To avoid re-occurrence, we are offering this stock at a tremendous sacrifice at the present time to avoid loss.

For example, in the flood of seven years ago, water rose in our main store to heights of around one and a half feet. At the present time our store is crowded with merchandise and to take the necessary precautions . . . make space for storage etc., we must move $15,000 worth of stock as quickly as possible.

We would rather give you a bargain now in brand new merchandise than to have to offer you water damaged stock in a flood sale later.

March Comes

March, first of the spring months, has come and in nineteen days on March 20th in the evening spring will officially begin. The long ordeal of winter's cold and unusually heavy snowfall during the latter half of December and the months of January and forepart of February eased somewhat in the past few weeks. The shortest month in the year passed out in keeping with the temperatures and conditions of the latter half of the month. March so often heralded by snow storms and said to be the month of contraries, has been ushered in quietly.

March is the month of the spring breakup and often is a period of anxiety lest a sudden breaking-up of the winter should precipitate floods upon those who live along rivers and streams. The recent mild weather and lighter fall of snow have been very favorable factors to which people look now for alleviation of what seemed some time ago as if it might be a menace. Very little water has run off in spite of short thaws, the explanation being that the ground has little or no frost owing to the sudden early fall of snow which blanketed the earth to a depth of more than a foot in the first heavy fall and that the earth has absorbed and will absorb a great deal of moisture.

March has often been a wild month of cold weather, heavy winds and snow deep enough to blockade traffic on highways and railways and country sideroads. So as the tradition associated from time immemorial with March is that if the month comes in like a lion it will go out like a lamb or vice versa, much interest is taken in the first days so that contrariwise it may be possible to forecast what the end of the month will be.

March is the month of the crack-up of winter, of the sounds of running water. It brings the signs of reviving life, it is the time of sap flow and sometimes the season of maple syrup and sugar, the making of which is in itself an idyllic task, carried out in the open after the stormy season and snow-filled woods of winter.

Churchill's Speech

Prime Minister Churchill's latest address in the Commons was heralded the day before its delivery as likely to last two hours and so approach ten thousand words in length and with the statement that it was his own authorship entirely for he has no editors nor "ghost writers." This speech like every other address of his bore the unmistakable touch of Mr. Churchill himself and like everything he does it shows the thoroughgoing nature of its author. He is qualified by gifts of all kinds, humor, wit, ability to marshal facts and words of impressive array, a mind of the most extensive range, sympathy with life and knowledge not only of present day events but with a fine sense of the lessons of history as a source for knowledge. So all these gifts combine to make him in very truth a man of destiny in the finest sense, ready for the supreme task he has taken in the past five years especially and in fact all through his busy life. A man of fitness for the highest office with his ability to administer and to mould the events of history, he was ready for the exalted position his people and Empire gave him, he has performed a giant's task with unrivalled success for the heavy duties which rested upon him; he has been an inspiration in the councils of the Government and in the leadership he gave the Allied world and in his stout courage. And by the expression of his thoughts in the noblest English of the day he has inspired the souls of all lovers of freedom and has been the terror of the international law-breakers, Japan and Germany.

His fluency in language, his knowledge of history and of ways of men have made him a leader of great action and power, a leader of his generation in the world and a leader of leaders in his love for freedom and justice.

His speeches are thoroughness itself in their content and though they have been the result of great care they have all the grace and sweep of great oratory. He is the greatest master by reason of his possession of great intellectual gifts and by his knowledge of man and of the art of public speaking in his day and for the historians of the future his addresses will have untold value for their truthfulness and completeness. They are the work of a master statesman and a master orator combined.

His ability in exercising care and patience has been one of the reasons for the success of his life and of the great benefit he has conferred upon the world through his leadership of Britain through the storm and stress of this Second World War. Those who have difficulty in writing can understand a little of the great care that these addresses of his require. They are no doubt destined for a high place in the historic record of Britain, the Empire and the world he has done much to free from the menace of the conspirators and aggressors. The address meant much work on his part. It is like a file of ten columns of newspaper type or about a page and a quarter of ordinary news type without counting headings.

The speech has the freshness and inspiration of having been spoken on the moment. He knows the importance of the human voice and of the orator even in this modern world. Many men's prepared speeches are rather failures, lacking inspiration but not so Mr. Churchill's for he heeds the artistic impulse. No careless word falls from his lips. Even his repartee on occasions shows the rich mind and high sense of comedy and humor.

In his speeches he has made a definite contribution to future generations of historians. Those men of the future will have the weighing of every one of this period's of history and the Churchill speeches and those of Mr. Roosevelt will have a high place in the making of that record of history. These two men, both with facility in utterance, the one, Churchill, a world figure as leaders and as spokesmen of democracy. Mr. Churchill will no doubt be found to have done something even of the writing of history in which the people of this day are privileged to read or to hear and to know. The old Greek and Roman orators like Demosthenes and Cicero had no such audience and readers as these great statesmen have today. The ancient orators were limited in the range of their audience but the world knows the voices of Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt and also of Mussolini. Many persons living in this era of the Second World War have been privileged to know something of the course of the war through its leaders and their interpretation of events, a privilege which some other days or times when only hearsay or choice bits of their speeches were passed from one person to another. These greater leaders are living in the modern world so different from Rome and Greece, they live in a world that is not circumscribed by lack of inventions and the limits of ruling classes such as marked the ancient world. Today by newspapers, by radio, by television, by radio the millions of free mankind know what is taking place and so their great leaders' words become familiar.

World Leaves Mr. Wells Behind

(The Recorder, London, Eng.)

Mr. H. G. Wells has taken to his pen again. He says the world is finished with Royalties, Mr. Wells as an author made so much money out of royalties of another world that he can now spend his time trying to destroy the system under which he prospered. The trouble with H. G. is that he kept on prophesying scientific miracles in an age which outdated his prophecies before the ink was dried, the world simply left him behind. He wrote "The Invisible Man" and has become "The Forgotten Man."

Carefree

(St. Louis Post Dispatch)

From Kansas City comes the happy news that a citizen of substance, standing at the head of the stairs in the Union National Bank the other day, did something gay and wonderful. He stepped on the banisters and slid down. We take this as a good augury, like jonquils, or bluebirds. There are, it often seems, far too many people content with coming down banisters, or riding elephants in the circus, or throwing eggs into electric fans or jumping over fences without touching.

JUST FOLKS

THE MISER

There was a man who feared that he
Would some day come to poverty.
He worried early, worried late,
Lest need should be his distant fate
And so, since fire is burning gold,
All winter long his rooms were cold.

He frowned on comfort; scorned delight;
Held spending wrong and saving right.
He kept his children from the joys
That life in childhood's various toys.
And through long years of misery went
To cling to coins he should have spent.

Instead of love he gathered hate;
Lost friends till none approached his gate.
He jettisoned all forms of pride,
Threw all that marks good men aside,
Lived meanly through life's longest span
Merely to be a rich, old man.

Pyle Says Marianas a Paradise But the Monotony Gets Tiresome

Ernie Pyle is with the Navy in the far Pacific. This article was written en route.

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Marianas Islands —(Delayed)— You may wonder why we have American troops at all here in the Marianas Islands, since they are 1500 miles away from the Philippines, China or Japan itself.

Well, it's because in this Pacific war of vast distances the islands have to make gigantic bases at each group of islands we take, in order to build up supplies for the next jumping for future invasions farther on.

The Marianas happen to be a bit of ground in the big Western Pacific stuff can go either west or north from here. Whoever sits in the Marianas can fly to Nippon, the Philippines, China or Japan itself.

Well, it's because in this Pacific war of vast distances the islands have to make gigantic bases at each group of islands we take, in order to build up supplies for the next jumping for future invasions farther on.

The Marianas happen to be a bit of ground in the big Western Pacific stuff can go either west or north from here. Whoever sits in the Marianas can fly to Nippon, the whole wide web of the war.

Thus the Marianas are becoming a heart of the Pacific war. Our naval and military leaders make no bones about it, for the Japs know it anyhow, but they're too far away to do anything about it.

The Marianas are both thrilling and engaging right now. Scores of thousands of troops of all kinds are here. Furious building is going on. Planes arrive on schedule from all directions as though into a Chicago Airport—only they've come thousands of miles over water. Convoys unload unbelievable tonnages.

These islands will hum throughout the war and they will never return to their former placid life, for we are building on almost every inch of useable land.

Peoples in staggering quantities are being stacked up against the future use. You can take your pick of K-rated bombers, bombs, and you'll find enough of either to feed a city build one, or have it up.

Fleets can base here between engagements. Combat troops come here. Other troops come back to rest. Great hospitals are set up for our future wounded. Fleetless cruise the islands. Trucks bumper to bumper, dash forward as though they were on the Western Front. Concert halls burn almost every night into four-lane meadam highways for military traffic.

There is no blackout in the islands. If raiders come the lights are turned off, but they seldom come and you can't imagine such a pretty safe place now.

There are no Hawaiian airstrips are in operation and others are being laid. The Marianas are the seat of control of these bombers from which will grow and grow and grow.

Thousands of square tents, thousands of curved steel Quonset huts, thousands of huge, permanent warehouses and office buildings dot the islands.

Lights burn all night and the roar of bulldozers, the rattle of jackhammers and the clatter of hammers is constant. The air is filled constantly with the stillness that dwelt amidst this greenery for so many centuries.

Ships are lined up in a chain running due north and south. They string out a total distance of more than 400 miles. We are on the southern end.

We hold only three islands but they are the biggest and the only three that count. The other islands are completely "neutralized" by our occupancy of these three.

There are a few Japs living on some of the others, but there's nothing they can do to harm us. The islands we haven't bothered with are small and worthless. Most of them have no inhabitants at all. The Marianas we took are Guam, Tinian and Saipan. Guam had been ours for many years before Japan took it away from us just after Pearl Harbor. Tinian and Saipan had been Japanese since the last war. We took the whole batch at once.

Guam is the biggest, and southernmost. Tinian and Saipan are right together, 120 miles north of Guam. You can fly up there in less than an hour and our transport planes shuttle back and forth several times daily on regular schedule. Northern Third Of Iwo Jima Still Held by Japanese

Guam, March 1 — (AP) — All but the northernmost third of rocky little Iwo Jima was in American hands today as the Marines, their special assignment accomplished, flew transport planes flown from the Marianas, fought to clear the vital central plateau.

Prime Headlines said the 3rd Division already had moved the greater part its places and were moving downhill for the final time since the invasion began 11 days ago.

The battle for the pillbox-studded central plateau was termed a decisive operation by Maj.-Gen. Graves B. Erskine, whose 3rd Division Marines overran the main village of Motoyama, just beyond the captured central airfield, in a gain of several hundred yards yesterday.

They reached a third airfield, Motoyama No. 3 which was under construction when the Americans landed Feb. 19.

Opposition continued stiff in all sectors. The enemy, short of water and supplies, tried more infiltration into the Marine lines and was driven off.

By 6 p. m. Monday, 4,784 enemy dead had been counted, but that toll was not complete.

Only 10 prisoners had been captured — an indication of the third of the reason for the rule of occupied 750 miles south of Tokyo.

Ernie Pyle is with the Navy in the far Pacific. This article was written en route.

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Marianas Islands —(Delayed)— You may wonder why we have American troops at all here in the Marianas Islands, since they are 1500 miles away from the Philippines, China or Japan itself.

Well, it's because in this Pacific war of vast distances the islands have to make gigantic bases at each group of islands we take, in order to build up supplies for the next jumping for future invasions farther on.

The Marianas happen to be a bit of ground in the big Western Pacific stuff can go either west or north from here. Whoever sits in the Marianas can fly to Nippon, the Philippines, China or Japan itself.

Well, it's because in this Pacific war of vast distances the islands have to make gigantic bases at each group of islands we take, in order to build up supplies for the next jumping for future invasions farther on.

The Marianas happen to be a bit of ground in the big Western Pacific stuff can go either west or north from here. Whoever sits in the Marianas can fly to Nippon, the whole wide web of the war.

Thus the Marianas are becoming a heart of the Pacific war. Our naval and military leaders make no bones about it, for the Japs know it anyhow, but they're too far away to do anything about it.

The Marianas are both thrilling and engaging right now. Scores of thousands of troops of all kinds are here. Furious building is going on. Planes arrive on schedule from all directions as though into a Chicago Airport—only they've come thousands of miles over water. Convoys unload unbelievable tonnages.

These islands will hum throughout the war and they will never return to their former placid life, for we are building on almost every inch of useable land.

Peoples in staggering quantities are being stacked up against the future use. You can take your pick of K-rated bombers, bombs, and you'll find enough of either to feed a city build one, or have it up.

Fleets can base here between engagements. Combat troops come here. Other troops come back to rest. Great hospitals are set up for our future wounded. Fleetless cruise the islands. Trucks bumper to bumper, dash forward as though they were on the Western Front. Concert halls burn almost every night into four-lane meadam highways for military traffic.

There is no blackout in the islands. If raiders come the lights are turned off, but they seldom come and you can't imagine such a pretty safe place now.

There are no Hawaiian airstrips are in operation and others are being laid. The Marianas are the seat of control of these bombers from which will grow and grow and grow.

Thousands of square tents, thousands of curved steel Quonset huts, thousands of huge, permanent warehouses and office buildings dot the islands.

Lights burn all night and the roar of bulldozers, the rattle of jackhammers and the clatter of hammers is constant. The air is filled constantly with the stillness that dwelt amidst this greenery for so many centuries.

Ships are lined up in a chain running due north and south. They string out a total distance of more than 400 miles. We are on the southern end.

We hold only three islands but they are the biggest and the only three that count. The other islands are completely "neutralized" by our occupancy of these three.

There are a few Japs living on some of the others, but there's nothing they can do to harm us. The islands we haven't bothered with are small and worthless. Most of them have no inhabitants at all. The Marianas we took are Guam, Tinian and Saipan. Guam had been ours for many years before Japan took it away from us just after Pearl Harbor. Tinian and Saipan had been Japanese since the last war. We took the whole batch at once.

Guam is the biggest, and southernmost. Tinian and Saipan are right together, 120 miles north of Guam. You can fly up there in less than an hour and our transport planes shuttle back and forth several times daily on regular schedule. They have to make a "dog-leg" around the island of Rota, about half way up, for there are still Japs on it with 50-calibre machine guns, and they'll shoot at you.

THOSE ANDY INSTITUTIONS

Recently you criticized hospital with supreme contempt for any delivery rooms for prohibiting relatives to be present at times of delivery. I think you made a brash statement when you said such exclusion or relatives is only used by questionable or shady institutions. I know for a fact . . . Nevertheless I enjoy your column. It is both entertaining and informative. Liked particularly your apology for your "boner" concerning the pneumococcus treatment of tuberculosis.

(C. P.)

Without digging up the matter copy to show precisely what I said in numerous references to the hospital delivery room I am certain I have not said any such thing here or elsewhere. Had I said what you mean I would have said such a rule is enforced only or used only in shady institutions, not "only used." Moreover, I have never argued that anybody's relatives, neighbors, or fellow citizens should be present at time of delivery. I have said that is my opinion, and it is the patient whose her husband should be present with her throughout delivery. And I say here that I doubt the reliability or safety of any hospital or clinic known to maintain that excludes or attempts to exclude the husband from the delivery room.

From what I have seen of hospitals, good, bad and indifferent, as medical student, intern, and physician, patient and visitor, I believe the reason for the rule excluding the husband from the delivery room is due to the fact that part of the people running the institution to avoid lawsuits for malpractice brought by patients or their relatives for grave infractions of rules and other sins of carelessness and neglect committed by them.

Don't tell me—that it would be unsanitary or that it would increase the risk of infection, puerperal infection, if the husband is permitted to be present at the birth. That is absurd, especially in view of the fact that the worst infections excluding the husband so often have originated in cases of students —students of nursing, medicine—attend the confinement, not to mention, medical practitioners, visiting firemen, superintendents stcetera running in and out Bleeding was the cure-all in the 18th century and the early part of the 19th; but Thomas Jefferson, who owned many slaves, wrote in the contracts with his overseers a provision that they could not bleed any slave.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Caleb Cushing, a member of President Pierce's cabinet, was the first attorney general of the United States who did not practice law privately on the side. Crampton, the British minister to Washington, was dismissed for recruiting men for the British army during the Crimean War. Cushing, attorney general, conducted the case. The British minister was given his passports and the incident was closed.

Cushing served as a member of the supreme court of Massachusetts for several months in 1853. Justice Chief Justice Shaw said: "When he took the bench, we didn't know what to do with him. Now we don't know what to do without him."

The constitution of the United States is the shortest ever drafted and anywhere mention slavery by name.

But before anything could be done about it, they had the rifle at the ground in front of him, and began salaaming up and down like a weshipper before an idol.

The Jap later said that he had been hunting for food for some body without a rifle to give himself away, and finally figured out that the surest way to find an unarmed person was to completely "hidden." isn't that cute?

On another island, there were many of the Japanese that we could have committed. But all they ever did was to come down at night and move their positions and our engineers had lined up for the next day's movement of troops.

There is another story of a Jap who didn't take to the hills like the rest, but who stayed for weeks right in the town of Garapan, capital and usiated section of the island, right under the noses of our troops.

He hid in the bushes just a few feet from the main entrance where our Marianas walked daily. They found him later, that he even used their officers' outdoor toilet right after they got through, and raided their garbage cans for food.

There was a Jap prison enclosure out there, with a barbed wire fence of the bushes, he studied the treatment the Japanese prisoners were getting, watched how they ate, and decided to see if they were dwindling away from starvation.

And then one day he came out and gave himself up. He said he had convinced himself they were going to treat him all right, so he was ready to surrender.

And here's another one. An American officer was idly sitting on an outdoor hot-table one evening after work, philosophically studying the ground, as men will do.

Suddenly he was startled. Startled is a mild word for it. He says he was, caught with his pants down, so to speak, and in front of him stood a Jap with a rifle.

Notes From St. Petersburg, Florida

By NELLIE ARTHUR

St. Petersburg, Fla.—Why do so many people come to St. Petersburg? Why do they come year after year? Why are they loath to go on when the season is over? Is it the general characteristics of a tourist city I tend to give it much of its charm. No factory whistles disturb your sleep in the early dawn. No noisy traffic of large trucks and big vehicles disturbs the streets during the day. No rushing through life just for as you pass leisurely along the main street. At 7 a.m. the chiming bells of the big red brick Methodist Church across from the park peal forth over the city the tunes of well-known hymns. Sharp at six o'clock the sirens send the traffic on the streets become less and less. By nine o'clock the benches on Central Avenue become almost deserted. Small groups are gathered about the entrances of the theatres. Those frequenters of the park who enjoyed its coolness during the day have long since gone home. Quiet and quietness reigns over the city during the late evening and the long hours of the night.

People come back to this place year after year, attracted by the many points of interest in the surrounding country. There are good paved roads leading out of the city in every direction so that, if you have a car, you can drive out a few miles and see interesting and beautiful spots. You can drive south on Fourth Street and by turning aside from the main highway for a short distance through groves of pine and oak, you come upon a fine residential section of artistic homes and terraced grounds. You can drive out the broad paved street called Lakeview Avenue and come to the pretty village of Gulfport on Boca Ciega Bay which has a long white municipal pier extending far out into the bay at the sides of which the fishing launches are moored. Here at five o'clock when the boats come in, you view with interest the large catches of fish, sometimes vast, unloaded upon the dock while the pelicans and gulls fly about and perch on the top of the big round posts at which the boats are moored. Here at Gulfport there is a large casino in which the different state societies hold their dances during the winter season. It has a beautiful smooth floor and is in fact a dance hall also. Near the casino is a large park with playground of white sand, fitted with tables and benches under canopies thatched with palm leaves.

If you wish to drive farther than Gulfport, you can follow the Gulf Boulevard past the Pasadena Golf Course and the Florida Military Academy which was originally an hotel built in the boom days. It was called the Rolyat Hotel from its owner Mr. Taylor, Rolyat is the name Taylor spelt backwards. It is built in the Spanish style with corner towers and central doorway. It is built around a courtyard in which are flowering plants and paved walks and a whiting well. Just beyond the Military Academy you pass over the wide Corey Causeway to the long point of land which stretches down the west coast of Florida below Clearwater. You can drive south along the narrow peninsula and past the large Don Cesar Hotel which a couple of years ago the government bought for a soldiers' convalescent home at the price of $440,000. A little farther on, you pass through the village of Pass a grille which is a tourist and fishing resort. Then, when you turn north around the point you see the broad Gulf of Mexico before you, its aquamarine blue waters rolling in peacefully on a broad beach of white sand, where bathers disport themselves in the water or lie stretched out on the warm sand. Visitors are strolling up and down the sand gathering shells or resting on the wide porches of the casino or eating luncheon in the coffee shop. Pass a grille was a little village north the way you came and, instead of going over the Corey causeway to St. Petersburg, you can drive on up the peninsula and pass through a small settlements called the Gulf Beaches. First there is Treasure Island with its casino and cottages, then John's Pass a haven of fishermen, where as its name implies, there is a break in the land and the waters of the Gulf flow through to Boca Ciega Bay. This is where they get the big ones. Then, as you drive farther north, you pass through the two settlements called Redington Beach and Madeira Beach. At Redington Beach there is a large luxurious hotel called "The Tides Hotel." It has been recently sold for $400,000. Then you pass the Veterans' Home called "Bay Pines" and cross the Seminole Bridge and go back into the city by one of four main highways.

The waterfront is a great attraction as all times, especially the municipal pier which cost a million dollars and extends a mile out into Tampa Bay. The large casino at the end of the pier has a tower room fitted with chairs and tables for picnic parties and around the wall are many booths where souvenirs, shell work, gifts needle work and other interesting things are sold. The upper room has a dance hall in the centre surrounded by a corridor fitted with seats in front of the windows from which you can look far out on the bay and see

Prices Skyrocket in Wartime Brazil

It's a wonderful country where you grow your own orchids in the backyard and a dozen calla lilies cost 15 cents. This is Brazil which according to American-born Mrs. Joaquin J. Xavier of Sao Paulo, is a place that American and Canadian tourists will want to visit after the war, writes Jean Parker in Montreal Gazette.

In an interview Mrs. Xavier's wife, husband is a member of the firm of Xaviers Francisco Matarazzo, chants in Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, took down the poor-est of Brazilians could afford to buy in their homes. A dozen roses sold at 50 cents, and even the poor-est of children could be grown in the back-yard and turned up in the fine race when in bloom. The largest purple orchids which were not the rarest variety sold at 75 to 80 cents. A good-sized spray of small yellow orchids could be bought for the dinner table at 20 to 35 cents.

Clothing has risen and gone up because of a shortage of cloth but domestically — manufactured pure silk stockings were selling at $1.35 to $2.50. Nylon stockings, shipped into the country at the beginning of the war, were no longer available.

Wages for domestic servants had gone up since the beginning of the war but were still incredibly low in comparison to similar wages in North America. A good cook was paid $15 monthly; a nurse, $30; chauffeur, $30-$35; and a maid, $12. "When we arrived in Brazil eight years ago," Mrs. Xavier pointed out, "cooks were getting $8.50 monthly . . . wages for domestic servants, have gone up proportionately."

Shopping for the household supply of fresh vegetables and fruit was done twice weekly in an open air market. When cook went out to do her household shopping, she was always accompanied by a little boy who carried her shopping basket. At the nearest emporium, or Mrs. Brazil... she bought her "drys and wets" or sauces and spices. Here she also got the wax with which the floors must be polished every week to prevent insects from getting into the woodwork.

The chief diet of most Brazilians, Mrs. Xavier said, was rice and beans. With the exception of produc-tion of coffee so large, the normal consumption of coffee was so high as to limit-tastes per day. Brazilians drank their coffee without cream and with a half cup of sugar.

Domestic ready-made clothes and furniture were not of the best quality. Consequently most people had their clothes and furniture custom-made. Before the war better clothing was imported from France, the United States and England but today shipping difficulties made their importation practically impossible. Because of the lack of shipping space, new textile plants had been started and many new industries such as had other manufacturing concerns had been started.

Food and clothing prices had skyrocketed. One commodity on which there had been an attempt to establish a ceiling was meat. Otherwise was available only for automobiles used in essential industries and for those collecting coffee. Some of the good crops from the interior of the country. Private automobiles were equipped with charcoal-burners.

Murray Canal — Miss Jennie Pindall and Mrs. A. Pindall spent the dinner hour on Saturday with Mrs. C. Plichett.

Miss Olive Innis and Mrs. Geoge Innis of Brighton spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. M. Innis.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Weese, Smithfield, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. E. Lauder.

Word has been received by Mrs. F. Moran that her son Walter who was reported missing in action, presumed dead. He lost his life over Germany on November 4.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Wallie spent Thursday evening with Mr. and Mrs. N. Innis.

Mr. A. Pindall is confined to his home with a broken ankle. A few weeks ago a large block of snow-ice rolled against it. It was found out by X-ray on Saturday that the bone was broken and had to be put in a cast.

Miss Laura Tackaberry of Trenton spent Sunday at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Plichett spent the distance great ocean steamers passing on their course into the harbour of Tampa, 30 miles farther north, or nearer at hand sail boats slowly drifting or motor boats speeding along. The gulls and ducks and pelicans at the pier are very interesting to strangers. The little black and white wild ducks swim about and come close to the pier and strive with each other to get the sand cure the small pieces of food which people throw to them. The gulls while flying will snatch pieces of bread out of the outstretched hands of those who feed them. The pelicans will sail majestically by the fishermen and greedily grasp the small fish which are given to them. They seem to be on the look out for round timbers but awake to sudden life when a fish is caught. The fishermen have to watch them when they bring in a good sized fish for they will try to seize it in their powerful bills.

Sometime ago Mrs. Fawn Fisher and Miss Margaret Hayes visited the Turner Sunken Gardens out Fourth Street and also called at the home of Mr. C. M. Reid on 31st Avenue North. They described to us the wonderful tropical flowers of the Turner Gardens also the beautiful shrubs and flowering bushes around Mr. Reid's home. As the latter home a fine orange tree at the front door and a grapefruit tree at the back door were much admired.

Some Belleville people recently called upon Rev. and Mrs. Beamish at their apartment on Fourth Street South also upon Dr. and Mrs. Marshall at the Carlyle Hotel, all of whom are enjoying St. Petersburg.

Mrs. Pinkston is sewing every Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon for the Bundles for Britain which is under the auspices of the Daughters of the British Empire in St. Petersburg.

Mr. Pinkston has joined the Coral Society of the Half Century Club.

Present at the meeting of the Canadian Club at the Tourist Centre on Feb. 19th were the following from Belleville and vicinity: Mr. and Mrs. Pinkton; Mr. Hayes, Miss Nora Hayes and Miss M. Hayes, Mr. and Mrs. Watson Ireland from Simcoe formerly of Wellington; Mrs. Brighton; Mrs. George Weller formerly of Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. DaFoe and Mrs. Harris of Madoc; Mrs. Edith Donaldson, Mrs. Fawn Fisher and Miss Nellie Arthur.

A few days ago Mrs. Fawn Fisher and some friends enjoyed a trip in the sight-seeing motor boat "The Spray" across Tampa Bay and up the Little Manatee River. The motor boat became fast on a sand bar and they had to wait for the tide in order to proceed up the river. They saw the muddy places where the alligators come out of the jungle into the river. They had a fine fish dinner at the little town of Ruskin.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Reid recently called upon Mr. Hayes and daughters also upon Mrs. Fawn Fisher.

Again THE RED CROSS ASKS YOUR HELP TO HEAL A WAR-TORN WORLD GIVE!

● Wherever the great destroyer, War, has passed, pain, suffering and sorrow follow in its wake. Young men on the battlefield or in hospitals are tormented by sickness or wounds. Little children, mothers, aged people are homeless, hungry, cold. In every theatre of war, whole cities lie in ruins. Millions are suffering the pangs of disease, starvation and dire want.

So the Red Cross will continue to reach out a helping hand. It must heal and comfort our own sick and wounded. It must send food, clothing, medical supplies to war-torn lands.

And the Canadian Red Cross will answer this urgent call. For the Canadian Red Cross it you and your friends and your neighbors, and all the good folks up and down this fair Dominion of ours. You will send help — yes, life itself — to the stricken people of other lands. You will stand staunchly behind your Red Cross, and — GIVE!

Destitution and Want are so urgent and desperate in the liberated countries, that the Minister of National War Services asked the Red Cross, with the collaboration of the Canadian United Allied Relief Fund representing the War Charities of 11 of the United Nations, to include funds for this relief in the national appeal.

WEDDINGS

WIBBERLEY—BARLOW

The home of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Barlow, 100 Wilkins Street, was the setting for a very lovely February wedding on Saturday, the 10th at three o'clock, when Mary Simpson (Molly), Barlow, became the bride of Mr. John Frederick Barlow Wibberley, Bombardier, Royal Canadian A.F., Mountain View, son of Bombardier Lester and Mrs. Wibberley, of Toronto. Pedro W. Ferry, of Mountain View, Prince Edward County, was the officiating clergyman.

Easter lilies, ferns and roses together with tall lighted tapers throughout the rooms formed a most impressive background on the occasion. Stanley Hagerman played softly during the ceremony, and at the signing of the register he delightfully everyone with "Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiantly gowned in a Beauty rose crepe afternoon dress, embellished with lace trimming in a similar shade. She wore a dainty Dutch hat of matching lace to her dress and her flowers were a corsage of white gardenias.

Mrs. Charles McCarty, her sister's only attendant, wore a striking ensemble of daffodil yellow crepe, mated with white lace ruffles at the throat, wrists and skirt. Her accessories were chocolate brown and her corsage was of Talisman and Sweetheart roses.

Mr. Ted Wibberley attended his brother as groomsman.

A reception followed the wedding ceremony. The mother of the bride selected an Eden blue crepe afternoon gown, featuring matching accessories and corsage of American Beauty roses. Miss Winnie Wibberley, sister of the groom, wore dusky rose, mated with brown accessories and a corsage of Amerose roses.

Acting as servitors on the occasion were Isabel Smith, Peggy Townsend, Helen Belnap and Mrs. Jack Griffin.

On the wedding trip to Montreal, the bride chose for travelling a smart wool dress, black seal coat and Russian styled hat, black accessories and corsage of gardenias.

Latest in Fashions Will Be Seen in Auxiliary Show

Belleville beauty adorned in Spring habiliments that annually delight milady's eye will parade in all its feminine glory at the Fashion Show being sponsored by the Women's Royal Canadian Navy in the Capitol Theatre on March 13.

Seven models, against an Belleville's grace and charm, parted in the many smart Mountain Fashions for 1945, will demonstrate in afternoon and evening performances the styles that Canadian designers have devised for milady's morning, afternoon and evening wear this year.

Advance information has it that the show will be smooth, with a touch of sophistication and above all charmingly feminine. But this should not deter the mere male of the species from getting a preview of what the ladies will wear when Spring rolls around that alluring corner. And it may give him ideas.

Fashion's last word in things that are distinctly milady's from the tip of shining navy hats-don't be surprised feet, is the motif of the show.

Stunning frocks, soft suits, glamor-touched evening gowns, gleaming furs, smart footwear and delightful costume jewelry are but some of the things that will be seen at this dress rehearsal for the Easter Parade.

Four Handsome Frises.

Not only will fashion-hungry ladies and curious gentlemen have the opportunity to see the show, but hand what milady will wear but will also have the chance of winning four handsome prizes.

These include two lovely Green Mountain Auxiliary blankets, given by Mr. Ed. Logan of McFee's, a walnut serving tray by Mr. Ernest Pitture Shop, a Helena Rubinstein gift set by the Belleville Drug Store. Two prizes will be drawn for during the afternoon show and the remaining two at the evening performance.

Firms who have donated merchandise and other services to the show include, McNabb's Ashley, McIntosh Bros, Campbell Hats, McFee's McKeown's Drug Store, Quinlans' Beauty Parlor, Mathieson Beauty Salon and the Leeman Beauty Salon.

The proceeds of the Fashion Show will be devoted to the coffers of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, an indefatigable group of workers whose annual efforts are clearly exemplified in the modern equipment they purchase for better service of patients in the General Hospital here.

Tickets are now available from Mrs. J. D. Galloway, or any member of the Auxiliary.

Fashion Flashes

CONSERVATION IS THE REASON for the use of two fabrics, aimed at saving woolens. Thus a tailored, navy wool suit has a front of gold faille. The jacket has a clipped-in waist, double breasted buttons in V formation and full, wide revers. Skirt is gently flared.

BIG SEASON ahead for the white topper. A good looking one is in white woolen with a suede finish, with smartly flared sleeves back, snug club collar and full sleeves gathered into tight cuff bands. Topper is cut on smooth lines.

BIG TREND in the suit and jacket field seems to be in the direction of dolmans and cocoon cut with one-button closing. This is the formula used for a smartly checked jacket in yellow and gray, made with broad shoulders and easy sleeves.

MORE IMPORTANCE is achieved by the print frock this year because of the high styling accorded to its design and detail. A brilliant butterfly and blossom design in a gray crepe silk ground. Black crepe borders the neckline and short sleeves.

Bellevillians will be interested to learn of the marriage of Miss Jean Macphail, daughter of Mrs. Macphail, Toronto, and the late Mr. Macphail, to Mr. Ralph Bride, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bride, Belleville, which took place in Toronto on Saturday, February 24th.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was lovely in a floor-length gown of white satin, with a fitted bodice and full skirt. Her veil of white net was held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of white roses.

Miss Betty Bride, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, and wore a floor-length gown of pink taffeta, with a matching coronet of flowers in her hair. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Mr. Bill Bride, brother of the groom, was best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, 1 Glenwood Avenue, Toronto, where the bride received the guests, wearing a navy blue suit with white accessories, and a corsage of red roses.

Mrs. Macphail chose for the occasion a navy blue suit with white accessories, and a corsage of red roses.

Urge Statement Post-War Policy On Civil Flying

By FRASER MacDOUGALL
(CP Staff Writer)

Hamilton, Ont., March 6—(CP)—An early Federal Government announcement of post-war civil aviation policy and government operation of airports established for war-training purposes were urged in two resolutions passed here today at the concluding session of the two-day Ontario Air Conference.

The 150 delegates from 46 Ontario municipalities were unanimous in their request for announcement at "the earliest possible opportunity" as to the government's plans for operation of existing airport facilities and the extent to which it intends to establish such facilities where none exist.

Sqdn. Ldr. Basil Hoole, D. F. C., Toronto war challenged from the RCAF, and in his official of the post-war-planned light airline company as described, opposed the resolution asking the government to operate airports existing during the war or constructed under the Commonwealth Training Plan but later withdrew his opposition to the declaration unanimous.

Hoole, a native of Massey, Ont., who shot down 11 German planes as a member of the City of Windsor Spitfire Squadron in the Battle of Britain and Malta, said he thought "the government is better out of the flying game" and that returned men should have "something to do with it."

He expressed his willingness to support the resolution after C. D. Howe, Minister of Reconstruction, Parliament of Toronto, a member of the Cabinet, had definitely said the sign was to have the government maintain existing airports "as a means of supporting civil aviation and as a preparedness measure in the event of another war in the next 25 years.

The conference, which was sponsored by the Hamilton Chamber of Commerce and was attended by municipal delegates from all sections of the province, opposed the resolution asking the government to operate airports existing during the war or constructed under the Commonwealth Training Plan but later withdrew his opposition to the declaration unanimous.

Many of the municipal representatives had not been present at the afternoon session of the conference when C. P. Edwards, Deputy Minister of Transportation, answered questions on matters of civil aviation development.

Ald. Ross Leighton, chairman of the aviation committee of the Hamilton Chamber of Commerce, said in an interview last night that his organization had no thought of making any contribution at annual airfair. He said he felt it gave municipal representatives a splendid opportunity to obtain clarification on many civil aviation problems.

Move Important than Past

"These things," Mr. Attlee said, "are much more important than the past."

Prime Minister Churchill said Tuesday that most of East Prussia, Danzig and Upper Silesia would go to Poland and has declared himself in favor of shifting populations if necessary.

Herbert, Sir Arthur Salter, outstanding economic and government-al expert, told the House that attacks against Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin "will need a treaty which will be severe by comparison with the most severe terms of Versailles."

But it will be less severe than strict considerations of justice would permit," Sir Arthur, an Independent member, added.

The House was in its third day of foreign affairs debate, to be climaxed tonight by Foreign Secretary Bevin's speech on the Crimea conference and a demand for a vote of confidence.

Conduct of Vote.

The government obviously is confident that it will obtain overwhelming endorsement for the Labor policies it decided to assign to the Foreign Secretary the task of selling up in his case, rather than following an original plan of a Cabinet address by Prime Minister Churchill.

The government got a vote of confidence, as yesterday, on the Crimea conference and a demand for a vote of confidence.

Britain and U.S. Producing Speedy New Jet Planes

London, March 7 — (CP) — British jet-propelled fighter planes have been in action since late last summer, it was disclosed in the House of Commons today.

Known as the Gloster "Meteor," the plane was the first jet-propelled aircraft of the United Nations to go into action.

The Meteor was first employed by an R.A.F. fighter squadron against robot bombs Aug. 4, 1944, and downed a substantial number.

The Meteor proved to possess greatly increased speed in the pilot-less German flying bombs, and many tactical lessons were learned from these early combats," the Air Ministry announcement said.

The Meteor is the product of the Gloster Aircraft Company, and is powered by two Rolls-Royce engines. The other model was designed by the de Havilland Aircraft Company.

Although the Meteor engines excel in enormous quantities of air, the turbines suck in, they differ from the jet-propulsion units of the flying bombs and early-model jet fighters. Only under certain rare conditions does the Meteor leave a vapor trail.

R.A.F. pilots say they are easy to fly, smooth running and manoeuvre-able.

"They are really beautiful aircraft and I can assure the House that to normal flying," said a former Spitfire pilot.

"When they start up and taxi the 'scoots' make a noise exactly like an oversize vacuum cleaner. And when they take off or fly at full throttle they are almost silent. For normal aircraft, they have plenty of power and if you open up a little suddenly you get a kick in the back from your seat. Once you go into the air elevator—and faster the higher they go."

Shooting Star in Action.

Washington — (AP) — A new jet-propelled fighter — the Lockheed P-80 Shooting Star — described as the fastest airplane in the skies and having a substantial operating range, was announced today by the United States Air Forces.

The Shooting Star, now flying for more than a year and is being made under a quintic program involving four Lockheed Aircraft plants at Burbank, Calif.; the Vega Aircraft plant at Kansas City, Kan.; a Government plant at Syracuse, N.Y., and the Allison Division of General Motors.

Powered by a General Electric turbo-jet turned more powerful than any other aircraft now in production, the Shooting Star was designed to have several new features, including a pressurized cabin and "tricycle" built into any service model fighter.

Flier Home From Cairo Gets Snow Shovelling Job

Ottawa, March 5—(CP)—Wintry weary householders, who greet with groans the spectacle of neighbors tiling their driveways and sidewalks, can take heart from the example of a young unidentified R.C.A.F. flying officer who left Cairo two weeks ago and now is happily shovelling snow in the capital.

"I like snow; it's good to see the snow, and I sure need the exercise," the officer, whose name was withheld, told dumb-founded Selective Service officials when he applied for a permit.

Of five years in the R.C.A.F. he spent four overseas. He flew the mail between Canada, Britain and the Middle East.

Selective Service authorities, considering snow-shovelling the last job any one usually has, refused to give the flier other jobs—good ones, with good pay—but he just scratched his head and laughed.

"You don't understand," he said. "I'm on 30 days' leave pending discharge, and I want something to do to keep in trim. I can't play golf, but I can shovel snow."

He has a good job waiting when he gets his discharge.

Chinese Troops Nearing Lasho

Kandy, Ceylon, March 1. (AP)—Chinese troops have driven to within 18 miles of the Burma railhead at Lasho, 120 miles northeast of Mandalay, An Allied communique announced today that Japanese resistance had collapsed in that sector.

The communique said the Chinese were rapidly pursuing the enemy toward Lasho, the terminus of the railway from Mandalay.

British Empire forces meanwhile pressed their semi-circle of Irrawaddy bridgeheads closer to Mandalay. The communique said they were fighting forty miles north and 36 miles west of Mandalay after capturing five villages.

On the west coast they were approaching Dalia, 60 miles southeast of Akyab.

Appointment of a 13-man select committee to study and report to Labor-Welfare legislation for the guidance of incoming Ontario's labor laws.

J. B. Salsberg (Lab.-Prog. — Toronto — Ward), whose motion to form a Labor Relations Inquiry Committee was amended by the government, said the administration took this action "only to save itself from certain defeat in the House of any motion."

Arthur Williams (CCF—Ontario) said the C.C.F. welcomed formation of the committee and approved its powers and purpose.

Mr. Williams and A. A. MacLeod (Lib.-Prog. — Toronto Bellwoods) suggested that a "practical miner" be appointed to the Government Commission investigating the Fatal mine accident of Feb. 2, when 16 men were killed.

ST. MICHAEL'S OVERCOME EARLY LEAD OF FALCONS

Halt Red Wings Win 5-4 in Overtime From Oshawa Generals

By The Canadian Press

St. Michael's overcame St. Catharines' early lead to capture the total encounter, 6-5, of their best-of-seven series in the Junior "A" group of the O.H.A. last night in Toronto. In the other play-down series, Oshawa Kings and Oshawa Generals battled into overtime with Oshawa the visitors were able to work out a 5-4 triumph before their two straight wins in their home-of-five competitions.

Laurie Peterson grabbed the lead for the Falcons four scoring 1.54 minutes after the face-off, but Leo Gravelle notched the equalizer for St. Mikes before the end of the period and Ted Collegiano ran in five more counters after that, two in the 2nd and three in the final period.

Johnny McCormack was wild in the closing stages of the contest to notch two markers in the last minute while other scorers to find the net were Costello, Paul and Seider. Johnny Blake figured in assists on three of the goals. Tom Smelle set up the play for St. Catharines' lone tally by Peterson.

The second edition of this series will be staged at St. Catharines Saturday night.

Red Wings and Generals each scored twice in the opening stanza of their battle at Oshawa and the homesters looked good in the middle round by notching a brace without a reply. Gale tie it up with a 2-2 before the regulation finish. The remaining goal came from George Kromptich, on a pass by Bill Curtis, 2:06 of overtime.

Gale played without defenceman Pete Rebendo because of a serious cut, but had a two-goal scorer in Bill Adams, the others being collected by Pavelich, Mousseau and Kromptich. For Oshawa, Matthews twice beat the target, with Taggart and Sullivan getting a score each. Oshawa go to Gait Saturday for the second of their series.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

New York, March 1 (AP)—The Minor League threat of a "revolt"—which probably is just a threat—unless they share in naming the new baseball commissioner, brings up the question of why they have two separate and often conflicting organizations running baseball. . . . Why not just one? . . . Under the chain system, the same men operate big and little clubs. . . . The big minors probably are more closely related to the majors than to the Class D circuits, but they're outvoted in their own league and separated from the big leagues by a barrier they can't penetrate. . . . A year ago the AA circuits proposed a change in voting power within the National Association but couldn't put it over. . . . The same thing might happen to any other proposed change, but now, with a new major-minor agreement coming up and baseball in general at a low ebb, would be the logical time to revise the setup.

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 1 — (CP) — Officially there is to be no Allan Cup playoff this year. But from Quebec City, home of the 1944 Dominion senior champion, comes the voice of an old ice-lane trouper, Harry Mummery, with an idea that might be feasible.

The veteran pilot told Al (Monsieur) Heroux Sunday that the Aces are ready to suggest that they defend the cup they now hold against any challenger . . . best-two-of-three beats. Don points out that the Cup was once a challenge trophy and under the present circumstances, they would simply return to the original basis upon which Sir Montagu Allan donated the trophy.

Aces are second in the Quebec senior group, five points behind Montreal Royals and with only one game to play, while Royals still have two to go. Aces were one game the two Quebec teams that significant their willingness to travel west for a Dominion title.

If the C.A.H.A. — and the cup trustees — are willing, perhaps the Quebec coach has something. Aces say that a three game series could be played in one weekend . . . Friday night, Sunday afternoon and Monday night, if necessary. That way an eastern team would not lose too much time in playing a series while Aces might even entertain thoughts of travelling to meet the winners of a western Canada playoff.

Of course, Aces are not suggesting that the Quebec playoff be abandoned. Though they rest in second slot, they look forward to a try at retaining the Thomas O'Connell Memorial Trophy for the league championship.

Reunion:

It happened recently in a hospital in Italy. Stan (Edmonton Journal) Moher told the story to Harry Daye, scrappy little ball player-manager from the Alberta city, who was wounded in action. Harry was being wheeled into the operating room and as his stretcher proceeded down the corridor it passed another being wheeled out of the theatre.

Daye glanced across at the other soldier and, to his surprise found that it was his brother Albert, whom he had not seen in four years.

Incidentally:

Former Victoria Dominos ace sniper Lorne Ross is paying the individual scorers in the Calgary senior men's basketball league . . . Laurel (Quieto) Joliat, former starry left winger with Canadiens, working for War Assets Corporation in Ottawa . . . Fort William's Louis Natyshyn who broke into pro hockey with Chicago this week, celebrated his 21st birthday yesterday . . . Dowg (Windsor Star) Vaughan is of the opinion that at least half-dozen of the St. Michael's Junior team this year will be servicing in pro company in a couple of years . . . Montreal's Canadiens are agreed that young Howie Morenz has the makings of a pro goalie . . . Chicago Hawks pretty Bill Tobin has changed his mind about a hockey school at Calgary this spring. Instead Bill will assemble about 30 of the east's best juvenile stars from April 1 to 7. The best of the lot will return to train with Hawks in October . . .

Hockey Roundup

Just to prove how costly a penalty can actually be in this present-day hockey set-up, it is Max Marshall's late third period trip of Ray Hamilton, Prigon and Perras, who picked up the greater number of the scoring points. . . . The Borden Airmen now meet the winner of the Centralia-Mount Hope series in the Command finals at Toronto. . . . Added Attraction

Two former members of the Belleville Hockey Club, recently returned from overseas, are receiving sensational flights over Berlin, will be honored by the club at the game tonight's Junior O.H.A. play-off between the Kingston Frontenacs and Belleville. They are F/O. Dick Hamilton, brother of Centreman Donnie Barrett and formerly with the Butterfly Juniors, and F/O. Dick Beare, who was secretary of the local juniors before enlisting in the R.C.A.F.

Down in Kingston the hockey fans think highly of Coach Jackson's Victoria and are willing to wager any amount the Limestone City kid will take Toots Holway's charges out in two straight games. However, the local junkey dirty feel to their present lofty perch without a struggle and will be another close second ten straight junior O.H.A. title. Tonight's game is a matter of fact the locals haven't been playing since Jan. 19th last. Fine enough the Vics, have been playing in the middle of all season, but the "Little Six" wasn't exactly the poorest junior group in Ontario either. It should be another of those old time Kingston-Belleville hockey battles to please all and sundry tonight.

Boucher's Version.

Much speculation is thrown on the kind of hockey Howie Morenz used to play in an interview obtained by Billy Reay of the Ottawa Journal from Billy Boucher who used to be lineman of the Stratford Flash. Here is the Westwick article: There was a twinkle in Billy Boucher's eye when he stopped us the other night and said "I see where Dick Irvin has conceded that Howie Morenz would probably have made the present Canadian team. And Joliat might fit in, too, I see". The twinkle vanished as Boucher pondered the remark. "Maybe Irvin is just trying to kid the boys and get a rise out of them. But then he might be leveling, because there isn't a week goes by that they aren't comparing Howie and Richard. I get a laugh out of some of the things they say. . . . I get more of a laugh out of it when I think about some of those nights on Canadiens' ice with Howie and Joliat. It's a laugh now, but it wasn't funny for a wingman trying to keep up with Howie". Boucher, who was a speedster himself along the right wing, thinks pretty highly of this present Canadien team. He drops a hint that the coachership gets a chance to watch them. He has said it, quite a bit of attention to Richard, studied his style and speed, and thinks that is the secret of it.

"I would never want to be put down as the kind of guy who figures the scoring powers of his day were the tops and can't see anything in later years", says Billy, pen on the Journal story. "But when some people start telling you that Richard is not only as fast, but faster than Howie, I'm afraid I'm saying a word. Well, as I say, I had the job once of having to keep up with Howie and I know my eyes have gone completely, Richard doesn't travel as fast as Howie did". Billy laughs at the suggestion of those who have seen Howie only in recent years and says, "He could do that, but he was a terrible loafer. When I was on the wing with him and he'd watch him like a hawk. We did plenty of back-checking and a wingman with Morenz always had to keep his eye peeled for when Howie would nail a puck. I used to spot him leaning on the puck and I'd immediately bear down as hard as I could to get under steam. Because sure enough he'd come pounding up there and leave you sniffs behind if you didn't. You had to do that even when he started to breeze. But if you got him making one of those loops, you'd just about have anyone you'd be along with him. If you didn't get away yourself you'd be gone, and you'd look pretty bad trying to stay with the play".

NEW MAJOR-MINOR BALL AGREEMENT NOW COMPLETED

"Numerous Changes" Will be Introduced at Meeting to be Held Later

Chicago, March 1 — (AP) — A proposed new major-minor league baseball agreement and revisions in major-minor league rules have been completed by the minors' 10-man committee which is seeking a new deal from its big baseball brothers.

Tom Richardson, president of the Eastern League and chairman of the committee which yesterday concluded a three-day meeting, said a seven-man sub-committee would make recommendations for "numerous changes" in a meeting with representatives of the American and National Leagues in Chicago within the next couple of months.

Richardson refused to itemize the "numerous changes" which the committee had recommended and said he believed the next move should come from the major leagues. The committee earlier had demanded that they be given a voice in the naming of a successor to the late Commissioner K. M. Landis.

The group followed the majors' lead in removing some of the arbitrary powers of baseball's big league clubs, for study, Richardson said. The new major-minor agreement, to be voted on at the minor league meeting in December, also must be ratified by the majors.

CHICAGO ENTRY SIGNS D. HANLEY

Chicago, March 1 (AP)—The all-American football conference—a proposed post-war pro grid project—had its fifth coach in its fold today, with Chicago's entry signing Lt.-Col. Richard D. (Dick) Hanley, former college grid mentor, now in the Marines.

John L. Keeshin, Chicago trucking executive who owns the Chicago franchise, announced signing of Hanley in Los Angeles.

The Kibitzer

When partner is confusing, perhaps he is not cracked. He may be using a system not exactly known to you concisely, I almost said to me, but close, you know precisely, the only blows about it.

The final contract states the exact number of tricks your pair expects to take. If two reach them, each partner merely reveals the exact number of tricks he holds. Let me remind you how.

The opening bidder admits a minimum of five tricks. Before his first response, partner is assumed to have a hand of two tricks. Thereafter, one more trick is shown by each raise.

To know how many tricks you have, simply count one trick for each ace and one for each short card (each card short of three in every short suit).

See how that works in this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠A K J 6 5	♠Q 4 2
♥7 6 4 3	♥2 9 5
♦A 2	♦5 3 2
♣Q 6	♣A K 6 5 3

South opens with one spade, showing five tricks. The response from north is two clubs, a raise in number over one spade. So, it consumes a third trick (a trick more than the basis of two).

South then bids two spades, which is only a raise over two clubs. So, south does not yet show more than the five tricks first admitted.

The second bid by north is three spades. This is a raise over two spades and shows another trick. Therefore, north is now known to have four tricks.

The third bid by south is four spades, being a raise over three spades, it shows one more trick to south. With the five announced in earlier bids, south reveals his six tricks.

Six in south and four in north are ten tricks. The contract of four spades calls for the taking of ten tricks. And there they are.

With troubles enough, don't make your bridge tough.

RANGERS CAN HELP STANDING BY DEFEATING HAWKS

Chicago May Abandon Former Tactics and Play Orthodox Hockey

By EDDIE LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The National Hockey League problem facing New York Rangers today—whether to meet Chicago Black Hawks is largely psychological, it's psychological, that is, unless the Chicago Board of stategy calls for new tactics.

The Hawks recently have been prone to grab a lead as soon as possible than drop back to defensive hockey, remaining mainly of belting the puck—and opposing players—almost at random. You can almost see the frustration it causes the opposition and the club has had a measure of success with it although they have not been able to beat Bill Durnan, the ace of the N.H.L. play-offs.

Hawks abandoned the system for most of Tuesday's game against Toronto Maple Leafs on instructions from Johnny Gottselig who is handling the club in the absence of Manager-Coach Paul Thompson absent on a scouting trip. The result was that Chicago defencemen carried the puck more and the game ended in a 3-3 tie.

So if New York Rangers hurdle the psychological obstacle they may still have to overcome considerable hockey ability in Hawks if they want to step over Boston Bruins into the fourth-place play-off slot. The Hawks, five points back, of the Rangers, have been getting nowhere a terrific pace all season and victory would keep their almost extinguished hopes of reaching the play-offs alive. But even at that they have only a slight chance of their remaining games after tonight, two are against Montreal Canadiens, one against Detroit and one against Leafs.

Dempsey Apologizes For Omitting Sharkey

Hoochuh, March 1.—(AP)—Coastguard director Jack Dempsey apologized for leaving former heavyweight champion Jack Sharkey out of his list of the 10 best fighters of the battle fleet.

"Sharkey belongs in that list, and I just don't know how I happened to overlook him," the ex-champ of time world heavyweight champ told newsmen yesterday.

Dempsey's list of the 10 best was given to the Associated Press before he left Washington yesterday on a tour of coastguard bases and ships which may take him as far as India.

Omission of Sharkey's name, announced Johnny Buckley, manager of Sharkey, who now is his partner in business.

The addition of Sharkey will make the list look more lumpy. Dempsey failed to scratch any of his previous selections.

Hall defeated George Hanson's Kingsmith rink 11-6 and Morris beat A. R. Tarleton of Hamilton 8-5 to get into the finals.

Japs To Form A New Party

San Francisco, March 1 — (AP)— Domei agency reported today that Admiral Seiho Kobayashi has resigned from the cabinet to lead the movement for a new totalitarian party to replace the powerful Imperial Rule Assistance Political Society which Kobayashi heads.

Simultaneously Domei reported that the Diet probably would be reconvened early in March in a bid to move toward formation of a new party.

U.S. broadcasts recorded by the Federal Communications Commission at Portland said both moves were linked with the government's fear of the war situation.

The new party, for which politicians have been agitating for months, is intended to guide Japan's war effort and establish greater unity among the Japanese.

Kobayashi, who was appointed minister without portfolio last Dec. 19, succeeded Admiral Yonai yesterday after discussing the formation of a new party with Emperor Hirohito. Koiso formally accepted the resignation, today.

ONE RECORD SCORED IN THREE GAMES IN AMERICAN LOOP

Cleveland Barons Add to Lead by 11-4 Win Over Providence

(By The Canadian Press)

American Hockey League marksmen staged a scoring spree last night and hammered 33 goals in three games, with Cleveland Barons adding to their lead in the western division with an 11-4 victory over Providence Reds. Pittsburgh Hornets stretched their second place lead with a 10-3 triumph over St. Louis Flyers, while Buffalo Bisons, eastern division leaders, defeated Indianapolis Capitals 4-1.

Lee Cunningham and Earl Dardenne powered the Cleveland victory with three goals each, while Lou Trudel was the only Providence Reds to score. Cunningham's brother Dick Adolph, Leo Gravelle and Roy Kelly, Freeman Jack, Rollie Forget, Bill Morrison and George Patterson scored for Providence. The loss was a hard blow to Providence's hopes of making the A.H.L. play-offs.

Over in Pittsburgh, the Hornets piled up their total of 10 with two goals coming from Tony Hemmerling, Jimmy Jamieson and Dede Sidenko. Rollie Rossignol, Deb Wharton, Ken Schiulis and Marcel Bonneau added one each, while the Flyers' goals were scored by Fred Herggrt, Vic Lynn and Naktua Smith.

In Buffalo, the Bisons introduced Bill (Legs) Fraser, fifth Buffalo goalie this season, to the fans and he made a good impression, holding the visiting Capitals to one goal, by Ted Garvin. Fraser, on Saturday's discharge, is six feet, three inches tall, and the Bisons are counting on him to help them down the stretch drive.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Mar. 1 (CP)—A Canadian Mosquito set what is believed to be a record for high-altitude combat when it soared to 27,000 feet to shoot down a German plane.

The Mosquito, Allan Sherrett, Kenora, Ont., pilot, and Flt.-Lt. Ken MacKenzie, Hamilton, Ont., navigator, sighted the enemy—a Junkers 188 Transport. It was then at 15,000 feet but before the chase was over both planes were more than two miles above the ground.

The Lynx Squadron Mosquito reached a true air speed of 380 miles an hour in catching up to the enemy machine, a new and faster edition of the JU88, and Sherrett's cannon fire caused a "vivid explosion." It blew up on hitting the ground and an R.A.F. crew verified the destruction.

The Mosquito used most of its fuel gaining the stiff climb and long chase and was forced to make an emergency landing at an American airfield in France with empty shooting zero.

Sherrett and MacKenzie, in point of years, are the youngest crew on the squadron. Sherrett is 20 and his navigator 21. The father of Sherrett, a veteran pilot who did beachhead patrols during the Normandy landings, has just retired from the R.C.A.F. after four years' service, but, most of it as chief ground instructor at Brandon, Man. He is Sqdn. Ldr. J. A. Sherrett.

Rocket and cannon-firing Beaufighters of the Canadian Buffalo Squadron sunk a small enemy merchant vessel outside Stone Fjord in Norway as Coastal Command attacked its offensive against enemy shipping.

The striking force, which consisted also of R.A.F. and New Zealand Beaufighters was led by Flt.-Lt. Waldman of Orillia, Ont. None of the fighters was shot down and of the crews injured although flying Debris damaged three of the force.

The ship was heading for shore shelter when sighted and the aircraft flew through heavy flak thrown up by the ship and by shore batteries. Cannon fire raked the vessel from bow to stern and it burst into flames as it beached. The only personnel visible when the "beachhead" ed for home was a small section of the bow stuck on rocks.

Debris and flak only damaged Waldman's aircraft, and also those flown by FO. D. E. Embury of Napanee, Ont., and FO. R. C. Keefe of Kingston, Ont.

FO. Marty Kent of (103 Hornborough St., E.) Toronto ended a three-week "dry spell" when he shot down a Focke-Wulf 190 over the Schelde Estuary, 4 JUNE, 18 was told here.

Kent, a Canadian Night-fighter Squadron pilot, was flying with FO. J. Simpson of (Osborne St.) Winnipeg, navigator with whom he scored a "damaged" several weeks ago, and their "kill" was the first by the Mosquito since then. First of the year, "it was a period of inactivity forced through bad weather and lack of German planes."

Kent opened fire from 300 feet dead astern and three terrific explosions followed. "It blinded us for a moment," Kent said. "When we could see him again he was a mass of flames. He crashed on the Schelde."

Ontario Govt. Committee To Review Labor Legislation

Premier Drew to Open Debate on Throne Speech When It Resumes

Toronto, March 1 — (CP)—There was a lull yesterday in Ontario's stormiest Legislature session in years, but confusion may flare up again today when debate on the Throne Speech resumes.

Premier Drew, scheduled to speak first, may deal with the five-point amendment to the Throne Speech, moved Tuesday by C. C. P. Carpenter, K. B. Jolliffe, The Progressive will be followed by Liberal Leader Mitchell F. Hepburn, who will lead an opening offensive against the administration since the session opened two weeks ago. Whether the Liberal leader will move an additional amendment to the Throne Speech motion has not been disclosed.

Comparative peace prevailed yesterday when the House sanctioned unanimously a 13-man select committee to review Labor Relations Legislation of the Federal Parliament and of the provinces, for the purpose of improving Ontario Labor law and to consider means of providing Labor Relations Legislation on a national scale for application at the end of the war.

Four Amendment

The committee, authorized by passing of a government amendment to a motion by J. R. Bales (Tab.-Prog. — Toronto St. Andrew) and supported by spokesmen of all non-government parties. It will begin deliberations as soon as possible and will be empowered to call any witnesses or evidence necessary to its task.

Members of the committee, comprised of representatives of all House parties, are Labor Minister Charles Daley; Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell; Planning Minister Dana Porter, William Murdoch, (PC—Sarnia South), W. A. Goodfellow (PC—Northumberland), Mr. Jolliffe, William Sligo (CCF—Windsor-Walkerville), A. Williams (CCF — Ontario), R. H. Carlin (CCF—Sudbury), F. R. Oliver (L—Grey South) R. Patterson (L — Grey North) and Mr. Salsberg.

Hepburn Supports Move

Commenting on the amendment, Mr. Salsberg said the government had moved it "only to save itself from certain defeat in the House on its own motion." The Labor-Progressive Member had asked that a select committee on labor relations be formed to make recommendations for legislative action this session.

Mr. Hepburn, supporting the move to form the committee said that when in power his party had formed a collective bargaining committee, but Col. Drew as opposition leader had refused to name a member of his party to serve on that body.

Provincial Treasurer Leslie Frost told the House he was "amazed" by Mr. Hepburn's support of collective bargaining. Never in his years of office had the Liberal leader introduced collective bargaining. Mr. Frost said, and his administration had been consistently antagonistic to unions and strikers.

Mr. Williams and A. A. MacLeod (Lab.-Prog. — Toronto Bellwoods) advocated appointment of a "practical mining man" to the government commission investigating the Feb. 2 Paymaster mine disaster. Mr. Williams said he was unsatisfied with the "no blame" verdict of a coroner's jury into the tragedy, in which 16 men were killed through breaking of a cage shaft cable.

Three Are Hanged For 'Hot Stove' Torture Killing

Fort Frances, Ont., March 1, (CP) —Pins was written on a basement jail gallows early today in Ontario's "hot stove" murder case as three men hanged for the torture slaying last July of Mrs. Viola Armstrong in her home at Flanders, Ont.

A news blackout was clamped on proceedings at the jail as the hour for the executions approached. It was learned that the last man was pronounced dead at 12.50 a.m. (C.D.T.) (1.50 E.S.T.) by Jail Surgeon Dr. W. G. Boyle, and Coroner Dr. J. R. Young. A five-man Fort Frances coroner's jury viewed the bodies.

None but authorized persons were allowed near the jail as midnight approached. Inside it was reported the three men spent their last hours reading their Bibles and talking. In a nearby, modest home, Mr. and Mrs. Young prayed for their son in his last night.

Indoor Scaffolding

The men walked a long corridor from the death cells to the gallows constructed in the basement of the jail. Information as to the time of each hanging and in what order the men went to the death was not revealed.

During the last few days before the hanging, hymns were heard echoing from the Bible house of the Kenora District jail where the men were held until three days before the hanging. Guards said the Schmidt youth brother, were doing the singing.

It was decided to erect an indoor scaffold for the executions following a protest by Fort Frances citizens against the hangings being carried out on a specially-erected cubicle on a lawn outside the jail.

A fourth man in the case, 18-year-old Eino Tiilonen, also had been sentenced to death, but had his sentence commuted to life imprisonment.

Woman's Death From Burns.

Mrs. Jamieson died in hospital July 2, 1944, from burns covering 36 per cent of her body. Before she died she told of being tortured by four men who held burning news papers to her limbs, and finally held her on a hot stove in an effort to make her reveal the hiding place of her money in her Flanders, Ont., home, 65 miles east of here.

At their trial last September, the men admitted they had gone to the woman's home in search of a large sum of money—some $40,000—which they believed hidden there. They applied the torture when they failed to find it.

The Skrzypiec brothers and Schmidt originally were sentenced to hang last Dec. 6, but were granted last-minute reprieves until March 1 pending an appeal on behalf of Schmidt. The Supreme Court of Canada in a Feb. 20 ruling upheld the death sentence.

United Kingdom Letter

By CHARLES BRUCE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 27 —(CP)— Water power, civil aviation and public works are getting a thorough discussing these days in the Scottish soft accents that predominate beside the Tweed—and an airing in the public press.

The North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board, for instance, has a plan to raise Loch Dunmore by 30 feet, create two entirely new lochs, an extra supply needed power to the Highlands cities and Aberdeen. It would cost $30,000,000. The only disadvantage would be submergence of certain historic bridges and ancient sites. Engineering projects say tourists would still be able to see most beauty spots, including the Queen's View, the Falls of Bruar, and the Soldier's leap in the Pass of Killiecrankie.

The scene of this proposed development is in Perthshire, just east of Loch Rannoch, familiar to anyone who has heard or sung the Road to the Isles. The Glasgow Herald's view is that "sentiment and scenery are admirable in themselves, but can contribute little to the regeneration of the Highland area." Trouble is, some Highlanders don't think much of regeneration.

Prestwick Plans: There is considerable apprehension about the pikestaff plan for Prestwick, world crossroads for military aviation. It is apparent that London is going to be the main British terminal for civil aviation lines. Prestwick will probably be No. 2, but some interests are pressing claims of Manchester and Liverpool, with Prestwick anything less than second. Scotland won't be satisfied.

Lady Louise Glen-Coats of Paisley wrote to the papers that "practically every interest is affected by turning down of Prestwick as an airport of major importance. . . . And the same applies to the refusal to consider plans for a Forth Bridge." (The bridge would link Edinburgh and the southeast of Scotland with the northeast.)

A respondent who had the courage to sign himself only "Union Make, Strength" (probably an expatriated Englishman) replied that "grievance-making on behalf of Scotland is a mischievious undertaking."

Meanwhile, the Scots have a plan for Prestwick, involving everything and Internal Lines operated by Scottish aviation and based there: Edinburgh—Prestwick as first alternative to London and creation of a commercial manufacturing industry.

Ulster Tee: Northern Ireland is not interested in aviation. In parliament, the Unionist member for Antrim asserted that if it could be arranged to use some of the landing grounds as transatlantic bases, it would put Ulster "on the map." Eire had made arrangements with Pyrpas, Spruce representations should be made for Northern Ireland, pointing out her war record.

Welsh Note: Rhys Davies, M.P. for Westhoughton, started some rapid-fire repartee on the Welsh language when he argued for a chief police inspector for Wales. He had noted that the police trill at Westminster provided an inspector for Scotland and another for England and Wales.

A. O. Wallace, Bristol, said he was under the impression the Welsh were without sin and had no need for police, were as good, in fact, that no swear words in Welsh exist.

Mr. Davies countered: "You can't tell lies in the Welsh language, anyway. . . ."

MAGOG THRIVES ON COTTON

« Many a town in Canada might envy this thriving Quebec community. Magog—a 'Textile Town' made with cotton—is prosperity here personified. Its yearly payroll of $750,000 is spent in the stores of the district. Its annual bank clearings of $10,000,000 are a barometer of Magog's modern shopping power. Its factory of Magog Textile Mills employs 1,100 persons, and through this industry alone gives employment to many more in the city and throughout the district. Magog is a progressive, modern shopping centre, and a natural second-trading centre, for a considerable area. Its textile industry has an unbroken record of 75 years' service to Canada. I was watching ma sewing on her electric sewing machine, and I said, Hay ma, you certainly are a fine sewer, I bet you could make a lot of money doing that if you had to, I said.

I'd just as soon not have to, thanks a same, ma said.

Meaning she was satisfied to just keep on only sewing for the family even without being payed for it, and I said, If you had so much money you couldn't count it, do you think you'd ever get tired of just looking at it, ma?

I'd be willing to give the experience a fair trial, I'm sure, ma said, and I said, Well how about inflation, ma? Suppose inflation got so bad that a dollar's worth of money would fill a whole horse and wagon load, so it wouldn't be worth while to drive the horse and wagon to the bank with it because it would cost you more than a dollar to feed the horse. Suppose inflation ever got that bad, ma? I said.

Suppose it did? ma said, and I said, Well I mean do you think it would cause a revolution?

I think if I know you from experience, you've got something on your mind that you're partially leading up to, so what is it? ma said, and I said, Can I have money for an ice cream cone?

Egotistically not, ma said, and I said, Aw G, ma, why not?

Because for one thing we're having chickin and dumplings for supper, so when you sit down with a raging appetite you'll thank me for not allowing you to spoil it with an ice cream cone, ma said, and I said, Sure, ma, G, but I'll thank you ever special if you promise to let me get an ice cream cone after supper. Will you, ma, won't you, ma? I said.

Such a boy, now go away before you make me miss a stitch, ma said.

Not actually mean no.

SMOKING SOLUTION

DEVELOPED RDX

Dr. George Wright, professor of chemistry, University of Toronto, who developed RDX, world's most powerful military explosive, in his laboratory. Recently he became a Canadian and has been granted a permit for his shotgun, refused him before.

Cold-day.

There aren't nearly enough of them and it isn't surprising. Back in 1939 a thaw following a big freeze-up provided more than 5,000,000 burst pipes, radiators and water cisterns. Plumbers, worked until the end of May. Total damage at an estimated cost of $2,000,000 ($6,000,000). In 1892 repairs lasted until August.

The winter profession of plumbers is a standing joke, even among Britons; yet the procession continues.

One of London's newspapers devoted a couple of columns to the subject of frozen pipes, under the headline "but the pipes need not freeze." That fact, it said, "is only just beginning to receive acceptance."

The annual problem is so serious that the ministry of works has put in a lot of work in designing "freeze-proof" water supplies for its proposed temporary post-war houses. The Central Housing Advisory Committee to the Health Minister also made a special point of this need in a report recently issued.

The cause of the trouble is that a typical English house has exterior plumbing. Pipes for water and drainage run up outside the walls, with no protection from the weather. A few degrees of frost can cause havoc, and does.

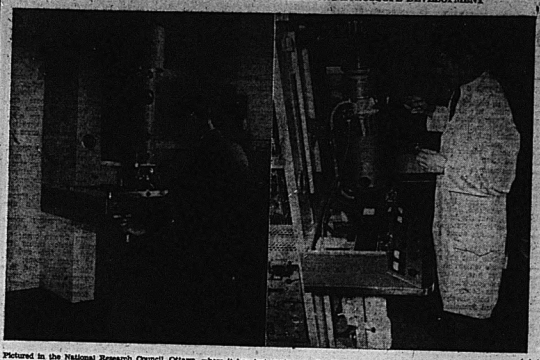
London has become the haven of another member of a deposed European royal family — Archduke Robert of Austria, younger brother of Archduke Otto, Hapsburg pretender to the throne of Austria.

He is living in a one-room flat in Chelsea. The room is cluttered with photographs and maps of the war zone. One photo of President Roosevelt bears a personal inscription.

Twenty-nine years old, the Archduke travels between the Austrian clubs and meeting-places in London by bicycle, and he also rides it to the House of Commons where he frequently goes to listen to foreign affairs debates.

Asked whether he wanted to return to Austria after the war, Archduke Robert replied: "It all depends on what the people want."

CANADA PLAYS IMPORTANT ROLE IN ELECTRON MICROSCOPE DEVELOPMENT



Pictured in the National Research Council, Ottawa, where it has just been installed, is the electron microscope, the greatest advance in microscopic vision in more than half a century. The first workable electron microscope to be made on the North American continent was built in the University of Toronto's Physics Department, where research on the vast possibilities of the instrument still continues. At N.R.C. is the first commercially produced electron microscope in Canada, shown (left) in full dress. At right, streamlining is stripped to reveal its complex makeup as Dr. W. M. Baras, N.R.C. physicist, inserts an object—possibly a dust particle on the tip of the instrument in his hand — for observation.

Using a beam of electrons instead of a beam of light, and electrical fields instead of glass lenses, the electron microscope can provide useful magnifications up to 100,000 times, compared to the 2,000 times possible with the ordinary light microscope. Used chiefly in metallurgy, chemistry and bacteriology, already it has revealed such objects as viruses heretofore beyond the power of the light microscope.

Whitehall Notebook

By JOHN DAUPHINEE

London, March 1 —(CP)— The Russian's winter offensive has stirred talk of an early general election around Westminster. There is some belief the fall of Berlin will be regarded by the government as the technical end of the war against Germany and the signal for the first national vote in 10 years.

But there are others who feel just as strongly that regardless what happens in the next couple of months there will be no speedup in election preparations.

"Ministers of all parties in the government are . . . hardworked men and I do not think they are nearly so keen on being plunged too soon into the turmoil of the polls," wrote the Press Association's lobby correspondent.

"For that reason I still believe this parliament will go on until nearly the end of the year."

The election is near enough, however, that the major parties are getting their organizations in shape for the contest.

Prime Minister Churchill is to address the conservative party's conference this month and may make his general declaration when voting day will be. Meantime Conservative constituency associations are busy selecting candidates.

The Labor Party's annual meeting was held in December and its campaigning has begun in earnest. Clement Attlee, deputy prime minister and party leader, addressed a meeting of his constituents in Limehouse as a send-off for the plans to overhaul party machinery through the country.

"When the general election comes the Labor Party is going into the fight as a party on its own, with its tail well up because we've done our best to winning this war," he said. "There will be no fix-up—you can't have a sham election as at the end of the last war."

The Liberals launched their campaign for party funds last month and Sir Percy Harris, deputy leader of the party and its chief whip, said both money and candidates are pouring in. He said he was immensely impressed with the type of men and women coming forward.

The Liberals hope to raise £200,000 ($800,000) for election purposes through their new national campaign—the first such drive ever made by a political party on a national scale. Party spokesmen have said they aim at 500 candidates for the 615 seats in the House of Commons.

London Letter

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 28—(CP)—Nothing throws London so thoroughly out of joint as a bit of wintry weather. This year it's had plenty of it.

In any Canadian city a couple of inches of snow is taken in stride. If it falls through the night, plows have cleared the streets by morning and downtown sidewalks are clean. Street cars and buses run on schedule.

But that doesn't happen in London. For one thing snow-shovels are almost unknown. Conscientious housewives try to clear the snow from their walks with brooms or chunks of board, but the wet stuff that falls here just doesn't respond.

So sidewalks are slippery and sloppy. The streets are as bad. Buses add to a stop against the curb and sometimes don't get started again. They run in bunches, followed by long spells with none at all. Even the underground is demoralized by delays on suburban lines which run on the surface. Long-distance trains are delayed for hours.

Snow falls every year but nobody organizes to cope with it.

Cold weather is another problem with which Britain sometimes has to cope and the job is handled just as unsuccessfully. This winter has had more than its share of frost and plumbers have been having a

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER 4

"We, some of us understood," Mrs. Porter said then in her sweet, wistful voice, "why Judson Marshbanks married Frances Unger—she's a very brilliant girl, but I don't think she's pretty, and she's twenty-two years younger than he is. Seems so strange!"

"Not as near as Sherry ever had heard her come to criticism or unkindness, and she smiled at her interrogatively.

"I hadn't known she was, Mrs. Porter," she said, with the simple daring that she knew well the old woman liked. "You always say such nice things about everyone."

"Well, I hope I always do, my dear, but somehow that girl always does seem to me outlandish. And I loved his first wife, Mary Lee Carey. She died only two years ago. Her mother was Sophy Laquelle, French family here—lovely people—consul to San Francisco—all that. We met her uncle — forget his name now, Count Somebody—in outside of Paris — Barbizon. It was near Barbizon or Gien. It was at St. Cloud — I don't remember . . ."

She was off on a long story. Cherry could ruminate at leisure upon the morning's encounter, after take out every one of it's works and glances and calculations for inspection, with the warmest feeling at her heart that in the last few months — perhaps in her whole life — she had ever known.

A day or two later a package came for her. An round, silver-paper box of candy was inside, tied with a gay bow of scarlet ribbon. Within again, on the soft silver paper that covered a circle of chocolates, was a card — a brown card with the name of James Kelly Oakes on it, and in the corner, also engraved in brown on paper matching the ribbon, "Apoint Hospitalfahr Farm Board, Battahlik."

Scribbled on the card were the words: "It was to have been your firm—orchid. But this seems more practical just now."

And below, in fine writing: "By the way, it's pronounced 'sea-kid,' not 'krah-kid.' No one seems to know why!"

Cherry found this package in her room upon returning from a drive. In a few minutes she would be expected downstairs to preside at the tea table and listen to old lady talk. But for just a dizzy space she must give way to the keenest ecstasy that a girl's heart ever knows — the first fragrant breath that blows from a new world, too dazzling, too magical to be entered except with baited breath and timid steps.

The card in one hand, the box in the other, she went to the window and stood staring unseeing at the whitecaps on the ruffled bay, the dark, silhouette of Tamalpais against the cold bronze and lead-colored streaking of the west. And at that minute Cherry would not have changed places with any other woman in the whole world.

This was Thursday, and he would be here to dinner two weeks from tonight, for basic pay. And whether he noticed her or not, or spoke to her or not, she would see him again and hear his voice and perhaps she could find at unobserved moment in which to murmur thanks to him.

Mrs. Porter's proposed dinner party for a dozen of the younger debutantes took on an increasing importance as the days went by. And, by the redoubtable Hodson and families, was by degrees given-lopped into a much larger affair. It was a long time — perhaps twenty or twenty-five years — since entertaining on a large scale had taken place in the old Gladehill mansion, and the newspapers made much of it, and many were the friendly offers of assistance in Cherry's employer as the plan got daily under way.

The original twelve girls swelled to a score, to thirty, for there were many who could not be forgotten, and at least forty eligible young men were asked to join them. Their certain fevered and intimate elements were included to save the hostess the least effort, and a no time at all caterers had come in to set tabled and decorate and prepare a sumptuous meal for one hundred guests; florists arrived with palms and ropes of chrysanthemums; newspapermen and photographers gave the house cot rest; a five piece orchestra was engaged, and Mrs. Porter remained in bed all day, getting herself completely rested and ready.

To Cherry's eagerness and inexperience and hunger for excitement all the while, satisfying beyond words. She was everywhere; she helped with everything.

In the midst of the flurry the guest of honor, Dorothy Page-Smith, arrived with a formidable mother as escort, and took possession of one of the big rooms on the second floor. This alone would have supplied Cherry with pleasurable interest, for Dorothy was a harmless, indeed a seemingly half-witted little creature who turned to Cherry at once as being the only other person of about her own years in the house, and in a babyish lisp consulted her about her gowns, her hair arrangement, her beaux and the possibility of her having anything but a "swell-time" in a place where she just couldn't know one "thingie thoie."

The day of the party was overcast with a cold rain spattering down.

At seven o'clock, trim and demure in her black dress with the silver buttons, Cherry went into Mrs. Porter's bedroom to find Emma and Perny busily getting the old lady into a magnificent robe of silver-and-blue brocade, decorating the beautiful coils of her rich white hair with diamond butterflies and preparing her with a preliminary cup of tea and chicken sandwich for the evening's frivolities.

She had at first planned to go downstairs tonight, to be installed majestically in some great chair, to welcome her guests herself. But this seemed at the last moment too great an effort.

So Emma and Perny propped her up comfortably and arranged the lights becomingly, and were barely finished as the first arrivals, the half-hour after seven, when Dorothy and her mother came in to press themselves under the old lady's sparkling eyes; to admire her and be praised themselves.

And in another half-hour three or four more arrived, and quite a little reception was going on in the sitting room. At Cherry's suggestion the arriving guests were to be sent upstairs in detachments; she went below at half past eight to find sixty or them milling about enjoying a succession of cocktails, and was presented to them all at Saint Dorothea's and school theatricals in the old days, and parties of six, and about among them.

Although the house was warmed by a furnace, the big fires were blazing brightly everywhere; the hideous big chandeliers were dark, and in the soft glow the girls looked lovely in their floating and glittering gowns, and the constantly changing and intersecting groups made one dramatic picture after another.

Unexpectedly, Cherry found Amy Mar-thanks in the midst of admiring circle, and hated herself for the wretched little prick of jealousy that ran through her as her newfound sense of ease and power. She looked for Perny and Kelly Coates, but they were evidently combined, they were not in sight. When the time came for her to say to Amy that "I'm afraid would please you to send four of them to go upstairs and say good evening to Mrs. Porter, Amy stared at her smilingly, entirely without recognition, and said in an undertone to an adoring boy beside her:

"What's the big idea? Is Nursey tellme us to say we had a nice time?"

The two great drawing rooms that were connected by folding doors had been thrown open; the formal French parlor across the wide hall had its fire; and its sprinkling of young persons; the enormous "blue room" had been put into romulation and would presently be used as a supplementary dining room; tables in the great library were piled with candy bars and cigarettes and mufflers and the hall and the "red-room" were cleared for dancing.

There was a smaller library known as "the den" tucked away under the wide turn of the stairway. The door into the hall was open, but when Cherry approached it to answer the telephone in the hall near it she had no idea that anyone was in the room.

The voice on the telephone was that of an agitated Miss Hansman who was bringing a lady up from Hillborough and had had the misfortune to break a spring while driving. They had sent for a taxi.

Cherry's eyes moved absently to the open door of the den, and rested incuriously on a pair of satin slippers that in their turn were resting upon one of the tasseled taborets that stood before the fire.

The wearer of these slippers, whoever she was, was sunk so deep in a great chair in the comfortable position she had assumed her heels were at least as high as her head. The firelight twinkled on the slippers and on the zwirl of her vermilion velvet gown, she was evidently whispering, for Cherry heard no words distinctly.

MR. GEORGE BELL

Time and again, many men and women rejoicing in the good result obtained by taking Syntona Herbal Compound have declared: "Syntona helped me when I needed it most — it is the first medicine that ever gave me any real relief." That, for example, is the experience of Mr. George Bell, 312 York Street, London, Ontario, who said:

"For the past few years I have had a bad time with my stomach. I had gas so after my meals I would be troubled with heartburn and belching up of hot, sour liquids. I would have a heavy, full, bloated stomach and often felt sick and nauseated. At times I had dizzy spells and for some darting before my eyes and my tongue was always coated.

"Sore nervosity I developed a dull, aching pain across the small of my back and sometimes my arms and legs would ache and muscles. I often felt stiff and sore all over. I got headaches and sometimes a morning would be all night, so I felt tired all the time.

"I had been reading about Syntona, and I find out how Syntona can help you, too.

PryPayTelephone From Wall but Fail To Get Cash

Would-be robbers pried the pay telephone from the wall at the Canadian National railway station, Dundas Street some time last night, but were seemingly frightened away before they could remove the coin box. No cash receipts, police reported after investigation.

Entrance was gained to the building through a low window which, when the intruders gained further entrance to the main office where the pay telephone was pried from the wall with the use of a screw driver and pinch bar, which were found in the room when the service station was opened for business today. The telephone was carried into the main part of the building where it was found intact.

Make Every Effort To Get Supplies to Moving War Prisoners

Ottawa, March 1. (CP)—The Wartime Information Board said today mass movements of prisoners-of-war from Germany from boundary zones to Central Germany are a disturbing and effort is being made by the Supreme Allied Command and the International Red Cross to get supplies to the men being moved.

Many of the men are reported to be moving under difficult conditions with inadequate provision for accommodation and food.

"All means of getting fresh supplies in to the overcrowded camps are being explored, and if it should prove feasible stocks will be sent in by truck or plane", the W.I.B. announcement said.

It was recently reported that 2,000 officers from Lieft 3 had arrived at Marlag Milag Nord, prisoners from Italy. Many have gone to Usedon near Swinemunde; while men from Stalags 8A, 8B and 8C and Oflags VIA and XCB3 are reported to be on the march.

Pte. John Ward, Alias Whiteside, Given 3 Months

Pte. John Ward, alias Whiteside, was given three months in the common jail after the county constable breaking and entering Irwin's garage, in Demorestville. He was arraigned before Magistrate T. Y. Wills here today.

Ward was captured at the point of a gun by Mr. Irwin and Chief N. Langford when the Demorestville garage last week. He admitted to the charge today after Assistant Crown Attorney S. O. Robertson read the counts in open court.

A charge of creating a public disturbance contrary to the Common Law of England, against Gardiner Post, of Canniffton, resulted in the accused being given a suspended sentence upon the payment of costs, which amounted to $32.00.

As a sequel to the above, matter a charge of fraud was withdrawn against William J. Ayton, of Foxboro after Mr. Robertson pointed out the latter charge had been preferred on the false information allegedly given by Post in the first place.

Minor L.C.A. charges brought the customary $12.00, including costs, from Harry Hood, Arnold Aherld and H. K. Roblin, all of this district.

Restrictions On Small Building Projects Tighter

Ottawa, March 1 — (CP) — Minister Mitchell Hepburn announced today that construction control restrictions on small building projects have been tightened because the recent stepping-up of war production has increased the demand for construction materials.

Under a new order, issued by Construction Controller J. P. MacKenzie, anyone undertaking to construct, repair, add to, alter or install equipment in, a building other than a plant must obtain a construction control licence if the project is to cost more than $1,000.

Houses, duplexes and apartment houses will come under the order.

Since February, 1944, construction control licences for this type of work have been required with the projects costing more than $1,500. The order brings back under control all projects within the $500-to-$1,500 range, thus restoring a limit which was in effect between October, 1942, and February, 1944.

Mr. Howe said the $1,500 exemption no longer was justified in view of the demand for materials resulting from increased war production. "Because so many projects were being started not completed, not completed," he said. "Lowering the licence exemption limit should enable new construction to be more closely related to the supply of materials and will ensure that work is not merely start, but will carry through to completion. Too many housing units as can be built with the materials available."

The new order does not affect specific provisions already made by the construction control for maintenance and repair of business buildings and hotels, or the specific provisions respecting the oil and logging industries, or the installation of refrigeration equipment.

District Farmers Looking for Help

Although it is six weeks before farmers can expect that spring's work will commence, many agriculturists in the County of Hastings are already commencing to look around for their summer's help.

This fact is indicated by the many advertisements appearing in the local newspaper for farm help, either by the season or on a yearly basis.

When in need of such help farmers do not necessarily have to apply through selective service, according to local officials who pointed out that advertisements of this nature may be placed without the sanction of their office. At the present time only about ten farmers have applications with the selective service office for farm help, it was stated. However, within the next few weeks it is expected there will be many applications for farm help placed with their office.

240 City Blocks In Tokyo Twisted Ruins After Raid

Guam, March 1 —(AP)— Two hundred and forty city blocks of Tokyo's most highly congested industrial and business district are in smouldering, twisted ruins as a result of Sunday's Superfortress raid, U. S. Air Force Bomber Command headquarters announced yesterday.

The greatest punishment yet dealt Japan's capital was inflicted without the loss of any of the more than 300 aircraft which participated in stormy weather.

Maj.-Gen. Curtis Le May, commanding general of the Superforts, after studying the reconnaissance photographs said the results were "excellent." The photos show 39,074,000 square feet of important factory and trade areas burned out. This is 907 acres.

The ravaged area extends a short distance from Emperor Hirohito's moated palace eastward to the crowded waterfront area.

The Superfortress assault was made in co-ordination with a carrier-based plane attack which hit earlier in the morning and knocked out two aircraft plants in the northwestern suburbs.

80 Nazis Rounded Up, Claim To Be Unwilling Tools of Hitler

Moscow, March 1 —(AP) Eighty Nazis lined up recently at a registration centre in occupied Brandenburg province in Germany and tried to persuade a skeptical Russian reporter they were helpless and unwilling tools of Hitler.

Writing in Red Star, the Red army's newspaper, the correspondent, Vasily Grossman, reported yesterday:

"Some of these people have been members of the Nazi party 12 or 13 years and a number actually are acquainted with Hitler and Himmler, yet they claimed they were forced to join under pressure and that they really hated the regime and were very glad to be rid of it. Even a German who had taken part in a punitive expedition against Soviet guerillas tried to represent himself as a Hitler victim who had been paralyzed by fear of Fascist terror."

Grossman implied that hard-headed justice was ahead for the Nazis in spite of their protestations of innocence.

"Our course will reach a verdict without philosophical discussion and of their own free will," he wrote. "The verdict will be on behalf of millions of children, women and old folk and unarmed prisoners of war whose ashes now inspire the hearts of our Red fighters.

YANKS FIGHT INTO SUBURBS OF DUESSELDORF

Russians Seven Miles From Baltic Coast

Isolate 150-Mile Coastal Belt of East Pomerania

London, March 2 (CP) — Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky's 2nd. White Russian Army has reached the Stettin-Danzig highway between Kosslin and Schlawe in a smashing and only seven miles from the Baltic coast, the German high command announced today.

The 22-mile advance from Bublitz, for all practical purposes, cut Danzig off from contact with Germany and isolated a 150 mile coastal belt of Eastern Pomerania and Northwestern Poland fronting on the Baltic and the Gulf of Danzig.

About 90 miles southeast of this penetration, the Germans said, the Russians also broke into the main German lines north of Arnswalde after crossing the Ihna River.

Here the Russians were about 55 miles from Berlin which were threatening to drive on the Lower Half, a 25-mile wide coastal lagoon north of Stettin through which the Oder River flows to the sea.

Mounted cavalry and hard-riding Cossack and Siberian horsemen struck ahead of Marshal K. K. Rokossovsky's 2nd. White Russian Army in the assault, it was by official Soviet account, went on initial from Kosslin.

Shortly after a Berlin announcement said the Russians had opened a tremendous new assault against Koenigsberg in an attempt to bring about the early fall of the German East Prussian capital.

The Russian high command said early today that German troops were deserting in wholesale fashion in the Ina-Oder Marshal Rokossovsky's triumphant march through Pomerania and declared the date of complete destruction of Fascist Germany are drawing near."

A Moscow broadcast declared the Russians had captured an order from the German command on the 2nd. White Russian front which set up models used by officials in the German ranks to deal with the problem of deserters.

Many Jets Reported

The order quoted a Col.-Gen. Weise, described as the commander of the 2nd. German Army, as saying that troops of cowardly deserters" are "roaming in the rear areas of the army" and that many long lines of civilians trekking to the German interior.

The Russians killed 2,000 German yesterday and captured 400 in fighting in one sector of the Pomeranian front, the communique said. Many tanks and guns also were also captured.

During the day the Russians, fanning out from the captured communications of Neustettin, seized eight more localities, including Schlawe, 11 miles east of Gross-Tychow, site of a camp for American war prisoners. Zechendorf is 16 miles northwest of Neustettin. Also in this general area is Stargard, a railway hub 25 was located. Canadians were among its prisoners.

Berlin reported that Russian troops had forced a crossing of the Ihna River, six miles north of Arnswalde and only 15 miles east of Stargard. The Germans were hold in the Stettin port outer defence zone.

REPORT 'WE WANT PEACE' CHALKED ON VIENNA WALL

New York, March 2 (CP) — The Sunday Times Cable said in a despatch yesterday to the Oslo Post" Information that chalked inscriptions "We want peace" had appeared widely on bomb-damaged walls of Vienna. The newspaper said there were few people who were not convinced that Germany had lost the war and there were many signs of opposition to the Nazi regime.

Proposed Increase In Minimum Wage For Women Postponed

Toronto, March 2. (CP)—Minister of Labor Charles Daley said Monday the proposed increase in the Ontario minimum wage for women will not come into force until the question is discussed at the Dominion-Provincial conference in June by Federal Labor Ministers. This will be some time in May.

Mr. Daley said the Federal conference is to consider an overall minimum wage for Canada, so that introduction of Ontario's new schedules would be suspended until it is known what the Federal government proposes.

After lengthy surveys based on opinion of employers, employees, trade unionists and others, Mr. Daley said the proposed schedules when and if effective, would raise the minimum wage of 30 to $15 in cities of 50,000 and over.

Reparations From Germany May Be Prime Post-Yalta Problem

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, March 2 (AP) — Development of a plan for taking reparations from defeated Germany emerged today as possibly the greatest problem left over from the Yalta conference.

The way in which these reparations are taken will determine, more than anything else, the measure imposed on Germany, how that country will develop after the war.

Three methods appear to present, in the opinion of authorities here who have been working with post-war German problems for months.

1. Russia, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and other nations which have had their factories wrecked by German destruction and thievery as well as by the usual losses of war, could divide up Germany's existing plants and transportation equipment, practically, cart it all off to their own cities.

2. At the other extreme, they could decide only to take the products of the factories for a certain number of years.

3. They could, and probably will, destroy much productive capacity, as the great Krupp industries; remove it to their own countries the machinery of many German plants, along with such munitions machines as they choose, leaving some industry functioning to provide goods for them within Germany.

So far as can be learned here the Big Three made no definite decision at Yalta on any of these possibilities.

President Roosevelt made two comments on reparations proposals in his report to Congress yesterday, indicating that no action will be made "in kind," not money.

At the same time he hinted at what is known as "productive" reparations, which are to be provided for the German people after the war. He says they want the German people to starve, or to become a burden on the rest of the world."

The reparations plan is to be worked out by a commission in Moscow. The expectation is that members will be appointed soon and will include initially representatives of Britain, the United States, Russia and possibly France.

CANADIAN ARMY PUSHES FORWARD FOR HALF MILE

More Canadians Are Thrown Into Forest Battle as Enemy's Resistance Bitter

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army in Germany, March 2 (CP Cable) — The 1st Canadian Army today continued its bitter, bitter opposition along the Hochwald Line northwest of the Ruhr despite the fact the United States 9th. Army was only 30 miles away at Mechlen-Gladbach and threatening the enemy's rear.

The German radio said an American tank column had pushed north of Muenchen Gladbach to Rheydt, only 30 miles from the Canadian front.)

Although there was no flagging in German resistance, the Canadians made several small gains in heavy fighting, advancing half mile in their corridor through the Hochwald (Hoch Forest).

In Centre of German Stronghold

During the day Canadian infantry tanks attacked along the rail line to Xanten, reaching the hamlet of Paulsehof for a bloodless gain. They put the Canadians in the centre of a German stronghold which has blocked their breakout from the Hochwald Line defences, but they were not yet in the clear.

More Canadian infantry has been thrown into the battle, fighting with one force attacking through Wedo Gulpenand, while two others advancing through heavy forest on the left and right flanks and advance to the north. The job of clearing the forest is slow and bloody but it is being done.

British troops to the west still hold the enemy in Kervenheim, where he clung tenaciously to the southern end of the town, but British tanks and infantry are attacking between Kervenheim and the Hochwald and there was no report to the southwest of the southern tip of the forest.

Says British Navy Force Wiped Out German Convoy

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 2.— (CP)—Sidney Graham, 20, a 19-year-old member of the Cruiser H.M.S. Kent while at least to the Royal Navy, told of an attack by Norway on a large German convoy of 15 ships off the coast of Norway.

The Kent, he said, led a force of one light cruiser and three destroyers. "It all over in an hour. The Kent alone accounted for five ships."

Session of Parliament Called for March 19th

Ottawa, March 2 (CP) — Parliament will be called together for a short session beginning March 19, The Canadian Press learned reliably today. Prime Minister Mackenzie King is expected to make this announcement in his broadcast.

The House of Commons thus would have two full weeks in March and, if necessary, another two weeks in April before the life of parliament expires April 17. However, Mr. King would be able to end the session by dissolution of parliament at any time before expiration.

While it is expected the session will be devoted almost exclusively to voting supply to carry on the war and meet civil expenditures, efforts likely will be made to open up a debate on foreign policy.

Mr. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, has expressed the view that King should make a statement as to the present external affairs department.

Two sessions of parliament are scheduled, one at an unstated date in London for Commonwealth countries, and the second April 26 in San Francisco for United Nations. The Commons doubtless will press to know what stand Canada proposes to take in each.

Larger Appropriations Likely.

The big debate, nevertheless, will centre on war appropriations. It is expected the government will table a supply bill or more of these appropriations to be passed to provide the ministry with funds to carry on until a new parliament is elected, possibly late in May or July.

A portion of the estimates for 1945 administration also will have to be passed, but it is expected these estimates will be along the lines of last session and will not engender as much debate as the war appropriations.

Defence Minister McNaughton will not be able to attend due to failing to win a seat in the Ontario North by-election last month. Thus he will not be able to lead discussion of business through the House with Finance Minister Ilsley, Munitions Minister Macdonald, and Navy Minister Gibson, also acting Air Minister.

Hon. J. L. Ralston, former Defence Minister, and Hon. C. G. Power, former Air Minister, will be in the House, but are not expected to take an active share in debate.

The new session will be the sixth of the 19th. Parliament and members will have sat in Ottawa or Ottawa and travelling expenses to and from their constituencies.

YANKS CAPTURE PALAWAN ISLAND IN LIGHT FIGHT

Move to Seize Japan's Shipping Lanes to the East Indies

Manila, March 2. (AP)—Veteran 41st Division Yanks have seized control of the southern Philippine island of Palawan in a move to cut Japan's shipping lanes to the East Indies.

Gen. MacArthur, announcing the invasion today, said Filipino troops landed virtually unopposed Wednesday on the little island (Lubang) in the Philippines, capturing Puerto Princesa, a natural and protected harbor, and two nearby airfields midway along the 270-mile east coast.

Infantrymen moved ashore after cruiser and destroyer bombardment and a two-day aerial pounding. Extensive fires started by bombing were inland and American losses were officially termed "light."

Puerto Princesa was deserted as the Americans moved in. The harbor was in good condition, Mac-Arthur said. The airdromes, crashed by American bombers, were being put into shape.

Invasion of Palawan, a narrow island pointing like a finger from the Philippine group toward Borneo, was the first important southward turn of the American forces.

In American hands, it will threaten the South China sea approaches to Japanese garrisons in Indo-China, Malaya, Singapore and The Netherlands East Indies.

The landing was made while troops continued their offensive against the Japanese east of Manila, on the Bataan waterhead, vital to the capital's water supply, and within the city itself.

ILSLEY SAYS FARM IMPROVEMENT LOANS AVAILABLE

Loans Up to $3,000 Can be Obtained for Variety of Purposes

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 2. (CP)—Finance Minister Ilsley announced today that the farm improvement loans bill passed at the last session of parliament has been brought into operation.

The act enables farmers to obtain loans up to $2,000 from their local banks for a wide variety of purposes and extends the period up to ten years at five-per-cent interest. The federal treasury will guarantee from the government against losses to the extent of 10 per cent of the amount loaned and against interest losses. The cost loan is $250,000,000. The Act covers a ten-year period.

All kinds of farm improvements from new machinery to a complete new farm home can be financed under the Act. It was brought forward as one of the last session of parliament as a step toward solving the problem of long standing problem of interest rates and short term credit for agriculture.

Cheap Method of Credit.

For the first time in Canada, it is hoped farmers with a cheap and convenient method of obtaining immediate credit, loans for terms of years, with the privilege of extending up to ten years. Long term loans for farm purposes, mortgages and short-term seasonal credit will be available in the past on bank loans.

The Act also is regarded by the government as part of the program to stabilize employment and income in the post-war period, while really raising standards of living on farms.

While benefits of the Act become available immediately, they will be limited by the wartime shortages and restrictions on supply of materials and labor but it is hoped that the farmers will be able to take full advantage of the provisions of the Act as soon as restrictions are relaxed.

During the early post-war period it is expected it will permit farmers to make improvements delayed during wartime and expand their farms with modern methods of production.

Expect Price Reduction.

Agricultural Department officials anticipate that, apart from the saving in interest charges, which will be substantial, the use of new farming methods will in time bring about a reduction in prices of farm machinery, equipment and supplies which, in the past have had to be high enough to cover credit losses.

On new farm implements the farmer may borrow up to two-thirds of the purchase price. On purchase of livestock for breeding purposes,

COLOGNE GIVEN AERIAL BEATING BY 2,000 PLANES

Concentrated Attack In Support of U.S. Troops Driving On City From West

By HENRY R. JAMESON
(AP Staff Writer)

London, March 2 — (AP)—Fleets of 2,000 heavy bombers backed Allied armies driving with a force of 750 to 1,000 R.A.F. and U.S. Army heavy bombers bombarding Cologne immediately ahead of the United States 1st Army.

The hours later more than 1,300 United States heavyweights attacked Hitler's city on rail and oil targets in southeastern Germany.

The American armada formed a great "V" for victory, with the point at Berlin, then broke into sections and winged southward. Berliners stayed in their shelters more than an hour.

The Freight Yards

Two strong forces attacked the huge freight yards at Dresden, just short of the Czech border, 100 miles from five miles from Cologne, ruhl-ward zone after dawn by 1,600 RAF and RCAF heavy bombers. Earlier the United States 8th and Army fought in the streets of Aachen, Hitler, guardian city of the Moselle.

Thousands clogged eager the 9th Army total yesterday rose 2,053 to 15,876 for the campaign which started wept of the River River Feb. 23rd.

The wide and sweeping gains, most spectacular since the Brittany break through last summer, which precipitated the capture of France, brought the Americans within reach of the whole width of the plain between the Rhine and the Maas. In this plain is the area of the Ruhr which spills over west of the Rhine.

Dig Foxholes on Rhine.

The Ruhr, far and away Germany's greatest concentration of heavy industries, produces two-thirds of her war materials in 1942 and 1943 and the great plain was started reducing its great steel, coke, chemical, plastic and textile factories.

It is doubly important now that the Russian, British, Canadian and American armies have pushed to within 30 miles of the Ruhr dams and mills lie along the Sauer River and Germany's frontier.

American infantrymen today were digging foxholes on the west bank of the Rhine after sweeping ten miles forward along the Moselle. American artillery dust raged across the German front field and mobile guns were trying to reach columns of striking Nazi reinforcements and infantrymen. Argonal, reserve of the Saar coal and desultory.

The Rhineland area north and east of the fallen twin textile and steel city of Muenchen Gladbach and Rheydt was reported still swirling. Between them, these two cities had a population of more than 200,000 many of them bombed out refugees from Duesseldorf.

A field Officer of the 83rd Division, first Americans to reach the Rhine, described the chase as a "rat race". . . . The American Army to the north holds 44 miles or more of the west banks of the Lower Rhine and 4 field dispatch said Canadian forces have captured half a mile through the Hochwald to the Germans fortified town of Xanten.

On the Rhine's upper reaches, the French 1st Army stands on about 100 miles of the Rhine from the Alps to north of Strasbourg.

Cross Neuss Canal.

Neuss, a machine and steel city of 48,000, fell to the Thirtieth Division fought enemy tanks and infantry across the Neuss Canal, and then crossed it. The 9th Army's total wedged was seven infantry and three Tank divisions of perhaps 180,000 fighting men.

Among the loves captured by the 9th Army were Duelken, five miles northwest of Muenchen Gladbach, and Boeheim. Vierson fell and Rommond, Netherlands fortress town where the Roer flows into the Maas, was by-passed and hopelessly isolated. On the north, Patrols entered Roermond last night and found it empty.

The extreme 15-mile advance was made by the 35th Division into Venlo, Holland, on the Maas and west of Venlo, and between that city and Roermond. Patrols of the All Germans still between the left bank of the Maas and the British 2nd were trapped.

War Correspondent Associated Press war correspondents Arthur Menken reported:

"It might be only a matter of hours before the fate of Field Marshal Von Rundstedt's forces north of Cologne is sealed".

The Canadian First Army was within 15 miles of the Rhine at Emmerich, on the edge of Zuyder-pich and seven from the important traffic centre of Buskrichen.

Rhine Artillery Duel

The Red Artillery Division fought swiftly through the outskirts of the city of Neuss, which lies on the west bank of the Rhine opposite Duesseldorf, administrative centre of the Ruhr.

A thunderous artillery duel was being fought across the Rhine as Neuss fell, and the Germans on the west bank of the river surrendered in feeling and shattered forces.

Tanks and infantry spurred mile, to the north and east of Neuss, the tanks bastion and rail centre of Venlo, and pushed within 16 miles of the 1st Canadian Army, threatening to trap thousands of Germany's finest parachute and tank troops.

Powerful Drive Smashes 15 Miles Into Edge of Ruhr

3rd Army Captures Trier, Key City of Moselle Valley

By JAMES M. LONG, ASSOCIATED PRESS STAFF WRITER

Paris, March 2.—(AP)— The swift and powerful United States 9th Army fought to the Rhine today and captured Neuss, suburb of Duesseldorf, in new spectacular 15-mile advances overrunning the western edge of the Ruhr.

Several miles to the north, other 9th Army troops plunged into the Ruhr steel and rail centre of Krefeld (170,000). The great Rhine port of Duisburg was only seven miles distant.

The United States 3rd Army captured Trier, oldest city in Germany and key to the whole Moselle valley leading to Coblenz and the middle Rhine. All organized resistance in the strongly fortified centre of 58,000 ceased before noon.

Town after town in the western edge of the Ruhr fell; the iron and steel centre of Krefeld (pop. 170,000) was only 3½ miles away.

The Rhine itself was reached by the 83rd Division at a point not immediately specified in the temporary lifting of a news blackout which has shrouded the 9th Army's advances for three days.

German Retreat Called Rout

Gen. Simpson's headquarters called the German 15th Army retreat a rout.

On the 9th Army's south flank, the United States 1st Army fought with great fury to within four miles from five miles from Cologne, ruhl-ward zone after dawn by 1,600 RAF and RCAF heavy bombers. Criticism of Roosevelt's Talk Muffles Democratic Predictions

Washington, March 2. (AP)—Republican criticism of President Roosevelt's Yalta report muffled Democratic predictions Congress ratifications the Senate is ready to go ahead with international peace plans.

While leaders Democratic Senator Majority Mr. Roosevelt gave them "no inkling" of administration plans at a joint session of Congress yesterday, Democratic powers in control filed him while having scored heavily on his plea for non-partisan consideration of world security proposals.

Mr. Roosevelt explained the Big Three agreement which he said would create "the greatest instrument and prosperous" Poland. He said the agreement also would assure the future of Europe and the world.

But a moment later he spoke extemporaneously of the great many prims dominas in the world who want to be heard and whose hearing, he said, might delay decisions. Almost universally, Congressmen declared he alluded to French Gen. de Gaulle, who declined an invitation to meet the President in Algiers.

Mr. Roosevelt appealed directly to the Senate, expressing the hope that will approve the charter of the United Nations before the United Nations hope to put together at the San Francisco International peace plans.

To Emasculate Robert A. Taft (Rep., Ohio) however, the President's talk was "disappointing" without news. Significantly, perhaps, Senator Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.), selected as a delegate to the San Francisco Conference, declined any comment.

Senator Joseph H. Ball (Rep., Minn.), broke the silence this time with the observation that he believes Mr. Roosevelt did "a good job of selling Congress on the idea that you can't have perfection—that progress in international security must be obtained through compromises."

SGT. GORDON FRALICK HOME FROM OVERSEAS

Overseas for approximately three years, Sgt. Gordon Fralick, R.C.A.F., is the guest of honor at the regular monthly dinner meeting of the Bay of Quinte chapter of the Society of Industrial Engineers, province of Ontario, which was held at the Y.M.C.A. under the joint chairmanship of Messrs. Ray Lennox and Carl Casey.

The speaker of the evening, Mr. H. E. Yardley, O.P.A., spoke on the subject "Planning for Post-War Building and Industrial Reconstruction." In his introductory remarks Mr. Yardley pointed out that one of the major trends, from an economic standpoint during this emergency period has been the tendency to drift away from the control principles necessary to sound management.

In the topic of "Standard Costs and Expense Control" the speaker said standard costs are the costs that should apply to a product under normal and efficient operation of a plant, factory, with intelligent methods of purchasing. "Expense Control relates to the method by which costs of indirect labor, supplies and expenses occur in connection with this particular line of control there are two factors that must be taken into consideration (a)Fixed expense and (b) Variable expense. Likewise in establishing sound competitive standard costs for post-war use, two important factors also must be considered (a) Planning required in the factor (b) Good Planning required in the factor."

Referring to post-war marketing conditions, the speaker felt that in the period after the war, sales are going to be on a highly competitive basis and for one to be in a fair way to be the opinion that management would have to be content with less profit, the department with less taxation and the workers with increased pay, without increased unreasonable wages. This is indicated the need for a "true picture of cost data," and better cost controls in order to compete in the post-war markets.

In conclusion, Mr. Yardley stated that there was no necessary short standard costs or expense budgets. They are just intelligent, common sense, predetermined estimate of what the costs ought to be under normal, efficient operating conditions.

The speaker was introduced by Mr. Carl Casey and the thanks of the meeting were extended to Mr. Yardley by Mr. Don LaFrance.

Knowing Costs Essential To Good Management Cost Accountants Told

The regular monthly dinner meeting of the Bay of Quinte chapter of the Society of Industrial Engineers, province of Ontario was held at the Y.M.C.A. under the joint chairmanship of Messrs. Ray Lennox and Carl Casey.

The speaker of the evening, Mr. H. E. Yardley, O.P.A., spoke on the subject "Planning for Post-War Building and Industrial Reconstruction." In his introductory remarks Mr. Yardley pointed out that one of the major trends, from an economic standpoint during this emergency period has been the tendency to drift away from the control principles necessary to sound management.

In the topic of "Standard Costs and Expense Control" the speaker said standard costs are the costs that should apply to a product under normal and efficient operation of a plant, factory, with intelligent methods of purchasing. "Expense Control relates to the method by which costs of indirect labor, supplies and expenses occur in connection with this particular line of control there are two factors that must be taken into consideration (a)Fixed expense and (b) Variable expense. Likewise in establishing sound competitive standard costs for post-war use, two important factors also must be considered (a) Planning required in the factor (b) Good Planning required in the factor."

Referring to post-war marketing conditions, the speaker felt that in the period after the war, sales are going to be on a highly competitive basis and for one to be in a fair way to be the opinion that management would have to be content with less profit, the department with less taxation and the workers with increased pay, without increased unreasonable wages. This is indicated the need for a "true picture of cost data," and better cost controls in order to compete in the post-war markets.

In conclusion, Mr. Yardley stated that there was no necessary short standard costs or expense budgets. They are just intelligent, common sense, predetermined estimate of what the costs ought to be under normal, efficient operating conditions.

The speaker was introduced by Mr. Carl Casey and the thanks of the meeting were extended to Mr. Yardley by Mr. Don LaFrance.

Three Musicians From Belleville And One From Trenton Winners In Kiwanis Music Festival

Four Boys, Pupils of Harry Green, Cornetist, of Belleville, Win Distinction for District

Outstanding accomplishments of three young Belleville musicians in carrying off a large number of prizes in the Kiwanis Music Festival here in Toronto last week is today being heralded as the most outstanding highlight praise by musically minded persons in this city.

Competing among approximately 2,000 other young musicians from all parts of Ontario, the three local boys, all pupils of Mr. Harry Green, well-known local cornetist and gold medallist at the C.N.E. competitions, brought several hats in greatly number of prizes than any other city in Canada. The splendid achievement of a local musical institute has a place in the competition to be held at Massey Hall where scholarships will be awarded.

Three Take Part.

The three Belleville musicians to take part in the festival were Bob Stebbings, 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Stebbings, 27 Bridge Street; Jackie Fenn, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fenn, 26 Ontario Street, and Donald Charlton, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlton, 36 Foster.

Trenton, Mr. Ben Hickey, accompanied the Belleville musicians to Toronto and was successful in winning 1st place in the open trombone class and 2nd place in his other class. Mr. Hickey's pupils here are junior members of the Belleville Kiwanis Band. While the Trenton musician is also a pupil of Mr. Green's, he has been accompanied by four pupils to Toronto and remained with them during the festival.

First In Euphonium Class.

Top ranking achievement among Mr. Harry Green's pupils who took part in the Toronto festival was that of Bob Stebbings, who was placed first in his own euphonium class and first in the open class. He was also awarded the special test contest prize for excellence in all round tonality in brass. He will now compete at Massey Hall for a $100 scholarship.

Competing for the first time among the province's young musicians, Jackie Fenn placed second in the open class for cornet players, while Donald Charlton placed 5th in his own class.

Sponsored by Bands.

The majority of young musicians competing in the festival were sponsored by their parent band organizations, and the results will be the four pupils of Mr. Green entered by the Belleville band, the open initiative and on the advice of their instructor.

Tribute to Mr. Green for his interest and painstaking instruction of the young musicians was paid today by Mr. Harry Moorman, manager of the Kiwanis Music Festival, when Mr. Green, he said, had spared no effort in preparing his pupils for competition in the festival and Belleville should be proud given hours of instruction to his pupils. Mr. Moorman also paid a credit to due for the local boys' splendid achievement in the festival it must go to Mr. Green", he said, "for his instruction."

As a special gesture of appreciation for their splendid achievement the Belleville musicians will receive prizes and awards from the local band organization.

Election Bill Given Second Reading In House

Toronto, March 2 — (CP) — The Ontario Legislature yesterday gave second reading to a bill which provides for drastic changes in the Election Act.

Provisions include assurance of the franchise to active service voters returning to civil life, regardless of whether they have reached the age of 21. The measure also extends the privilege of advance polls to anyone expecting to be absent from his home polling division on election day, and sets out that nomination day and polling day each shall be on Wednesday.

Bert Leavens (CCF — Toronto Woodbine) urged that the Act should lower the voting age from 21 to 18 years. If men and women at 18 are old enough to carry their shells in war and industry, they are old enough to have a vote in democracy under what economic system they will live, said Mr. Leavens. He was supported by William Riggs (CCF — Wilson - Walkerville) and Mrs. Rae Luckock (CCF — Toronto Bracondale).

Harry Nixon (L—Brant) advocated authorization, under the act, of the appointment of deputies to assist in taking a voter to vouch for another whose name had been inadvertently left off the voters' list.

Incorporation of the transferable vote system into Ontario municipal legislation was advocated by A. Kelso Roberts (CCF — Toronto St. Patrick). With three major parties, Mr. Roberts said, the method of allowing voters to indicate a second preference on the ballot is necessary "to reflect the true will of the electorate."

Appointment of two enumerators, of opposite political persuasion, in each provincial polling division is proposed in a bill amending the Voters' List Act which passed through committee.

Made an Offence

A bill repealing the Political Contributions Act, which makes it an offence for any company or association to contribute to the funds of a political party, received second reading. Another bill to amend the Crown Timber Act, passed in committee, would require any person cutting timber on public lands to pay the Lands and Forests Department $10 for each tree.

Premier George Drew told the House industrial research was necessary to meet the transition to

Citation Discloses Splendid Example Of Bravery

A high standard of leadership and splendid example of personal bravery in erecting a bridge across the Moselle River at Custert, Germany, won for Lieut. Herbert A. Hepburn, Royal Canadian Engineers, of Trenton, Ont., the Military Cross. The official citation released by the Department of National Defence disclosed today.

The citation states: "On October 13, 1944, a field squadron of Engineers was ordered to build a bridge across the Moselle River at Custert. This bridge was vital to the success of the advance to the north since upon its completion it would be the first and only means of getting wheeled vehicles across the canal.

The small bridgehead was being held by the Canadian Infantry Brigade, but the strong opposition and the bridgehead itself was continually under intense and accurate mortar and shell fire. Lieut. Hepburn, by Lieut. Dichburn was detailed to supervise the bridgehead on the enemy side of the canal. This meant that he was one of a dyke in open country in full view of the enemy only 200 yards away. To get out this work it was necessary for Lieut. Dichburn to cross to the far side of the canal early in the operations, exposing himself mostly during the day despite the extreme danger and with utter disregard for personal safety. He carried out this part of the work, and, assisted by Lieut. Hepburn completed the task accurately and efficiently.

Lieut. Ditchburn throughout the operation showed an exceptional high degree of leadership, His determination and the splendid example he set inspired the officers and party to carry on and complete the dangerous task thus securing the bridge crossing essential to the success of the operation."

ers were out, but did not give large details immediately.

The tremendous proportions of the sustained aerial offensive was revealed in official figures for February which showed that 21,000 tons of bombs were dropped by British-based bombers on Germany during the month.

The previous record month when the U.S. 8th Air Force bomb tonnage exceeded this was last June in good weather, but most of the bombing was in France in support of the Allied invasion armies.

Attacks have been made on 83 different rail centres during the month, the official announcement said, and 9 separate attacks were made on Berlin, more than half of one per cent of the total dispatched.

POWERFUL

A dispatch from Field Marshal Montgomery's headquarters declared as also that the shock troops of the 9th Army had captured the Weltersinde city of Venlo, 19 miles northwest of the captured Rurhr bridge and iron centre of Munchen Gladbach. There they were within 18 miles of the last Canadian Army moving down from the north.

U. S. 1st Army troops fought closer than five miles from cologne his today by 1,000 R.A.F. and R.C. A.F. bombers. The Americans also captured Boom on the Ruhrs, 15 miles away.

Fiesta in Streets

The U. S. 3rd Army fought in the ancient streets of Metz, driving guards the Moselle Valley and the middle Rhine. Two Moselle bridges were also captured in the sector, it was announced.

Field Marshal Montgomery's headquarters said the 9th Army was within 3 miles of Venlo, a city of 46,000. The Ruhrs nearby is 7 miles east, and 1,140 feet wide.

Ninth Army tanks and infantry teams drove to within 2¼ miles of the Ruhrs and Roer River port of Krefeld in a fiscort of gains reaching from 8½ to 15 miles yesterday alone. Krefeld is a city of 170,000 and contains many textile and steel mills.

Lifting of the blackout on 9th Army operations disclosed that the Americans had won control of the Roer dams when the plain across the Maag and Rhine in a lightning strike toward the north.

The 9th Army's 2nd Armored Division was the nearest to Krefeld. Viersen, just to the southwest, was taken by the 102nd Division.

Roer Dams Fall

Progress of the 9th northward was closing the lower jaw of a pincer, the upper part of which is formed by the 1st Canadian Army, which is battling in a tireless effort to wear down desperate German resistance.

The U. S. 1st Army announced its towns yesterday. It was estimated it had killed or wounded 2,000 and crossed the Roer eight days ago.

Venlo was one of the larger prizes, a Maas River communication of 37,000 and a major rail junction for traffic between Berlin and Antwerp. The capture of Venlo hopelessly isolated Roermond and Germans still here.

Savage Fighting.

There was savage fighting also on the north-west streets of Trier, guardian fortress city of the Moselle valley and approaches to the middle Rhine cities of Cologne and Mainz. Trier was all but surrounded; two of its bridges over the Moselle were destroyed.

The U. S. 1st Army pushing upon Cologne fought against a tough enemy dug in behind concrete pills and trenches. The Americans pointed 13 towns yesterday including Erp, 15 miles from the Bonn and Cologne road from the major traffic centre of Euskirchen.

Beating their way through the captured Siegfried defences, the advancing cities of Munchen Gladbach and Rheydt, the 9th Army neared Neuss, just across the Rhine from Duesseldorf. Neuss is the birthplace of Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels.

The exact whereabout of the tank and infantry of the wide-ranging 2nd Armored were not announced, but the Germans said Grevenbroich had reached Krefeld, 11 miles north of Munchen Gladbach and Rheydt, the 9th Army was within 23 miles of forming with the 1st Canadian Army a trap on thousands of the most German troops.

Germans Pulling Out.

The Germans, however, were pulling out—fast—toward and across the Rhine. British pilots spotted over 300 vehicles running with lights on last night on the Rhine ferry in the area of Krefeld, and the city the size of Miami.

Prisoners by the thousands filled Allied cages. Yesterday 3,000 more captives were taken in the 9th Army area. Canadian army forces on the north seized 600. The U.S. 8th, army surrounded several thousands of Germans south and southwest of Trier, and the 3rd Army continued cargo marching out with upraised hands.

Diisseldorf (pop. 532,000) was in easy artillery range of Army 105 howitzers and field rifles. The Americans were beyond Muenchen Gladbach, 10 miles away, the 150,000 population and the largest German city between the Ruhr and the Allies, which is only eight miles from Rheydt and 12 miles southwest. Bonn and Cologne both were within easy sight.

Cheerful Note.

Clear skies appeared at dawn for the first time in a week, allowing the harried and often disorganized Germans to withdraw their armies in their dangerously restricted area west of the Rhine. The river is 1,¼ miles wide at Duesseldorf and 1,700 feet wide at Cologne and 1,140 feet where the Ruhr empties.

The Erft bridgehead west of Cologne was widened and consolidated. Bergheim, one of the principal crossings, was cleared. Grevenbroich and Horrem also were taken.

Elsewhere, U.S. army gains, however were made south of the Roer in the important Rhineland road centre of Heinrich, fell. A cluster of nearby towns, Hochkirchen, Derkum, Frixheim, Junterdorf, Embken, Hoeningen, Dieterhin and Muntterbeih—also was cleared.

The German army was blasted at Allied bridges across the Erft last night, and were active over the entire front. U.S. 1st army ground guns destroyed 34 planes.

IN MEMORIAM

LATTA — In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Mary Anne Latta, who passed away March 2nd, 1945.

Time speeds on, two years have passed
Since death its gloom, its shadows cast
Within our home, where all seemed bright and fair
And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light, and ever will,
But God in His wisdom, He can fill.
Down here we mourn, but not in vain
For up in heaven we will meet again.

Fine Talent of Young Artists Pleases Large Crowd in First-Night Program of Kinsmen 1945 'Follies'

Featuring the fine talents of Ethel Smith, Bill Navin, Barbara Diment and her troupe, Herbert Southeran, solo dancer, and Gwen Rose's Dance School for the Blind, Marg Nash and her guitar, B.C.I.V.S. quartette and Barbara Diment's Kiddie Kinsmen Follies commenced its first performance of the two-night schedule on Thursday evening, held in the Collegiate auditorium, this superb musical-dancing show appeared before a good-sized audience of both old and young. Proceeds, which will go towards the Milk for Britain Fund were very gratifying.

A great deal of praise is due Mr. Bill Navin who directed the Follies. As a pianist and a vocalist, Bill is making quite a name for himself in local circles. Introduced by the assemblage by Bill, Mr. Harry Rollins, President of the Kinsmen Club, extended thanks to everyone for turning out on the occasion. "So far," he said, "the Kinsmen Clubs of Canada have shipped 12 million quarts of powdered milk to Britain."

All the artists on the program proved themselves outstanding as amateur entertainers. From the very oldest performer down to the very youngest they were "bright new stars in their own right," and gave their various numbers with the calmness and ease of artists of long standing. Barbara Diment especially should be commended for not only her own part in the program but for the very fine artistic ability shown by her dance pupils. Miss Barbara gave several vocal selections and loud ovation brought her back in encore after encore. Accompanying her at the piano was Bill Navin. Herbert Southeran with his flute delighted his listeners with his instrumentals, and assumed complete charge over his flute, the stage and his audience. The B.C.I.V.S. quartette added many very pleasant interludes to the program, in their comedy act. They were "really great" and had everyone in stitches. Worthy of warm praise is Arthur Duby, boy soprano, who rendered two solos.

Acting as Master of Ceremonies on the occasion was Mr. "Dert." Jeffery. Making up the cast were Mrs. Joe Miles and Miss Marion Lahey.

Program:

Canada's Political Uncertainty Weakening Says London Times

London, March 2 — (CP Cable) — The Times of London warned today that the present atmosphere of political uncertainty in Canada could lead to a weakening of the Dominion's position at the forthcoming World Security Conference in San Francisco.

Commenting that further prorogation of parliament accords with Prime Minister Mackenzie King's desire to keep the issue of conscription out of politics, the Times said the decision at this issue could hardly fail to follow racial lines of cleavage and by weakening the Dominion's unity impair its authority in the forthcoming international discussions.

"For the moment however postponement of dissolution has intensified the political uncertainty."

Referring to the transition of Canadian politics since 1940, the editorial said:

"Since then the C.C.F. has scored some notable victories in provincial elections and has polled a great deal at that the Dominion is moving towards a three-party system.

"Hope that an election would at last clear the air was an argument in favor of dissolution, which would be a serious blow to Canadian prestige if the country's authority in international councils were weakened by a precarious position at home."

Rumors Fire Bug Responsible For $300,000 Fire

Guelph, March 2 — (CP)—Rumors that a fire bug with a mania was at large here were held responsible for the two major fires which broke out here, estimated as high as $300,000 here yesterday, and which threw throughout the city today.

Police and fire officials were investigating the origin of several blazes which partially destroyed both the 80-year-old Bell Piano building and the Wellington Hotel, in the heart of the city. No one was injured seriously in either fire.

Damage was expected to reach $200,000 in the Bell building, fire which gutted the Canadian Legion quarters and scorched several other commercial and industrial firms in the block before it was halted. Earlier flames had caused $100,000 damage to the hotel.

The fire bug rumors arose when flames broke out in the Regent Hotel. The fire was quickly brought under control.

The afternoon tea and sale of homecooking held in Bridge Street United Church Parlours on Thursday afternoon under the auspices of the Red Cross Unit of the church is reported as the finest financial success of its kind since the organization of the unit. Treasurer for the afternoon was Mrs. F. Countryman.

Masons Hear Story Of the Evacuation Of Singapore in '42

The evacuation of Singapore, prior to that great naval base falling to the Japanese, was the interesting topic heard by scores of the Masonic Temple when Captain A. L. Goddard spoke to the officers and members of The Belleville Lodge No. 123 A. F. & A. M.

Captain Goddard was in charge of the Empress of Japan, at the outbreak of war. Today he is with the C.P.R. liner is known as the Empress of Scotland. Captain Goddard was in charge of the Empress of Scotland and was in full charge of the evacuation of all women and children from that great naval base. The evacuation was completed with success, and all women and children in the port who desired to leave were taken aboard.

The speaker was introduced by Bro. R. G. Woodley, who also introduced his son, L. G. Woodley of the Canadian Merchant Marine. Oiler Woodley was aboard the "Anona," when that craft was sunk by German submarines in the Gulf of Mexico some months ago. At the time Captain Goddard was "skipper" of the "Anona" and last night met Oiler Woodley for the first time since the sinking.

Also present in the lodge room was Major Marsh, of the salvation Army, who was also given brief details of the evacuation of Singapore from Captain Goddard as he had relatives there when the Japanese struck.

The entertainment was in charge of Wor. Bro. George Station, Past Master of Belleville Lodge, who presided in the absence of Wor. Bro. Smith, who is indisposed. A capacity-filled lodge room heard Captain Goddard's interesting and educational discourse.

MacDonald Ave. Home Damaged by Fire

Fire of an undetermined origin caused considerable damage to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Brown, 321 MacDonald Avenue, late Thursday afternoon when in the absence of the owners flames started in the kitchen doing fire damage to furniture and smoke damage to furnishings in other parts of the home.

No estimate of damage done to the kitchen and to furnishings was made by firemen who fought the blaze for over an hour before it was brought completely under control. The Brown homestead is just outside the city limits on the east side of MacDonald Ave.

In the absence of the owner the fire obtained considerable start before being noticed by neighbors who turned in the alarm. Firemen were away from the fireball for almost two hours as result of the call. Entry had to be forced into the home as doors were locked.

U.S. Has Produced 246,845 Planes To End of 1944

New York, March 2. (AP)—William L. Batt said today United States war production must continue "at full blast" for "military landings" in the Pacific and land campaigns, perhaps the European scale.

The Army and Air forces will have to be "pretty completely redeployed" to fight Japan, the vice chairman of the War Production Board said in an address to a Rotary Club luncheon.

Mr. Batt disclosed in his address that this country has sent 36,471 heavy bombers into the air from July, 1940 to the end of 1944. All types of planes numbered 246,845, of which 79,776 were fighters and 18,547 were transports.

In merchant vessels we have produced 42,392,000 deadweight tons of ocean-going cargo ships. Of naval vessels there have been constructed no fewer than 56,997.

The President wanted 45,000 tanks. Well, we have actually turned out 88,410.

"We have produced 37,198,000,000 rounds of small arms ammunition, 2,077,000,000 rounds of artillery ammunition, . . . 4,130,000 tons of aircraft bombs, 86,646,000 grenades".

Mayor's Secretary Acquitted of Charges

Hamilton, March 2 — (CP) — William Patterson, secretary to the Mayor of Hamilton, was acquitted this morning of charges of assaulting Wilhelmina McCash after the alleged commitment a birth and of obstructing police but was convicted and fined $100 and costs for failing to obey a police order he knew he was required to do so.

Mr. Justice Leo Landriault told Mr. Patterson he was "a man of good standing in the community and an official of the Young Pool for 20 years." Mr. Justice Lazier said in his summary that the allegation that Patterson had had relation with Mrs. McCash had not been proved and "there was only a likelihood of it having happened."

Such an act was unbelievable by a man of "taste and discrimination" such as Mr. Patterson, the Judge said.

Montreal, March 2 — (CP)—Albert Guay, early this morning was hanged in Montreal jail for the murder of 31-year-old Jeanne D'Arc Marie, his girl-friend, outside Joliette, 30 miles north of here, three years ago.

Plouffe was pronounced dead a few minutes after the trap opened under him on the gallows.

Guay had confessed two trials. In the first, the jury disagreed while in the second he was convicted and sentenced to hang. He went to death shouting Miss Mario.

Last week he was called as a witness to testify in the murder trial of Joseph Romeo Boucher and Rene Ouellet, charged with the slaying of an infant in Gerard Lauzon, at the Montreal jail.

Army Recruiting Office Will Open Here Next Week

Recruiting offices for the accommodation of young men desirous of enlisting in the Canadian Active Army will be opened in various parts of the district on Monday, March 5th, Captain G. Hayes, district recruiting officer announced today.

Captain Hayes and his staff will be in Belleville at the Armouries every day from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Mondays and from 10 a.m. to 12 noon on Fridays or each week. In the meantime, potential recruits may secure all necessary information from Captain C. Riley, or his staff in the recruiting rooms of the Argyll Light Infantry at the Armouries any day from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

In other parts of the district, offices will be opened at the Picton and Trenton armouries. Recruits will receive free transportation to M.D. 3 Headquarters at Kingston.

The army recruits will be drawn from the war fronts, still needs for the home front, the work of those who have gone on before. Canada's Ma'e stated, and all young men between the ages of 18 and 45 years of age are urged to join the colors. Proof of birth must be produced by potential recruits.

Only 32 Donors From City Attend Thursday Clinic

There was little enthusiasm on the part of Blood Donor Clinic officers at Kiwanis Centre on Thursday night when only 32 donors from the city appeared to give their blood.

Despite many appeals made through personal and newspaper media, there is still a lackadaisical attitude on the part of city residents to donate their blood for this all-important phase of the war effort, officials say.

RCAF personnel from the air stations of the district, and residents of outlying rural districts, towns and villages have set a splendid example in assisting the clinic committee by their donations and although a large number of city residents have done likewise, it is felt that there still remains a large number who could help this important work by offering their blood to the clinic here.

Of the 32 donors who attended the clinic this week, the majority were women, many of whom had completed their daily tasks prior to giving their blood.

POLICE COURT

Permitting a dog to run at large cost Edward Berry of this city $6 and costs when he appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills today. This is his highest fine for offence imposed for such an offence in some time. Crown Attorney C. G. Dunnan referred to it as a flagrant case.

Several motorists paid the customary fee for parking after admitting they had imbibed freely, but not well, of intoxicants. All paid up except Victor Jordan and Enoch Wright, two out-of-towners, who were given time in which to raise the assessed fine and costs.

A non-support case slated for trial was further enlarged when the defendant failed to respond to his name. Mr. E. E. Follwell, solicitor for the plaintiff, suggested the matter be further enlarged for a week.

Appreciation of Poles' Service

Mr. Churchill's suggestion that the citizenship and freedom of the British Empire may be offered to Polish troops which had fought under British command in the war was a graceful expression of a leader who appreciates the service that the Poles have rendered in the war, those who served in the British forces and all others who in great numbers have fought the battle of freedom of the world. Polish soldiers, sailors and airmen can look back on a notable service record. They have left on the minds of the British people the impression of a noble, heroic and freedom-loving race. Mr. Churchill said that Britain would never forget them all.

"For all those who served under our command I earnestly hope it will be possible for them to have the citizenship and freedom of the British Empire if they so desire," he explained that the matter would have to be taken up with United Kingdom and the Dominions "and that takes time."

Such an honor, one of the greatest that Britain could show men who had fought under British command would be appreciated deeply by the Polish servicemen. There is no doubt of that. They can realize in this how much Britain and the Empire think of them.

Reports on Yalta Conference

The two leaders of the great English-speaking democracies have spoken on the Yalta conference and its importance to the world of today and the future. Mr. Churchill spoke last Tuesday to the British Commons and President Roosevelt addressed the United States Congress on Thursday, calling the decisions reached as marking a turning point in American history and saying that it was up to Congress to underwrite world collaboration for the peace of the world or "bear the responsibility for another world conflict," the statesmanship of the conference in bearing entirely fruitful results resting largely in the hands of Congress.

The Allies demand unconditional surrender and the President voiced the ultimatum to that purpose. At the same time he indicated that a general surrender of the Nazi overthrown was not expected.

The ideals of the United Nations were expressed in these words, "our objective in handling Germany is simple,—it is to secure the peace of the future world and that the German people must understand that "only with complete surrender can they begin to re-establish themselves as people whom the world might accept as decent neighbors."

Yalta conference was a successful effort to find a common ground for peace he said. "It spells the end of the system of unbalanced alliances and exclusive alliances and spheres of influence and balances of power and all other expedients which have been tried for centuries—and have failed. We propose to substitute for all these a universal organization in which all peace-loving nations will finally have a chance to join."

The President drew a picture of the success of such a plan. "I am confident that the Congress and the American people will accept the results of this conference as the beginnings of a permanent structure of peace upon which we can begin to build, under God, that better world in which our children and grandchildren—yours and mine, the children and grandchildren of the whole world—must live."

Another paragraph contained his philosophy, "world peace is not a party question—any more than is military victory. The structure of world peace cannot be the work of one man, or one party, or one nation. It cannot be a structure of complete perfection at first."

The issue of the Polish question he saw as an example of the success of joint action and he said the Big Three found common ground in its solution.

He gave his conviction that the agreement was "the most hopeful agreement possible in free, independent and prosperous Polish state."

The Allies are united and determined to continue to be united until the idea of lasting world peace will become a reality."

Peace does not mean the enslavement of the German people. Unconditional surrender means not the destruction of the German people, but the temporary control of Germany by the Big Three and France, the end of Nazism and the Nazi party with all its barbaric laws and institutions, the termination of all militaristic influence in the public, private and cultural life of Germany and the punishment of that war criminals that is speedy and just—and severe." It means the disarmament of the German General Staff along with reparations in kind and he added, "we do not want the German people to starve or become a burden on the rest of the world."

On Thursday the British House of Commons unanimously by 413 to 0 gave the Churchill Government evidence of its confidence in him and the Government.

Mr. Churchill on Tuesday had declared that the proposed Polish frontier would not sow the seeds of future wars and assured the British House of Russia's good faith. He affirmed that it was the duty of the Great Powers to serve the world and not rule it. On the world security organization he said that it was to be strongly armed body "that we look to prevent wars of aggression or the preparation of such wars and to enable disputes between states both great and small to be adjusted by peaceful and lawful means, by persuasion, by pressure of public opinion, by legal methods and eventually by another category of methods which constitute the principle of this new organization. In this new body the United States will play a vitally important part "in that the new body will not shrink from establishing its will against the evil doer or the evil planner in good time and by force of arms."

Canada's War Production

(Drumheller Mail)

During the five years of war, Canada has produced enough steel to build a battleship for every pound the world; enough lumber to build 9½ cities; enough armored vehicles to equip the whole German army; enough bullets to fire two into every living person on earth.

She has gone into new businesses such as production of synthetic rubber, plane (including the first plywood plane in the world, the Mosquito), radar, precision instruments, new alloy steels and super-explosives. Her scientists have led the world in many fields, notably in dehydrated foods, the famous anti-seasickness pills, bacon-curing without heavy salting—and hundreds of others, many of them military secrets for the duration.

In addition, Canadian farmers, who have lost half a million of their younger people to industry and the services since war began, have upped production by over 40 per cent., and in the fifth year of war raised crops that totted up an all-time high for farm cash income of $1,750,000,000.

Noted Commons Families

(New York Times)

Another well known member of Parliament is sufficiently recovered from a threatening illness to show interest in politics. David Lloyd George, only two days after the dispatching bulletins from his sickroom where he was fighting pneumonia, was sitting up for a short while and listening to an account of doings in the House of Commons from his fellow-member and daughter Megan. It is a truly family combination of many year's standing of which the third member is the son and brother, Gwilym Lloyd George, now one of Winston Churchill's Ministers.

Daughters have been much in the political light recently, not as politicians but as daughters. Sarah Churchill has accompanied her father on some of-his trips. Anna Boettiger made the journey to Yalta. Could this be one of the reasons why the psychiatrists, the specialists in child delinquency, and the playwrights have recently been emphasizing the fact that family affection is a pretty good thing after all?

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright, 1944, Edgar A. Guest)

When I get home, my favorite dish
Will not be ham or beef or fish
Of any brand.
I'm sure my lucky I'll surely blow
If served, when out to dine I go,
Some product, canned.

When lunch or supper time begins,
I hope it will not come from tins.

I've had my fill of rations canned.
I fairly dread to take in hand
The opening key.
And should some good friend think I am
A fancier of potted ham,
Dead wrong, she'll be.
When I get home again, I'll say,
I'll even hate the letter K.

Dear relatives, your table's spread
With home-made jelly, home-made bread
And chilli, too.
When back I get, my only wish
Will be for some good, family dish
Which once I knew.
Please, for a month or two, I beg:
No potted ham; no powdered egg!

Mental Processes of Jap Soldiers Are Continual Puzzle to Americans

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Marianas Islands.—(Delayed)—Soldiers and marines have told me stories by the dozen about how tough the Japs are to kill. Even more they are; how illogical and yet how unreasonably brave. It is almost necessary to rout when disorganized, yet how brave.

I've become more confused with each story. At the end of one evening, I said: "I can't make head nor tail out of what you've told me, I'm trying to learn about the Jap soldiers, but everything you say about them seems to be contradictory."

"That's the answer," my friends said, "they are inconsistent. They do the damndest things. But they are dangerous fighters just the same."

They tell one story about a Jap officer and six men who were surrounded, on a hillside by a small bunch of Marines.

As the Marines approached, the scout saw the Jap officer shouting orders to his men, and then all six bent over and fastened hand grenades to the line and chopped off their heads with his sword.

Then as the Marines closed in, he stood knee-deep in his men and beat his bloody sword against the water in a fierce gesture of defiance just before they shot him.

What code led the officer to kill his own men rather than allow them flight to the death is something only another Jap would know.

Another little story — a Marine sentry walking up and down before a command post on the of a steep bluff one night heard a noise in the brush on the hillside below. He called out, but there was no answer, then fired an exploratory shot down into the darkness. In a moment there was a loud explosion from below. A solitary Jap hiding down there had put a hand grenade to his chest.

Why he did that, instead of tossing it up over the bluff and getting himself a few more Americans is beyond an American's comprehension.

On Saipan, they tell of a Jap plane that appeared over the island bright noonday, all alone. He circled around the airstrip and then came in over the Navy transport area. He had flown in all the way from Japan, and dropped it "In Honor of Japan's Glorious Dead," on Saipan.

We shot-him down into the sea a few minutes later, as he undoubtedly knew we would before he ever left Japan. The gesture is touching —but so what?

As I've talked with Marines, I've begun to get over that creepy feeling that fighting Japs is like fighting snakes or ghosts.

They are human, but they are people with certain tactics and with enough experience over men have learned how to fight them.

As far as I can see, our men are not afraid of them. They know they are of the Germans. They have a healthy respect for any mortal soldier is afraid of his foe, not because they disapprove or ridicule but simply because they have enough experience and fire them the good tough soldiers they are. That's reason enough to be afraid of us in exactly the same way.

Some of our people over here think that, in the long run, the Japs won't take the beating the Germans have. Others think they will, and even more.

I've been here long enough really to learn anything of the Jap psychology. But the Pacific war is gradually getting condensed, and consequently tougher and tougher. The closer we go to Japan itself, the harder it will be.

The Japs are dangerous people and they aren't funnies. When we get guns in their hands, it would be like giving a child gasoline and their power to do us damage, or their will to do it. To me it looks like soul-trying days for us in the years ahead.

In spite of federal laws, state and municipal ordinances or regulations it is still no easy matter to buy pain-killers, narcotics and so-called "harmless" sedatives or get into the habit of taking such drugs. Many of these addicts justify their indulgence by saying, unfortunately with truth, that a physician prescribed the stuff some time or other. That may well, at least, could be remedied by a law or regulation limiting the refilling of physicians' prescriptions or the filling of prescriptions for others than the person for whom the prescriptions are given—the physician naming the individual in the prescription as well as dating and signing it prior to dispensing.

CANADIAN ARMY

The surprising feature of this operation is that there has been no significant enemy withdrawal which would indicate a collapse of the German defence, Stanley Baldwin, Daily Mail correspondent with Field Marshal Montgomery has got the U. S. 9th, which is on the east, and the Germans in the north are still fighting hard, and have yet they continue to fight hard. The whole picture is that they are not doing what happened last summer in the Caen-Falaise sector, or Normandy, the Canadians are hitting the main German forces while the Americans hook around behind them.

There has been some loosening of the German defences on the west section of the Canadian front between the Rhine and Ruhr rivers, with British troops on the right and the former about 1½ miles. However, the fact that the Rhine, the Germans and the British were not yet over the Rhine here, which runs through the outskirts of Cleves, although they made gains in woods to the south.

Six hundred and fifty prisoners were taken yesterday, bringing the Canadian Army haul since Jan. 1 to 7,000.

Says Jap Marauders' Lady Holland quotes Sidney Smith as saying of Lord Melbourne: "What a man that would be had he the knowledge of the value of a red tape."

Easing of Tension Seen In House

Toronto, March 2 — (CP) — The tension which gripped members of Queen's Park yesterday was dissipated with the largest crowd in years, and a full house in attendance at both Premier Drew and Mitchell F. Hepburn, Liberal House leader, speak in the Throne Speech debate.

However, excitement was lacking. The Premier spoke for more than 15 minutes of the three-hour sitting. The Liberal leader's turn is to be followed by Mr. Hepburn.

The Globe and Mail reported a "noticeable easing of tension in the atmosphere" at Queen's Park yesterday as a result of a truce and a well-informed source that the 30-man C.C.F. group and the 13-man Liberal bloc to avoid joining in a vote against the government whose 90 members are outnumbered by the Progressive Conservatives. Next week, until the budget is debated then, and any new taxes are disclosed.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

HOPELESS, EH?

A correspondent inquires whether there is some non-habit-forming drug that will relieve pain in a case of sciatica which is "hopeless." Sciatica is a term loosely applied to painful or disabling conditions presumed to be due to inflammation of the largest nerve in the body, the sciatic nerve, extending from the roots in the lower part of the spinal cord down back of the hip and thigh to the inner side of leg and foot.

Not all cases of so-called sciatica are sciatic neuritis (nerve inflammation), however. In a good many instances the pain and disability ascribed to sciatica are actually due to other causes, but it is beyond our province to discuss the pathology of these conditions here.

In exceptional cases the prospect of cure or great improvement is indeed hopeless, but that is far more than good I shall not mention just what cases I have in mind. The writer has treated many cases of pain and disability in the sciatic region—it seems hardly necessary to mention that there is no specific or peculiar condition or ailment to be labeled as "sciatica"—a correct diagnosis and the proper medical, surgical or orthopedic treatment will either cure the trouble or bring about sufficient improvement to make pain-killers unnecessary.

The difficulties to regard the condition as "hopeless" is too often the reason for resorting to habit-forming drugs. It reminds me of Grandma's case. Grandma always seemed pretty rugged to me, although I have observed that when she was a little girl she had infantile paralysis. Shattuck of Boston had discovered that one of her lungs was gone, and sure enough, when I carried my stethoscope I couldn't hear anything but a faint echo along the missing lung or over the other one either, but could not attempt to admit it), which confirmed yesterday's belief that she had lived for most of her lifetime with only one lung.

In spite of federal laws, state and municipal ordinances or regulations it is still no easy matter to buy pain-killers, narcotics and so-called "harmless" sedatives or get into the habit of taking such drugs. Many of these addicts justify their indulgence by saying, unfortunately with truth, that a physician prescribed the stuff some time or other. That may well, at least, could be remedied by a law or regulation limiting the refilling of physicians' prescriptions or the filling of prescriptions for others than the person for whom the prescriptions are given—the physician naming the individual in the prescription as well as dating and signing it prior to dispensing.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Sciatic Pain

Is there any non-habit-forming drug that will relieve sciatic pain. Member of our family is a hopeless invalid from such pain in right leg and foot, and we are anxious to get something to take the place of narcotics. (F.R.)

Answer—Isn't the essential trouble the readiness of the patient or the family to regard the ailment as "hopeless"? That is a familiar excuse for indulgence in narcotics. Instead of searching for something that is not of high value, why not get the patient away from the bad influence of the family, under the care of a competent physician who will make a careful diagnosis and apply proper treatment.

How to Gain Weight

I gained 8 1-2 pounds the first two months at home after I received pneumonia treatment in the hospital, but although I still have appetite and eat once a week I have lost part of that weight, but my doctor says it is not due to my appetite. Can you suggest what's-somehow I never want breakfast. (P.D.)

Answer—You may get some practical help from that pamphlet "How to Gain Weight" and stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for it—but do not use a clipping.

Calcium and Rheumatism

I have what doctors call chronic arthritis, mainly in the fingers and one knee. The program in the new booklet "The Pills Called Rheumatism" is very similar to that given in my job. I saw a reference to a booklet which I think contains calcium for rheumatism. (H.R.)

Answer—Send stamped addressed envelope and ask for pamphlet "Calcium and Rheumatism."

RED TAPE

"Red Tape" in the sense of official formality and delay, originated in England in the 17th century.

The custom of tying up papers in such tape dates back several centuries. We find it referred to in an advertisement printed in a London newspaper in 1658.

Nathaniel Ward (1771-1846), English clergyman, wit and essayist, referred to have contributed much toward the "Anatomy of Melancholy" under the pseudonym of Democritus Junior.

In his "Memoirs" Lady Holland quotes Sidney Smith as saying of Lord Melbourne: "What a man that would be had he the knowledge of the value of a red tape."

In the United States, red tape and "bureaucracy" are synonymous terms. Bureaucrats are reputed to worship red tape, that is, they adhere rigidly to rules and regulations and give excessive attention to routine.

To ridicule the delay of government business. It was customary in the ordinary man, impatient for action in the transaction of affairs of rule or the everlasting tying and untying of red tape on the documents and document cases.

Thomas Carlyle, in "Latter-Day Pamphlets", Thomas Carlyle referred to a statesman of his day as "Dapper Jack, with his red tape and official chine and unhappy bag of parliamentary documents."

Charles Dickens, in "Little Dorrit," published in 1857, described the thing without using the term. Whatever was required to be done, was by Circumlocution Office was beforehand with all the public departments in the art of perceiving how not to do it."

In the United States, red tape and "bureaucracy" are synonymous terms. Bureaucrats are reputed to worship red tape, that is, they adhere rigidly to rules and regulations and give excessive attention to routine.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

The Golden Wedding of my parents is to be next month, and my sisters, brothers and I are giving a party for relatives and friends. We don't know how to go about making plans for this, but we will do anything you tell us to make it a happy occasion, for we dearly love our parents.

Do you think it would be nice to serve a buffet supper with a cake? And would you tell us anything special we should have? Should my mother make a short speech of thanks?

M.C.

To give honor and festivity to this "golden" occasion I hope you'll plan several special features. First as lovely a table-setting as your resourceful imagining can contrive. Then a yellow or gold-colored bouquet (if you haven't one, could you borrow one from a near relative or friend?) a centerpiece of glowing, yellow flowers (if this is possible), and if possible, using yellow china or with yellow doilies and yellow candles. Next, have as afford... a white cake as you can obtain, and with the "wonderful" decoration, of course, in yellow, and, as at the original wedding reception, have your mother cut the first piece of cake to share with her bridegroom. Plan to have some kind of beverage, perhaps a fruit punch, for the guests to drink and a toast "to the bride and bridegroom", arrange beforehand for someone to propose this toast (perhaps the best man or some other man who attended their wedding, or your eldest brother), and have your father, the "bridegroom," respond to it, thanking for himself and his "bride", naturally saying something about the golden occasion and how blessed they are to reach each other's side. Then ask your father (to have a surprise for him, fifty years), and how happy they are to have this grand reunion with their family and friends on this second day. Another lovely feature, I suggest a joint gift from you daughters and sons: for your mother to carry, a charming old-fashioned bouquet of yellow roses-buds (or small Talisman roses), in a lace-paper holder, and have the "bridegroom" wear one of the rose-buds in his lapel.

Yes, have buffet service: having your party either from three or four o'clock six or so, and serving a simple tea-menu; or serving a dessert-course at six.

Make No Sentimental Gestures

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

A girl has been going with a soldier for several years; she was nearly 18 when he left, and now that a misunderstanding or quarrel with him. If they decide to part in a friendly way, is it proper for her to give him a ring "in remembrance"? If not, would you suggest another gift?

Jane

Since they have decided to terminate their friendship, I think it would be silly for the girl to give the man something to "remember" her by, and apparently he wants to "forget." Giving him a ring would be in the worst possible taste; and giving him any other gift would, under the circumstances, be ridiculous. The thing for the girl to do is to accept the decision with grace and dignity and not to make any sentimental gestures.

Corsage Should Harmonize With Color of Dress

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. When my fiance comes home on furlough, he wants me married. I'm planning to wear a floor-length white crepe dress and small headpiece with a veil. My question: What would be appropriate for my bouquet?

2. Would a business suit be appropriate for the best man to wear?

3. I suggest that your attendants wear a corsage of white to harmonize with the color of her dress.

2. The Yes, a business suit.

Girl Electrician Can Turn Hand To Many Trades

Versatility that enables her to do any sort of a job from wiring a house for electricity to making things for tiny tots, is one of the outstanding feminine characteristics of Miss Helen Benn, secretary of this city and now an electrician she employ of Jack Kipp Elma Tweed, Elva Dorothy Curry, writes in her weekly column in the Tweed News.

The former Bristol Aircraft soft-ball star has a natural yen to "fix things" and although she had donned the overalls of an electrician she immediately stepped back into feminine character when the work brought an addition to the family of her employer.

She is the type, the Tweed reporter writes, that can almost do anything if given a few instructions, from cooking to operating any kind of a machine." "I simply love to tinker it" funny." Miss Benn told the newspaperwoman when I have always liked machines; schoolbooks interested me but that's why I had something to fix, then I was happy."

Learns How Easily.

Large chunks of adaptability are secreted within the petite frame of the Tweed electrician for she "never read anything about electricity just watched until I got the hang of it." And she is clever along these lines for her employer says she is the smartest helper he ever had. "She can go out and wire any house and it would pass inspection without a bit of criticism," is his opinion.

Born in this city, the three R's soon became irksome and she decided to do something about that sort of physical action. So she stitched shoes for a while at the Bata Company plant and later gained employment at the then Bristol Aircraft Company. Here her versatility found its full scope and she became a sort of a flying repair squadron, flitting from one department to another wherever her services were needed. She was a jill-of-all-trades, one day manufacturing noses for airplanes and the next fixing a gadget on a machine.

Then she satisfied her urge for things mechanical with 16 months employment in a machine shop. But after all, she was feminine and the eternal note, time and grease caused its toll of the Benn nerves and she decided the best thing for Helen was a change of environment with the main ingredient fresh air and plenty of it.

So last September she asked her present employer if she could learn the electrical business. He agreed and she did. In six short months she has crammed something more than elementary electricity in her head and developed with it an almost uncanny ability with pliers, pliers and wire.

Repair of electrical appliances was easy for her, and she naively replied to the newspaperwoman's query that it must have been time to learn this phase of the work with "It's just a matter of something out and putting something in."

When interviewed by Mrs. Curry, this amazing young woman was busy stitching some flimsy material in a bassinet in order to make transportation comfortable for the new Benn arrival. Later she assisted in making those delicate things necessary to a new member of the population, and in all probability before that job was done had laid aside her needle and thread, picked up her pliers and cable and was busily a building assisting her employer with the wiring.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

LONG DISTANCE LOVE-STORY

It is possible to love a man—or a girl—you've never seen? I believe it is. In fact, I am in love with one of mine, Lucille A. tells me all about it. This girl is herself deeply in love with a soldier whom she hasn't even seen who should recognize this description.

That part of it, she says doesn't matter. What you love in another person, she thinks, is what he or she is like—or if you do, you're foolish. It's what goes on inside of them that you love—the way he thinks, the way he feels and, Oh, in this's case, the way he writes—for Bill does write sweet letters!"

Lucille, you are, is an idealist, I gather that she would be happy to continue indefinitely this exciting correspondence between herself and her beloved. What troubles her is that they are about to meet and that she cannot sleep for fear their love may not stand the test of meeting.

She fears herself would love Bill, she thinks, whatever he may be like, personally. Any little tricks of voice or manner would only make her love him all the more. But what will she seem like to him the way many of thought or her as beautiful or fascinating, when she is neither. Though his letters convince Lucille satisfied him completely, still the final Lucille he is unable even to hold his interest? Now, he is all her's, an eager, amorous lover. In a few weeks, will he accept such awkward promises he has made?

I have written Lucille that I am sure there is no danger. There will be a few uncomfortable moments, perhaps, at that first meeting. But the important thing is that they are the same type of human being. As they have proved, they understand. They already thoroughly know and love each other and neither cares about externals.

My conviction is they are running no risk in meeting at last, and that they have a much better chance of future happiness than if some tricky, deceptive charm had entered about their romance. And I have sent them my blessing for their wedding day.

The Young and Irresponsible When They Marry

Dear Miss Fairfax;

We've been married three years. Most of this time we've lived with my parents, as my husband wasn't ready to settle down. Our little girl is two years old. My husband's parents are wonderful, but he's back in Canada now.

He shows me pictures and letters from girls, crazy over a man in uniform. Meanwhile I've been corresponding with an old sweetheart. We're still in love, and he's very glad to marry if I could get a divorce. He's recently pleaded with me to stay with him when he heard this, and we took an argument.

I'm willing to give up my former sweetheart if my husband would give up his affairs with other women, calling them pet names, and even sticking with before people. I've gone back to my parents again and I'm thinking seriously of a divorce. The other man is waiting to make a good home for me.

Lucille

Too late to tell you now that you were both too young and inexperienced when you married. I would forbid your husband, as you suggest, to have his name until the old sweetheart made a good stepfather! You couldn't have been so deeply in love with the old sweetheart when you gave him up to marry your husband. How will he seem now that you're both older, and Life has lost some of its illusions?

If you decide to remain with your husband, insist upon his observing the decencies of life—such, as refraining from striking you even if you have to invoke the law. There's more to marriage than a flirtation; one has to be really adult to make a success of it with anyone.

Engaged to One Man—She Cheers Another Kid"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been in the service since Pearl Harbor, and have frequently become engaged to a girl. I've just returned from overseas, and while there she wrote me frequently every day. Since I've come home she has written me letters from a boy she has known for years, who writes that he loves her and wants to marry her if she'll have him.

I've asked her to stop corresponding with him, but she says he's just a lonesome kid and doesn't have a thing by what he writes. She won't stop writing him, and when she hears from him she acts very cold toward me. I don't know where I stand.

Do you think she should keep on writing to this boy unless she tells him she's engaged to me?

A Soldier

The girl is unfair to you as she is to the lonesome kid. Who she claims doesn't mean a thing to her. If the girl amounts to anything at all as you say she should come out frankly and make a decision. It's unfair to string along the "lonesome kid"; she should tell him of her engagement to you.

The Marry Go Round

WAR JOBS AND WIVES

Will a war job with its accompanying thrill of independence and a pay-envelope spoil a girl for marriage? Will men be able to keep their women back into the home and the kitchen after the war?

These are the disturbing questions at the back of many a serviceman's mind when he reads a glowing letter from the Girl Friend describing her new war job.

Don't let her fool you! Her enthusiasm is genuine, but nearly every normal girl is a "homebody" at heart and will be only too glad to exchanges her job in an office or a factory for a job in the home when the time comes. It is only the rare girl who has a career to a home.

Meantime that temporary excitement of a new job and business job will have made your "home girl" a better bet as a life-partner. WORK is a tonic that builds character, strengthens the mind and sometimes sweetens a spoiled disposition. It takes the bored look out of a young woman's eyes and puts a healthy glow into the "bridegroom" wear one of the rose-buds in his lapel.

A girl who has learned how hard it is to earn a dollar, will have a heart about keeping any man's nose to the grindstone so that she may fritter away his hard-earned cash on beauty-parlor and new hats and mattress.

A girl who has spent a year or two or three among the men in a business office, a government office or a war-plant has a better understanding of men and more sympathy with them. Lots of foolish illusions and whims and feminine caprice have been smoothed out of her by the steam-roller of discipline.

A girl who has had to get up at six or seven A.M. six times a week has a sense of duty to the man she marries out and keep him at parties until 2 A.M. when he has had a hard day's work. And a girl who is busy from nine to five-has no time to hang around grills and bars and hotel lobbies looking for diversions—or cheap flirtations.

The girl who feels that she is accomplishing something, doing something worth while and has a definite objective in life every day, is bound to develop greater personality and more character along with her skill and self-reliance. And these things can transform her from the selfish amoeba of adolescence into a genuine Grade A woman.

Some girls may want to hold on to their jobs and their pay-envelopes after marriage, and many may HAVE to go on working for a while until their husbands get started. But most natural-minded girls will be only too happy to exchange an office desk for a nursery when and as soon as they can.

No, a war-job will not spoil a girl for marriage—it will make her a better bet as a wife!

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

The glowing flesh will cause the alcoholic content of the perfume to evaporate, leaving only the flowered fragrance. If you feel that this is an expensive indulgence, use a toilet water which is less costly than the essences. Sachet powder is a solace to the girl who has to keep close track of the beauty budget.

Keep perfumes tightly corked.

Perfume casts a magic spell

You may not have had your favorite perfume for a long time. If you found it, it would probably cost as much as a king's ransom. But there are sweet scents to be had, and some of them at reasonable prices — especially toilet waters that are sweet and refreshing.

If there is something heavy perfume that makes a girl feel rich and glamorous. It has a romantic quality that is a help when one is in bit ragged out, fears one has lost allure. It is exquisitely frivolous that is why we love it. If it is subtle and compelling, it is a treat to the public nose.

In pre-war days, the astute minds of the perfume industry used to tell us quite solemnly that we needed different perfumes for different frocks, different moods, different occasions. They can't do that now. We'd hand them a kick in it. It was a ridiculous idea, anyway. The average woman is content to have one bottle of florsited sweetness, to use it sparingly, to make it a part of her. One scent, used all the time, soaks up on itself, impregnates the system. To mix perfumes may be to destroy them as two perfumes may fight each other until both are without character or charm.

When shopping for perfume, seek a scent that is delicate, that doesn't offend the public nose, as happens when pungent odors are used. How can one get the best service out of the contents of the precious vial? That is easy to answer; get an eloniser. Typing on the back of one's hand is a wasteful practice. In the old days, granny put perfume on her handkerchief. We know better now. We put a few drops on the hems of our frocks. Those sniffers, hurting a fairly long life, and not going into the wash too often, hang onto perfume. Spray them with the atomizer.

After the warm bath and brisk rubdown, spray chest and arms.

Kingston Victorias Gain Three-Goal Lead Over Local Juniors in Playoff Game

Score 5-2 and Game Played on Soft, Sticky Ice, Return Game in Kingston on Saturday

Playing on heavy sticky ice, that made good hockey an impossibility the Kingston Victorias beat the Belleville Bears 5-to 2 in the first game of the Junior O.H.A. playdowns before 1,000 fans at the Hungerford Arena Thursday night. In a home-and-home series the Limestone City juniors gained a three-goal lead to take into the second game at Kingston Saturday night.

Not only was the ice heavy, but the game left general impression that a typical Kingston-Belleville hockey feud, that brought back memories to the oldsters, all fights bordering on general bedlam marred the contest throughout while continued arguments between players and officials in no way assisted in the advancement of the pastime in general.

Iches a much larger team all along the line Coach Max Jackson's Victorias took a commanding lead to outscore the locals 3 to 1 in the initial period although Belleville enjoyed an edge in the territorial play in the middle session, each team scored once. For real amusement in the final session, aside from Kingston's rag, the continued appearance of a roll-of toilet paper fluttered across the ice surface to add to the general trials and tribulations of Referees St. Louis and Holden.

Ahead at One Time

Coach Holway's local Bears were ahead at one time by virtue of scoring the goal. This came after P/O Dick Barrett, former member of the locals, and P/O Dick Bean, former secretary of the club prior to enlistment, officially faced the puck after having returned home from overseas recently.

With Doug Green off for tripping, Kingston moved five to the attack early in the game, but Fitzpatrick was able to stave off the attack with the help of Doug Green and Billie Holway, who covered themselves with hockey credits last night by playing practically minutes. All even Moher and Holway went in for the game's first real test, which Stone handled in a masterful manner. With Snider off for tripping, Belleville played five to the offence and scored, but Barrett was in the crease and the goal not allowed. Al Meagher gave the home fans something to cheer for when he took Barrett's pass to beat Stone on a game play of scrambling in and around the twine. Kingston's pressure Kingston came back to score three successive goals when Potts pating home Plumb's goal-mouth pass to even matters and J. Allen whipped in Wallis' corner pass amid an array of high sticks. To end the period Wallis actually came from behind to steal the puck inside the Belleville defence and drive it in on Fitzpatrick as he touched and unscalbed to make it three for the Vics in less than as many minutes.

Many Arguments

Scrutton fired Potts' pass over the prostrate Fitzpatrick for the Vics' fourth goal to open the middle session and from then in it was a succession of high sticks and players' arguments with the officials until the game became rather a donnybrook of disinterest. Green and Plumb drew down major penalties for fighting and Plumb openly asserted in the slo bin he wasn't even a participant, but he was sentenced Aiken, who had a chuckle about the whole thing. Minutes later Moher and Fowler drew down Majors and as the teams resorted to 4 skin aside, Belleville moved to the aggressive type of hockey and hemmed the Vics into their own zone for minutes at a time with Holway, Day and Gravelle doing everything but score. Later during another Belleville pressure play Green picked up a loose puck and fired it hard, but true, behind Stone to end the period at 4-2 for Kingston.

Sidney Type of Hockey

The last period was a repetition of the middle stanza with fights breaking out and the game developing into the sidney type. The only goal of the period was registered by Fowler on a pass from Snider. To make matters on an even keel Barrett and Potts tangled in fisticuffs for majors. Apparently the people of Belleville hadn't heard of a peper shortage as a set of toilet paper repeatedly made its appearance, streaking across the ice as spectators enjoyed themselves, firing the stuff on each everytime the referee buried it into the seating sections. It was good "clean" fun.

Although it was impossible to play good hockey, the heftier Kingston squad averaged the locals fully 15 pounds per player which was somewhat of a handicap. However, Holway's kids put up a scrappy game and were in no way disgraced playing against a club that has completed a full season of hockey versus senior and ex-professionals Ostshek Kingston

In Plumb, Coach Max Jackson boasts of a strong head player who is a steadying influence with the Vics. The Potts-Fowler-Scrutton line looked formidable, while Wallis and Allen took care of the eye on the second line. The Kingston team agreed to permit Bob LaMorre of Trenton, to play with Belleville to replace Hance Bush who recently underwent an operation. All of Holway's kids turned in creditable efforts and with any degree of good fortune could well have scored several occasions as the locals employed the style of territorial play which was proven in the fact Belleville out-shot Kingston 27 to 26.

The line-ups:—

Belleville — goal, Fitzpatrick; defence, Holway and Green; centre, Barrett; wings, Al Meagher and D. Meagher; subs, Moher, Day, Gravrix, Ayail, Reeves and LaMorre.

Kingston — goal, Stone; defence, Plumb and Snider; centre, Fowler; wings, Potts and Scrutton; subs, Wallis, Bud Aiken, J. Aiken, Stewart and Hawkins.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 2.—(CP)—Jimmy McLarnin, whose name has been down in the annals of Canadian boxing, is quite convinced that he is not been for his early interest in boxing he might have wound up as a "down-and-out" and a detriment to society. The former champion believes that the main reason he is to be used in combatting juvenile delinquency is plenty of activity.

Jimmy was in Vancouver recently — where there are more organized boxing clubs than in any other city in Canada — and was highly pleased at the number of youngsters "kept off the streets" through membership in the clubs. His idea is that if you can get a youngster interested in some form of physical activity before he reaches 15, he's off to a good start in becoming a better citizen.

Commenting on McLarnin's theory on delinquency prevention, Carl (Vancouver News-Herald) Robertson suggests that youngsters under the age of 15 should be allowed in free to sport events. Carl's thought may be well intended but it doesn't seem too feasible. Can you imagine the throng of Annie Oakleys at the Montreal Forum or Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens on hockey night?

Don't Look Now:

That it was Edmonton Canadians, then an all-star aggregation in from the coast, and now there's word that Moose Jaw Canucks is the team that will whip the tousled Toronto St. Michael's juniors — if and when they meet in the Memorial Cup finals.

The prognostication came from none other than Art Chapman, the former New York American centre ice smoothie who is scouting for Eddie Shore's Buffalo Bisons. Art also has a brother, Coach Frank Dryburgh that the Canucks are tops and needn't worry about St. Mike's or any other amateur team for that matter.

Added to which Art says: "Canucks will not only beat them (St. Mike's), but they'll do it easily."

BOSTON BRUINS HOME-FREE IN PLAYOFF SPOT

Hawks Plaster 5-3 Defeat on Rangers Only Point Behind Boston

By EDDIE LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Boston Bruins are virtually home-free in the fourth-place playoff position in the National Hockey League race—and Chicago Black Hawks did it for them.

Rangers have been breathing warmly down the necks of Bruins for several weeks in a heated argument for the final playoff spot, but the unpredictable birds last night slashed their chances of overtaking Boston to an almost infinitesimal mathematical possibility.

Hawks plastered a 5-3 defeat on the Blueshirts right in Manhattan, advanced to within three points of Rangers, who remain in fifth place just back of Boston.

Rangers and Hawks each have six games remaining in the regular schedule while Bruins have eight. The catch is that five of the Rangers games match them with the three top three clubs—Montreal Canadiens, Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs.

Rangers played without the services of Grant Warwick who left New York Tuesday for Montreal where his 23-year-old brother, Claude, injured in an East Coast motor accident while serving with the Royal Canadian Navy, died yesterday. Ranger officials said Warwick has requested transportation for his family from New York to Regina where the funeral takes place Monday. They said Warwick may not play for the rest of the season.

Chicago gained their victory in a 10-minute, second period rally that resulted in four goals without drawing a reply from New York. Hyron McDonald accounted for two of them, the others going to Bill Mosienko and Pete Horeck who added the fifth Hawk point in the last period.

Phil Watson scored two fast goals for Rangers before the second period ended and Walter (Babe) Adams was the other marksman.

EIGHT JUNIOR TEAMS IN WEST STILL IN RUNNING

Two, Darkhorses a Month Ago, Now Loom as Serious Contenders

Winnipeg, March 2 — (CP) — Eight junior hockey teams remain contenders for the right to represent the west in the Dominion Memorial Cup finals.

Two of the eight, darkhorses a month ago, today loom as serious opposition for the honors. They are Port Arthur West End Bruins, who pulled a startling upset by eliminating Port Arthur Flyers, the defending Thunder Bay champions, and Winnipeg Rangers.

Rangers banded Winnipeg Monarchs their first setback in Manitoba competition this season in proving the South Division finals. Coach Harry Neil, is confident they can turn the trick again tomorrow night and force a fifth and decider game next week. Winners of the series will meet Winnipeg Electric Red Wings for the right to tangle with Port Arthur West End Bruins in a Western Canada semi-final affair.

Further west it is generally conceded that Edmonton Canadians and Moose Jaw Canucks will battle in the other semi-final series.

Canucks whipped Regina Commandos in four straight contests, 11-2, 14-0, 5-3 and 8-1—to enter the Saskatchewan final against Prince Albert Black Hawks who gained the title by defeating Swift Current Saskatchewan although the northern championship went to Saskatoon Navy. The Navy team will battle allowed to compete in Memorial Cup play.

Edmonton Canadians breezed through their league competition and won the Edmonton crown in three straight over Edmonton Athletic Club. They will play Calgary Avenue Grills in the provincial finals.

LORNE CHABOT, JR. FINE GOAL TENDER

Port Arthur, March 2 (CP)—Despite his dad's wishes to make him a defenceman, 16-year-old Lorne Chabot, Jr., has developed into one of the "finest looking" goal tending prospects to come out of the Lakes Junior ranks in years."

With the puck his father—Lorne, former blocker for Toronto Maple Leafs, National Leaguers and Chicago Black Hawks in the National League—the juvenile player was a major factor as Port Arthur West End Bruins won the right to enter the Memorial Cup play-offs last week.

Lorne, an only started his goal-keeping career by chance. "I started by reference in right," he said, "replacing his dad's wish. "But one night I was called in to plush his in the nets. I didn't want to, but I finally went in, liked it fine, and have been in the nets ever since."

THREE PERSONS INJURED

Lindsay, March 1 — (CP) — Three persons were injured near here last night when two cars collided in a blinding snowstorm. A Hammill family of Lindsay, both from their daughter. Mrs. Routley, suffered concussion and broken ribs and thigh Davidson broke his wrist.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

How About the Second.

As the train pulled up at the wayside station the guard noticed Mrs. Smith pouring out of a compartment labelled "No Smoking."

Opening the door, he eyed the sit guilty-looking passengers, seated inside.

"Gentlemen," he remarked, "there are two company rules on this line which are always broken. First, that smoking is forbidden in carriages set aside for that purpose. Second, that the company's timetables are correct. You have already broken one of these rules."

Revies Play-off System.

The point system will be used in the Eastern League play-offs this season, rather than having each game played to a finish. It is necessary in order to conform with the order of the office of the Director of Transportation of the United States, President Red Dutton, of the National Hockey League announced.

The play-offs will get under way Tuesday, March 20th. Under the system the winning team will get two points while a draw would mean each team would get one point as in regular scheduled games. In previous years each game was played to a finish with a winner declared. Under the new system, eight points will be awarded the victor in either the "A", "B" or "C" series, other than their games won.

Two overtime periods of 20 minutes each will be played in each game if necessary, but the overtime will be on a sudden death basis. With the first goal scored in any overtime has started winning the game. If the tie is not flooded between the overtime periods, but in any event each game must be terminated "not later than 11.45 p.m."

If an eighth game becomes necessary under the point system, it will be played on the ice of the home team of the game "to avoid additional travelling."

Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs are listed as Team "A", with the first two games at Montreal, March 27 and March 29, the next two at Toronto, March 26 and March 27, and remaining games, as necessary, alternating between the two cities—March 29 at Montreal, March 31 at Toronto, and April 3rd at Montreal. In the event of an eighth game, it will be played at Montreal, April 5.

The "B" series will open at Detroit, March 20 and 22, with either Boston Bruins, New York Rangers or Chicago Black Hawks playing the Red Wings. From there the series will follow the same playing pattern and dates as the "A" series.

Everything But Hockey.

There's no doubt the heavy, sticky condition of the ice last night accounted for the poor display of hockey played by both the locals and the Kingston kids. Invariably on heavy ice fisticuffs creep into a game, but why so many arguments with the players taking over to quibble and argue at every turn with the officials? It detracted considerably from the game to say the least.

Belleville had their share of the territorial play, but either couldn't control the puck, or Stone was too good for the Vics' net. It was a little of both. Max Jackson's charges, especially Billy Holway's locals about 15 pounds all along the line and that difference in weight is a factor when playing on heavy, sticky ice, such as prevailed last night.

Although the Vics look to have more experience than the locals, they at least realized the smaller Belleville kids were in the game and the locals were in no way disgraced. We liked the work of R. Plumb, Kingston's steady defenceman, also Scrutton, Wallis and Potts, who although not extended showed promise and know their way around hockey both from ice and the stick of things, but that pair of Holway and Green again come in for the lion's share of praise, playing nearly sixty minutes throughout.

Remember When.

Amateur Canadiens flashed a victory over the up-and-coming Boston Bruins with a 3-0 win in a National Hockey League fixture 16 years ago tonight. The Bruins won the league championship and the Stanley Cup that year (1929), but Les Canadiens went back in the odditime form in 1930 and '31, winning the league championship and the old Stanley mug both seasons.

The Reason Why.

In 1932, Port made 58 home runs. As he turned into September, it looked as if he would break Babe Ruth's mark and the whole baseball world was excited. Then his bat went dead. Diamond experts said he was trying too hard, that the bugaboo of Ruth's record had him stymied.

What they didn't know, and what few know to this day, is that Foxx broke his thumb five weeks before the close of the season and could not swing properly.

PROVIDENCE REDS BEAT ST. LOUIS

By The Canadian Press

Providence Reds kept a slight glimmer in their American Hockey League play-off hopes last night when they defeated St. Louis Flyers 6-1 at Providence. The Reds now are only six points away from the second-place Hershey Bears in the eastern section. The first two teams in each section enter the play-offs.

Throughout most of the game it looked as though goalie Paul LeClerc was in for a shut-out, but 16 seconds from the final gun Lavoie came. Morey Rimstad beat him with a quick shot.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 620
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Instinctive players will perform some hands with skill. Perhaps they have the knack of card sense that we lack. But you could play a koru by following routine.

Make like you are declarer in the south at a contract of four spades in this deal:

	NORTH
	♠Q 4 2
	♥J 9 5
	♣A K 6 5 3
WEST		EAST
♠10 8		♠K 7 3
♥K 10		♥A Q 8 2
♦K 4 2		♦10 8 7
♣10 9 7 2		♣J 8 4
	SOUTH
	♠A K J 6 5
	♦A 5
	♣Q

West springs out with an ace, hoping lead of the diamond king. How would you plan to take your seeded ten tricks? Follow a routine.

First you count your winning tricks you are likely to lose. Then look for some way of saving enough tricks to fulfill your contract. Trumping and establishing suit plays are always the first to study.

There are no losers in the black suits. A trick in diamonds and at least three tricks in clubs will be lost. You must save one of them. How? South's two aces could be stuffed on established dummy club.

So, you grab the first trick with diamond ace and win two trump rounds with ace and king of spades. Two more tricks come home with queen and king of clubs. A third dummy club is then trumped by south.

A south spade lead is overtaken in dummy with the queen. This takes dummy's last trump and also pulls the opponent last trump. And dummy is now safe to cash the ace and small club.

On these, south stuffs two of his red cards. In this way, only the three remaining south red cards are lost. Give them up cheerfully. You can afford to.

On the third round of clubs, some players might have led the club ace. West would have trumped and south would overtrump. But that would not give south two red stuffs.

B.C.I. Senior Girls Win Title Without Loss

Belleville Collegiate Institute senior girls' basketball team won the Bay of Quinte Interscholastic title championship without sustaining a single loss and now advance to the O.S.S.S.A. finals at Orillia Saturday. Miss Isobel Morton's B. C. I. dauntless boosters completed their cycle by beating the Trenton High School juniors 13 to 4 at Trenton, thus winning the Quinte honors in their stride.

Shirley Marriott's first period three baskets were actually good enough to win for the Church St. aggregation, as Belleville led 8 to 2 at the half way mark. Coach Morton's lassies set up such a strong defence that Trenton scored but one basket in each of the game's halves. Helen Booth, scored both of the homespun lassies' baskets to account for Trenton's four points of the game.

With Shirley Marriott getting six points, Margaret Taylor added four more and Elizabeth Keeler finished matters with the additional count two B.C.I. points.

Little Benny's Note Book

Cousin Oscar is still living at our house in his corporal's uniform, and this morning at breakfast we could hear him still strutting around in the guest room, and ma said, Oh dear, when is it going to end?

Maybe we've got him on our hands for life, pop said, and ma said, Don't even mention a thing like that, William, even as an intentional joke, Gerhardt, William, I think I may have the magic solution, she said.

Nothing but magic will get rid of the goof, by the looks of things, pop said, and ma said, It is not like an inspired inspiration, The paper hanger is coming the day after tomorrow to do the dining room, so we'll have him do the guest room too, although it doesn't actually need papering, so we'll have a legitimate excuse to get everything out of the guest room, including Cesar himself, she said.

I fear the worst, but I assure you you haven't seen the last of him, pop said, and after supper Cousin Oscar was turning on all the different radio stations without waiting for any of them to finish, and ma said, By the way, Oscar, we've arranged to get hold of a paper hanger in spite of the labor situation, so we're seizing the chance to have the guest room papered, while he's on hand. It seems too bad, Oscar, but we're doing it.

Now dont you go to any such extreme, Cousin Oscar said. One of the boys has been telling me how to get my hand at paper hanging. You just take the paste, unwrap it in the job itself. There may be considerable splashing of paste, but look what you'll save on the labor, and if the whole effect is a little crooked, it'll just make it look more modern and artistic. I'll sleep on a few rolls of it, and after I get it done, I'll be quite an experience, he said.

AT THE BELLE

"Marriage Is a Private Affair" One of the year's prize roles, that of Lionel Sinclair, confronts M-G-M's "Marriage Is a Private Affair," now at the Belle Theatre screen, fell to a comparatively new face on the screen: burly, six-foot John Hodiak.

Hodiak won this acting plum after auditioning for over 1 pict. motion pictures, most recent of which was "Lifeboat." Previously Hodiak appeared in "I Dood It" and "Somewhere in Town." His only other dramatic experience was in radio shows emanating from Chicago studios.

He was discovered in the Windy City last year by Metro's Sidney Mayer talent scout who heard Hodiak's voice on the air. The scout interviewed him, was impressed by his rugged appearance and suggested a screen test.

"Marriage Is a Private Affair," adapted from Kathleen Norris' best selling novel, was produced by Joseph L. Mankiewicz.

AT THE CAPITOL

Packed with a score of songs from America's Favorite Song Writer, Damon Runyon's "Irish Eyes Are Smiling," the new 20th Century-Fox Technicolor musical starring Monty Woolley, June Haver and Dick Haymes, opens at the Capitol this weekend at the Belle Theatre.

The film revolves around the story of Ernest R. Ball, America's greatest composer of sentimental ballads, and features such all-time favorites as "If Forget You," "Let the Rest of the World Go By," "Boy O' Mine," and others.

"Irish Eyes Are Smiling" is set in the dazzling era just prior to World War I when Broadway was at its gayest. The picture was directed by Damon Runyon and directed by Gregory Ratoff.

The Canadian Belle Newsreel, a Terrytoon Colorful Cartoon and a new March of Time presentation, "Americans All," will complete the program. The "Black Arrow" serial will be presented Saturday matinee. Continuous shows will be presented on Saturday.

Boys Overseas Appreciate Job Kinsmen Doing

"It's a great job you fellows are doing over there for the boys over here in the regular supplying of cigarettes for Canada's fighting forces," wrote Art Angel from the Nia. 1 Canadian Air Support Unit overseas in appreciation of the Kinsmen Fag Fund.

From Belgium "Bert" Warren wrote similar expressions to Chairman Ernie LaHaye, adding that Belleville boys he has contacted also appreciate Canadian cigarettes to a degree where it is hard to express their true appreciation. Scores of other Belleville boys write immediately upon the receipt of their regular shipments to urge the continuance of sending Canadian cigarettes overseas.

The list of Belleville boys sent individual shipments of 300 cigarettes by the Kinsmen Fag Fund this week included: A. G. Adams, R. H. Adams, L. E. Baldwin, H. Beaumont, W. Bishop, L. Bradshaw, E. R. THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

CHAPTER 7

Cherry went upstairs with her message that Miss Trotter and Mr. Brodey Brown would be a little late, to find the detachments, coming and going between the downstairs rooms and Mrs. Porter's apartments and any considerable consideration of dinner as far removed as ever.

Emma said with her usual air of alarm but repressed annoyance that this would never do, and just as the delayed couple arrived from Hillsborough, at twenty-two minutes past nine, the eight-o'clock dinner began to take shape and form, guests straggled toward the table and looked for name cards, and Wallen began to serve smoking cups of mealtime.

It was at this moment that the couple whose entrance she had unobserved sauntered from the den. Cherry, halfway up the stairs to find Kemp and ask the little Japanese maid to keep an eye open for a lost evening bag of silver and amethysts, happened to see them come out. She paused on the stairs to watch them make their leisurely way toward the dining room. They stopped once in the lower hall, the man speaking earnestly, the woman listening with a bent head, giving him only an occasional swift upward glance.

Kelly and Fran. Kelly and Fran. The sight made Cherry feel first a little weak, and then heartsick. They had come supposedly to keep Cherry company, to give her moral help with the party. They had really come to gather an opportunity of being alone and unobserved together. Of course! Or course!

Her thoughts were broken for what this evening might bring were stopped instantly. Everything was dull and dreary blank now; Cherry hated every detail of the party dragged herself through the next hour, or two by sheer force of will.

There was plenty for her to do, for the cocktail hour had been a time of great confusion, and the downstairs rooms were a scene of wild disorder. Cherry and Emma directed the caterer's men as to where chairs and lamps belonged, somebody opened windows and permitted drafts of sweet, fresh night air to enter and Kemp gathered up handkerchiefs and crushed orchids and cigarette cases from the floor.

During this busy hurried time, messages were constantly coming downstairs from Mrs. Porter, up to whose room Cherry ran a dozen times. Her employer would languidly to know if everything was going nicely, was enthusiastic as to her own share of festivities and would like another cup of that delicious chocolate. Mrs. Porter wanted her medicine and she had always been so fond of it!

The dinner party had progressed to the breast of milk-fed chicken with Virginia ham and mushrooms and to procure another cup of the soup was like returning to some event of the dim past. When that was accomplished, Mrs. Porter was delicately picking at some rich concoction of crab meat and allowed the soup to cool untouched.

Bridge and backgammon had been set out in one of the upstairs rooms; the orchestra, concealed behind the inevitable palms and playing provocative dance music. Couples were leaving the dining room in search for a few minutes. They were returning to play absently with alligator-pear or frozen pudding. Cherry looked into the upstairs bedroom to find Alma and Matty deep in a sustained conversation.

"They're doing nothin' but makin' fun of the old lady," said Hatty. "Her champagne's good enough for them, and her dinner's good enough for them, but 'Oh, ain't she a dream,' and 'ain't this a queer old vault!' and Lord, my dear, you let me into this; I never would have come!"

"Ain't they says, 'How sadly can we get out and go home and add dance?'" added Alma.

Cherry knew the hours disturbed to hear the maids' views because they confirmed an uneasy and unacknowledged fear of her own. An impression that the flattery and pleasure that were given Mrs. Porter's room were not sincere, that behind the smiles and the bows there were patiently resigned sighs and shrugs and a good deal of the raising of eyebrows and contemptuous eyebrows. Mrs. Porter's dinner dance was a debauchery which they long remembered, but not with the gratitude she imagined. The words "horror" and "awful" and "foul" and "just about the limit" would be used more often than were complimentary terms. Cherry felt a sudden rush of resentment, of pity for her employer.

Stepping back into the hall, and going to look down at the lower floor, to see if the dinner was about over, Cherry was shocked suddenly to hear the sound of sobbing. Who was crying?

It came from Dorothy's room. Cherry went softly toward it, and as the door stood open a crack, she pushed it further open and went in.

Dorothy, her party frock crushed into stringy limpness, was lying across the bed, crying bitterly. She had a chiffon handkerchief pounded into a wet ball in her hand and was digging at her eyes with it, and snuffling and sobbing like a heartbroken child of three.

After a moment's hesitation Cherry went irresolutely toward Dorothy and put a hand upon her. Dorothy sat up with a bounce and confronted the other girl with tear-swollen eyes.

"Thunder!" she said quickly, "I hate them all! I hate that Uncle-Seth, and Marshbanksish like pot-then!"

"Dorothy, what's happened?"

"Nothing hath happened! Everything hath happened!" Dorothy answered, controlling herself for a second before beginning to cry, more quietly, again. "Oh, Cherry?" she whimpered, her wet face against Cherry's, and Cherry's comforting arm around her. "Why did I ever come to this damnable, detestable party! Amy got him away from me—that'th all she wanted to do, blah boy I told you about, who'th been to Williamth, Hatty, everybody and with so kind to me, and arranged her twenty-four, and he playth polo with—"

There was a great deal of it, and Cherry had to find her own handkerchief and a fresh gown, and work powders and liquid make-up and powder puffs, before could be persuaded to descend to the realm of every again.

Th endless evening dragged its way to midnight, and the guests began to disperse. Mrs. Porter, when they came in to say their good-byes, pouted kindly, "I was really not yet! Why, when she was a girl they had often danced right into the morning! But the pretty girls and the handsome young men were there, some of the boys were working, they explained; they had to keep early office hours. By two and fours they dwindled away.

Cherry knew that they were all going off somewhere else to dance. She heard them promise one another to meet later. She heard them laughing at their evening's entertainment, and their "Where's" of relief as they disappeared into the darkness outside the front door. The whole thing had been silly and a failure, she decided, going downstairs for the twentieth time that evening to see if the bridge players were still at their game.

Fran was playing hard. Two other tables were deserted, littered with cigarette ashes and chocolate frills, scribbled scores and torn paper. She was murmuring upstairs again for the purpose of asking Emma if she should stay up to put out lights, when Kelly Coates came down stairs, met her halfway, smiled at her and arrested her with a hand on her arm.

"Sh! down here a minute," he said, immediately seating himself on the landing's top step. "How's it gone? Had any fun out of it? I've seen you coming and going and didn't know whether it was any fun for you or not. Get your candy?"

"Oh, it was wonderful, Mr. Coates."

"Not your first box of candy, I suppose?"

Cherry was too dizzy to know what she said by the way of reply. She tried to make it grateful. But inertly talking to Kelly confused her. The lost evening was suddenly aglow with color and light. She was to have her moment after all.

In her agitation she said exactly what she should have bitten out to say. Swallowing hard and with a nervous, rushing laugh, she asked, "Didn't...didn't Mrs. Marshbanks look lovely tonight?"

For a minute his expression was so odd that she was terrified. He didn't like her saying that! Then he said briefly, "Lovely."

Blundering on, in spite of a half-defined feeling that he would not like to talk about her, Cherry said, "I used to think she was almost...well, homely. But when you know her face you see that she's beautiful!"

He nodded his arms, in a favorite gesture of his, and was looking at her seriously.

"Fran," he said slowly. But the word brimmed with some secret magic for him, and she felt his echoes reach her, and was chilled. "The Randalls are taking her home," he added. "I'm to stand on my way back to Casualho. But you—what kind of time have you had?" he asked after a moment.

"Poston," she said suddenly hungry for his sympathy and understanding. It was unwise, it was impulsive, it was silly, even as the ground, slipped away from beneath her feet, it hate Mrs. Porter!" she said. "That is I don't hate her," she corrected herself, "but she treats me as if I wasn't there—didn't exist. As if I suppose so," he conceded with a thoughtful laugh. "Mrs. Porter," he went on, with a little stress on the last words, "gives it this. You'll leave Amy behind you some day, and then this will all seem very small-girl stuff. Patience, Cherry."

His use of her name, his serious consideration of her ill-timed outbursts destroyed the last shred of her reticence. She was glad, she cried jealous, lonely; she wanted someone to hold him, and blindly reached for whatever claim upon interest she could find.

"No matter what I did," she said, looking down shyly and fingering the ornamental end of one of the brass rods that held the stair carpet in place, "no matter what I did I would never be afraid that I know that! You'd never think of me as anything but a girl. Even Dorothea's who didn't count about's go falling in love with Mrs. Marshbanks of—of anybody! Cherry floundered on wretchedly. "I know I'll never be in this dress—dressed that way and playing bridge and all; that's been in a measure—but if I had clothes and money—if my husband was as wonderful as Judge Marshbanks—I...I couldn't—I couldn't!" she couldn't.

She stopped in a terrifying silence. She could not raise her eyes, as Kelly got to his feet she rose too, but still she could not look at him.

"I'm sorry," she said thickly, when she could not bear it an instant longer.

"Well" the man said dryly, on a note that was as like as same to a horrified and frightened child as he could force himself at last to meet his eyes. Cherry saw that he was smiling, in a sort of annoyed indulgence, as one smiles at a forward child. At the look her soul died within her. Those eyes could never again look anything but contempt and dislike for her. Presently with a kind and quiet "Good night" he left her, descended the stairs. Then the front door closed and he was gone.

COULD NOT BEAR DEFEAT

With the United States 1st Army in Germany, March 3—(AP)—"The Germans could not bear defeat is too much to bear." This was the farewell word to a German man and wife and his daughter whose bodies were found hanging from the rafters in their home at Hodenhagen when American troops captured the town. They had stood on chairs, tied ropes around their necks and kicked the chairs from beneath them. Their dog was found hanging beside them.

Fierce Fighting Continues on Iwo

Guam, March 2 (AP)—Tank-led United States Marines hammered ahead on smoking Little Iwo Jima today, compressing the island's Japanese garrison into the eastern northern tip for a final stand.

The fighting was fierce and Thursday field dispatches reported the Japanese, pushed into a shrinking third of the island, were reorganizing to make a bloody toll for every American advance.

While gaining Thursday were limited against stubborn resistance, Iwo's eastern shore, two divisions on the west and centre struck ahead, under air cover and preceded by a shattering artillery and naval barrage.

The 3rd Division occupied the western end of uncompleted Motoyama Airfield No. 2. Already seized were two completed airstrips.

The advance was mounted from captured Motoyama town, which did not yield a single civilian.

Red Cross Society Combines Canadian United Allied Relief Fund With Own Campaign This Month

Various Committees of Member Funds of CUARF Lend Red Cross Full Support

Ottawa, March 2. — Mr. William M. Birks, of Montreal, chairman of The Canadian United Allied Relief Fund, has issued an appeal to all ethnic groups in Canada to cooperatically support and work for the campaign of The Canadian Red Cross Society. Mr. Birks was speaking on behalf of The Belgian War Relief Fund, Canada-France Relations Committee, Canadian Aid to Russia, Canadian friends of Luxembourg, The Czechoslovak Relief Fund, Czechoslovak War Charities Fund, Greek War Relief Fund, Netherlands Relief Fund, Norwegian Relief Fund, United Polish Relief Fund and Yugoslav Relief Fund, who are members of The Canadian United Allied Relief Fund.

Born of the urgent need to send relief to the long-suffering civilian population of Allied countries, and the practical desire to raise the necessary funds from the people in Canada in such a way as not to multiply unnecessarily the demand to their generosity, it was decided to adopt the principle of the Community Chest. In other words, instead of organizing seven separate drives for the relief of the people of eleven Allied nations, they would be combined in one National Campaign, and the proceeds divided on an equitable plan among the victims of Nazi occupation.

"The Canadian United Allied Relief Fund", said Mr. Birks, "is made up of representatives of the relief organizations of Belgium, Norway, Greece, Poland, Russia, China, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Luxembourg and The Netherlands, and its purpose is to work out the plan and means of securing food, clothing and medicines for those who are in desperate need in these countries.

"The first step", Mr. Birks went on to say, "obviously is the collection of funds, for the CUARF is dependent entirely upon private subscription, unlike UNRRA which is entirely financed by the governments. From the outset it was realized that it would be a waste of time and effort to build up an organization of our own to conduct a National Campaign, when such an organization already existed, with years of practice and experience behind it. We, therefore, with the entire approval of the Government, took steps to get up with The Canadian Red Cross Society, under which the Red Cross would conduct the relief campaign, with theirs own, and conduct the campaign with the whole-hearted assistance of the CUARF and its member organizations".

Wellington Hotel At Guelph Gutted

Damages were estimated at thousands of dollars.

Believed caused by combustion, the fire started in the fourth storey side of the hotel building, and consumed plenty of time to escape before the flames spread to the lower floors. The fire was discovered when firemen were unable to throw ladders against the fourth storey section of the building and it was then time before the fire fighters could make their way into the centre section of the south wing.

Four stores on the ground floor of the hotel suffered heavy damages from smoke and water. Chief's large department stores nearby escaped fire damage, although for a time, both buildings were threatened.

With the U.S. Marines on Tarawa, Nov. 26, 1943. (Delayed by Censor) (AP) — Two wounded British French priests, freed from Japanese internment for the first time in two years, came out of hiding today and asserted that the Japanese had bayonetted, beheaded and burned 22 English men, New Zealanders and Australians at Tarawa because they showed enthusiasm during an attack on the island by U.S. warships.

Rev. Henry Jolivet and Rev. Lucien Grandjacques, both of whom are white man's food in many months, thanked the Marines for their deliverance and made plain to continue immediately their mission work with the natives.

They told this story:

The Japanese first arrived at Betio, Tarawa, in two warships Dec. 10, 1941, (just after Pearl Harbor), put 100 troops ashore and rounded up all whites, including a Catholic Bishop, several priests and brothers and sisters, and British government employees, traders and merchants.

Some of these were rescued later when eight Americans drifted ashore in a lifeboat after having been at sea 36 days after their ship had been sunk. They found an overloaded coral engine which they put in their boat.

In December, 1942, the enemy took over Betio in force, bringing ashore 2,500 Japanese soldiers they had captured at an undisclosed port. They put the New Zealanders to work improving the pier.

When American warships bombarded Tarawa (probably in December, 1943), an English doctor who was interned with them escape by swimming to one of the American ships. He was recaptured by the Japanese, who then slit his calves with knives from the ankles to prevent his running away in the future.

The Japanese also were annoyed by the enthusiasm their prisoners showed for the American attack. They later took 22 men, including the New Zealanders, tied them to trees and bayonetted them. Then they cut off their heads and burned the bodies.

They spared the Bishop and an 81-year-old padre who had been taken on Makin Island.

National Assembly To Be Convened In China, Nov. 12

Chungking, March 2 — (AP) — A National Assembly to inaugurate constitutional government will be convened Nov. 12 subject to approval of the Kuomintang (National People's Party) Congress meeting in May, President Chiang Kai-Shek announced today.

He said the Kuomintang would return supreme power to the people through the instrumentality of the National Assembly and meanwhile would prepare to admit other parties to a share in the government.

"But I definitely cannot abdicate to a loose combination or powers," said President Chiang.

He disclosed that to meet the fears of the Communists his government had expressed willingness for the duration of the war to place an American General in command of the Communist forces under President Chiang's overall command if the U. S. government could agree. He said the Communists rejected this offer.

Program of eliminating Chinese Army into considered units for combat and building up others possessing real fighting potential already has reached its maximum 300,000 men, Gen. Chen Cheng, Minister of War, announced today.

By the end of the year, he said, a total of 1,800,000 troops will have been disbanded. The program is part of plans for strengthening China's army in preparation for an eventual counter-offensive to drive the Japanese from Asia.

Canadians Catch 20 Freight Trains With Steam Up

London, March 1 — (CP Cable) — Six R.C.A.F. Spitfires swooped down on the West railyards across the Rhine from the 1st Canadian Army battlefront yesterday and caught 20 freight trains with steam up. The trains are probably there still there.

The Canadian fliers cut the tracks at the corners of the yards to immobilize the trains, then roared back and forth across the railway destroying or damaging the locomotives and rolling stock and breaking a warehouse.

It was an important victory in the battle of communications since Wesel is being used as a funnel for supplies being fed Germans facing the British, Canadian and American armies.

Yesterday a total of 40 of the unseen railcuts were made by Canadian fighter-bombers with the loss of one aircraft.

Germans Strike Across Senio R.

Rome, March 1 —(AP)— German raiding parties, attacking across the Senio river south of the Russi-Lugo road, struck at the Eighth Army on the Adriatic coast, have driven 5th Army troops from some of their positions, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Allied patrols promptly counterattacked and took a number of prisoners, but part of the German forces still remain on the east bank of the river.

Two other strong enemy fighting forces established across the Senio immediately south of Faenza, on Faenza-Bologna highway at night and repulsed 20 freight trains with steam up. The trains are probably there still there.

The Canadian fliers cut the tracks at the corners of the yards to immobilize the trains, then roared back and forth across the railway destroying or damaging the locomotives and rolling stock and breaking a warehouse.

It was an important victory in the battle of communications since Wesel is being used as a funnel for supplies being fed Germans facing the British, Canadian and American armies.

Police said the material witness whose name was given as Francois Lamoureux of Montreal was arrested 20 minutes after Pte Deslandes had died and held as evidence a pair of heavy steel-shod, calf-length boots.

Police said the two men at one time were members of the same army unit.

Evidence showed that Deslander joined Councelles and the other pushed him back.

Deslandes allegedly returned the push and was met with a knee to the groin and a punch to the face which left him unconscious in the tile floor. Councelles was then said to have crushed the victim's head to the floor with a number of heel and toe kicks to the face, and run away.

PARTS OF TWO NAZI ARMIES NEARLY TRAPPED

Reds Slash Through Baltic Defences

Headlong Retreat On North Sector Is Reported

Yanks Reach Rhine at New Points on Five-Mile Sector

Cavalry and Tanks Reach Positions Overlooking Sea

Main Coastal Railway Has Been Cut by Russians

By EDDY GILMORE
(A.P. Staff Writer)

Moscow, March 3 (AP) — Red Army cavalry and tanks reached positions overlooking the Baltic today in numerous sectors along the 300-mile front from the Koenigsberg area to Koslin, midway between Danzig and Stettin.

Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's hard hitting 2nd, White Russian Army, entering either way through great numbers of German Volksgrenadiers attempting vainly to check the Soviet drive to the sea through Pomerania, Danzig territory and East Prussia.

The Russian plan appears to be cut through the area between major cities and ports and isolate one from the other as well as cutting off all escape from the Germans by overland routes.

This operation has been so successful the Germans have been unable to use the main coastal railway for three days.

The Russian communique yesterday told of the capture of 30 villages, on the western side of the Baltic salient, but did not directly confirm German reports that Red Army spearheads had rolled within four miles of the Baltic Pomeranian coast.

A midnight Soviet communique said the Germans hinted at counter attacks on the 16-mile front southwest of Schneidemuehl. There thousand Germans were killed in the action, Moscow asserted, and that the Russians gained up to a mile in the area.

The nearest the Russians were placed officially to Koslin by Moscow was at a point 22 miles from the five miles northwest of Bublitz and 18 miles southeast of Koslin.

The Soviet bulletin also announced the capture of Juchow, 9 miles southeast of topped Neustettin, in Pomerania.

8th Victory Loan Set at New High $1,500,000,000

Ottawa, March 2. (CP)—Expectations are that Canada's Eighth Victory Loan campaign, Right Honorable Mackenzie King announced Friday night will be held April 22 to May 12, will have an all-time high objective of $1,500,000,000.

The Seventh Loan campaign, which started last Oct. 23, had an objective of $1,200,000,000 and yielded $1,500,679,000.

"The Victory Loans are in all important part of Canada's war effort", he said. "Whatever the part the war now is in the final stage it is more necessary than ever that this year's loan should meet with unprecedented success.

Canada's wartime bond issues have gained constantly growing support. The war loan, in January, 1940, raised $200,000,000 and the second war loan, later that year had a total of $300,000,000.

Britain would play an important part in the seventh campaign Japanese power was made known at the time of the sixth campaign, he said.

Now it is learned that there is a plan planned for Canada's participation might, as well as British, when the collapse of Germany makes it possible to transfer a large part of the armament to the Pacific theatre.

What that part will be must remain a closely guarded secret but the guess here is that it will so work that Canadians and Britons will be given the opportunity to return Hong Kong to where they suffered such a bitter defeat three years ago.

Britain's operations are expected to concentrate on overland pushes through Burma, Indo-China and into occupied China itself, with sea supplies and support operations against Singapore, the Malay peninsula and the by-passed Japanese forces left in the Netherlands East Indies, possibly in conjunction with American forces.

LUBANG ISLAND NOW FIRMLY HELD BY AMERICANS

Control Shortest Sea Route Through Heart of Philippines to Manila

Manila, Feb. 3 — (AP) — Gen. MacArthur disclosed today the 4th in a series of successful amphibious invasions—a landing on Lubang Island, 35 miles southwest of Manila Bay — giving his forces complete control of the shortest sea route through the heart of the Philippines to Manila.

The western end of a 300-mile-long island chain which Manila can be supplied and Luzon transformed into a huge military base, faced Asia, was opened by veteran troops within sight of Lubang Thursday.

The American forces overwhelmed "negligible resistance" on the 18-by-eight mile island at the western exit of Verde Passage, the 18th Philippines island to be invaded.

Lubang was the second land invasion in as many days. American forces yesterday landed on Corregidor, 250 miles southwest of Manila, Wednesday, Leyte, 300 miles southeast of the invaders had completed occupation of Puerto Princesa Harbor, midway along Palawan's 273-mile-long east coast and occupied a third airfield.

In fighting on Luzon east of Manila, where Japanese forces are in slow retreat into mountains of the Sierra Madre, American troops are attacking strong enemy defensive positions.

SAYS GERMANS LONG FOR PEACE

London, March 3 — (CP)—Propaganda Minister Goebbels said today that the Germans "love and long for peace."

"Why should we be ashamed of admitting it?" he asked in an article in the weekly Das Reich, broadcast by the German radio.

What matters is only the way peace is to be achieved and what the contents are to be. It is here that opinions differ."

Plans for Canada's Participation In Pacific War Well Advanced

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, March 3 (CP) — Plans for the part Canada will play in the war against Japan is well advanced by the combined chiefs of staff committee here.

This was the agency in Washington works in close co-operation with—or with less publicity, than this news agency on matters of operations involving British and American forces.

But the fact that Canada and Britain would play an important part in the advance against Japanese power was made known at the time of the sixth Victory Loan campaign.

Now it is learned that there is a plan planned for Canada's participation might, as well as British, when the collapse of Germany makes it possible to transfer a large part of the armament to the Pacific theatre.

What that part will be must remain a closely guarded secret but the guess here is that it will so work that Canadians and Britons will be given the opportunity to return Hong Kong to where they suffered such a bitter defeat three years ago.

Britain's operations are expected to concentrate on overland pushes through Burma, Indo-China and into occupied China itself, with sea supplies and support operations against Singapore, the Malay peninsula and the by-passed Japanese forces left in the Netherlands East Indies, possibly in conjunction with American forces.

Whether the Canadian forces which may be sent to the Far East will operate with the British or American forces remains to be seen. Already some Canadians specialists are in the South Pacific with American forces for indoctrination courses.

Canadian naval units are expected to take their place with the Allied forces in the Pacific for which assistance is expected to be land and air personnel.

British naval units operating in the Pacific are not, or were not originally, organized for the type of service the Royal Canadian navy was forced to adopt, requiring a large proportion of navy ploughing to maintain the fleet long distances from its bases for supply and refitting bases. But it is understood the organized for the type of operations essential there, the combined chiefs of staff committee is composed of the United States and British chiefs of navy, chiefs of staff and their aides, and the British joint staff mission now headed by Field Marshal Sir John Dill, leading Wilson, personal representative of Prime Minister Churchill in the latter's capacity as Minister of Defence.

As a result of the Yalta conference it is expected Russia will soon send a mission to represent the soviet on the committee, but that may not be until Russia is in the war against Japan.

Canada is not a member of the committee but its joint staff mission here, headed by Maj.-Gen. H. F. G. Letson, it kept fully informed of, and is consulted about, all matters concerning Canada.

RIVER BREAK UP NOT FAR AWAY

That indication that the forthcoming breaking of the Moira River may be not too far in the future has been evidenced during the past day or so with fissures appearing in the ice and water running over the surface being seen at the upper bridge. The city engineer's office has not yet checked on the thickness of the river but it was stated today this would be done in the first of the week. Testing of the river ice for thickness is annually completed the first week in March. It was stated this is normally being in sufficient time to ascertain conditions before the breakup.

Columbian Squires Hear RSM. Duffy RelateExperiences

Approximately seventy-five Boulton Squires, of Columbus and district, heard an address delivered by R. S. M. Angus Duffy recently returned from Belgium. The R.S.M. has spent five Christmases abroad in England, Italy, Sicily and recently took part in the Belgian campaign. He was with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment from 1939 until 1944.

He talked of the regiment with a fire that comes only from personal contact with the men. He reviewed the first three years of the regiment's training in England and told that the high standard of training of the regiment changed from individual private soldier to a well-knit fighting force when the regiment and officers were bent in striving to achieve the goals and lab some thing always overcomes this fear."

The Squires were told by Duffy "was as Orions, where the Canadians gained a good leadership respect for the first German. The regiment then, incidentally, fight cleanly though almost invariably at times."

R.S.M. Duffy received a standing ovation as he concluded his address by saying that "the job of reconstruction in the post-war era will fall on the shoulders of today's youth because the fighting men have gone down after years of frontline service."

The program combined with a "Tuxedo Conscription" presented by Don Boyle, Al Meagher and Al Kellerby, full violence in the game, the latter two having fit-less-to-be blindfolded pulling a fight. Squire Philip Finkle was the steady referee. Chief Squire Bob Fluney and Squire Jerry Moore were the judges. Also a battle of words from Knights Fluney and Moore. Entertainment program ended with the National Anthem.

George Wilson entertainment committee was responsible for this fine program.

Domestic Honey Bees Stirred by Spring Life

Mr. Harry Pooley was the guest on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Weeden for a few days returning to his home on Tuesday.

In the "underground" apiary of Wilfred Amsden near Wellington, the bees are beginning to make the hives. The long winter sleep Calgary, and Mrs. George Harris, and Mrs. Floyd Huffman.

Mild temperatures reject life into the drowsy workers, but special midgets which keep the temperatures to proper by means of thermostats lull the bees back to sleep until the time comes for them to go to work.

With nesting being an important factor in early season preparations for the lack of frost in the ground this year suggests that the bees may. Mr. Marvin said, Frost upheavals in the spring cause damage to new seeding and its damage or total loss indirectly affects potential honey crops.

His 294 hives of bees wintered well, he added. These are being augmented by 100 boxes of bees each containing 10,000 bees, approximately 16,000 of the little artworkers, within the next few days. Some hives in June and July have been known to build the homes of from 80,000 to 75,000 bees.

Mr. Marvin apiary handled ten tons of honey from 294 hives, both producers in 1944, and with the proper weather conditions and added hives, expects to increase this amount by a substantial margin this year.

Typographical Error Shocks Local Soldier

Corporal Alfred J. Court, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Court, Cobourg Street, who recently wed the former Miss Edna Snells, of Brantford, in Vernon, B.C., where he was taking an infantry course, received a shock when he read in a western newspaper account of his wedding that he was the son of the "late Mrs. Court."

Suspecting that the family had been holding back the sad news account of his nuptials, he dashed to the nearest telegraph office and immediately got in touch with his people in Belleville.

But everything was all right at home, and the error was a purely typographical one.

Completing his course on the west coast, he recently reported to Camp Ipperwash in Western Ontario where he is engaged in another course which will qualify him for the rank of lieutenant.

The nineteen-year-old infantryman joined the army three years ago when he was sixteen, but was in October "scaled up" with his age and he was disciplined for it. He re-enlisted as soon as he became of age and since then Court has been promoted to the rank of corporal.

His father served in the 59th Battalion, C.E.F., for two years during the First Great War, and also saw eleven months service in the Veterans Guard during the present struggle.

Milk for Britain Bottle With Funds Stolen From Store

As the result of about the lowest type of thieving, Belleville, some of the wee kiddies in bombed-out Britain will be deprived of good wholesome nourishment. The "Milk for Britain Fund" needed the proceeds from the Canadian Legion. Their methods of collecting funds.

In Belleville one of the methods of accepting public donations is by placing a small milk bottles in and around the stores in the business section of the city into which contributions can be placed with the assurance that all proceeds go towards the sending of life-giving milk to the babies in bombed Britain.

There are several quarts of this bottle distributed in every conceivable place, some in the stores, some in the offices, some in the homes, but unfortunately one of those small collection milk bottles and its contents from the counter in a amount may have been small, but amount may have been a dime still sends a quart of milk to a needy baby in Britain.

Son of Murdered Woman Sought For Questioning

Toronto, March 2 — (CP) — Police here Friday night they are searching for Leonard Stanley Taylor, 55, for questioning in connection with the axe-murder of his 75-year-old mother, Mrs. Blanche Taylor, whose battered body was found in a chair in the bedroom of her east-end home.

Police said Taylor appeared in court Thursday charged with assaulting his mother and was released on one-year probation at her request.

Chief Coroner Dr. Emile Lawson said the aged woman apparently was struck down with an axe in the bedroom Thursday night or early yesterday, then dragged into the small front bedroom. A trail of blood led from the kitchen to the front room and the axe lay beside the body.

Another son, 30-year-old Gerald, found the body late yesterday. He told police he made a practice of visiting his mother daily due to her age. About 10 a.m. he let himself in from the house.

Police said the killer had evidently changed clothes and reported they found a blood-stained tie, shirt, coat and shoes in the house.

German Dugouts Dirty Quarters on Dutch Dikes

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(CWA War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Army in Germany, March 2 —(CP)— A soldier sitting on the edge of a dike said the Germans look like pigs, they act like pigs and they are pigs."

This was the opinion of a Tommy, and Canadian soldiers who moved into some of the German dugouts on the dikes east of Nijmegen after the Canadian army's whirlig offensive began, were ready to agree with him. They had no spring-clean every dugout before they could use it.

These German positions were due into the sides of the dike and despite the terrific barrage that opened the offensive most of them were undamaged. They were strongly built with log walls and roof, and their entrances were so narrow that a stout man would have trouble entering them.

Making a temporary home in one dugout were seven mortar men from an eastern Canadian battalion. They were Sgts. R. R. Fraser, Bathurst, N.B.; K. C. Croft, Merced, Cal.; and Pte. Howard Hickey, Jacques River, N.B.; J. A. Roy, Petit Rocher, N.B.; W. M. McIntyre, Campbellton, N.B.; Lasarus Richard Mentzer, and H. A. Sorenson, Hopewell Cape, N.B.

They had landed on the dike, not far from Kapelsch, while the battle was still going on but there was no need for mortar support as they were given the job of guarding prisoners instead. The seven of them looked after 68 Germans for several hours at night until British troops across the flooded fields to take them off their hands.

Their guards, beside another in which the Germans left Christmas tree and other Christmas candy, were warm and when the Canadians had thrown out the German dirt the mortar men moved in. There was little of value in the dugout but the Germans had behind some preserved cherries which the Canadians ate with relish.

Almost lost in the flow of news from the Nijmegen offensive was the story of a British soldier who spent 18 hours in German hands after a patrol north of Zetten, surprised a house by his own tanks and then was released by another patrol.

"There is one soldier who was lucky to come out alive," said Lieut. R. D. Chadwick, of Arthur, Ont., and Winnipeg, whose tank scored several direct hits with high explosive shells on the house where the Tommy was being held. In Chadwick's crew were L. Cpl. G. R. Walker, Parkhill, Ont., and Tpr. Bill Boyd, Timmins, Ont.; J. E. Moore, Yorkton, Sask., and M. McKahnahan, St. John, N.B.

The original patrol from a Scottish regiment went across a canal north of Zetten, a village eight miles northwest of Nijmegen, and was pinned down in a water filled ditch for more than an hour by enemy fire. The patrol leader got back and brought reinforcements who got the men out although some of them were so numb from cold they had to be lifted from the ditch.

On the way back the British soldier was wounded and dropped behind, but he wasn't missed in the dark until some time later and by then the Germans had captured him. They took him into a house across the canal.

Next day Lieut. R. J. Dobson of Newcastle-on-Tyne took one other patrol with sections commanded by L. Cpls. A. Walton of Normoss, near Blackpool, and J. Quinn, of Denton, Burn, Newcastle. Cantwell, tank knot up the house and the infantrymen cleared out the Germans, killing two and taking three prisoners.

Inside one house they found the missing Tommy when the Germans had not yet evacuated. He was too seriously wounded for much conversation, but apparently the Germans had not treated him too badly.

A Long Way Back

On Corregidor, March 3 —(AP)— Gen. Douglas MacArthur returned to Corregidor today and ordered the United States flag raised to the peak of the flagstaff from which the Japanese tore it down three years ago.

Also present were 11 members of his staff who left the island with him aboard a patrol torpedo boat three years ago, almost to the day.

As he stepped onto the shattered naval dock, the Allied South-west Pacific Commander commented: "Well gentlemen, it has been a long way back."

BRITISH EMPIRE MUST WORK AS TEAM DECLARES KING

Canberra, March 2 (Reuters) — The Duke of Gloucester at a parliamentary dinner today said that to achieve a new world order the British Empire must work as a team. The Governor-General said: "We have our partners in this great task who have helped to defeat the enemy and who will help to win the peace." I mean primarily of the United States and Russia although I also naturally include all the United Nations," he said.

Washington Spotlight

By C. B. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, March 3 —(CP)— All over the world people were talking of and working for peace and brotherly love. Millions were facing death and torture to attain it.

In the House of Representatives members had just listened to a rereading of George Washington's farewell address to his people delivered Sept. 17, 1796.

They heard his stirring appeal for "an end to bitterness and sectionalism that might threaten the Union and tend to render alien to each other those who ought to be bound together by fraternal affection."

A few minutes later Ernest, 61-year-old Rep. John Rankin, militant anti-Red and anti-Negro Mississippi Democrat, launched a scurrilous attack upon huge, 53-year-old Rep. Frank Hook, a fellow Democrat from Michigan whom he accused of association with Communists.

Rep. Hook had called him some kind of "liar"—reports differed as to the kind. It was about as savage a spectacle as the House had ever witnessed although no blood ran and no real blows landed.

It was not long after when John W. Gallagher (D-Minnesota) arose to make his maiden speech. The former street cleaner, elected last November, had been given 30 minutes.

Rep. Gallagher also pleaded for an end to hatred, and a spirit of unity and tolerance. The interruptors occupied 200 lines of the Congressional record, most of it members squabbling among themselves on subjects not related to what Gallagher was trying to say.

The mild-mannered, disillusioned Mr. Gallagher sighed and if there were ghostly murmurs of protest from the Mount Vernon tomb where George and Martha, side by side by side on the Potomac, no one would have seen anyway.

There have been reports of workers making huge wages but they are not borne out by the following classified advertisement read in Congress the other day from the Mobile (Ala.) Press Register, inserted by a man whose war job had ended: "Terminated. For sale, one pair of shoes. Going back to Mississippi just like I came."

Japanese Garrison Nearly Bisected

Guam, March 3 (AP)—Only 600 yards of terrain stood today between United States Marines and the point at which they may cut the last interconnecting Japanese pillbox line, along blood-soaked Two Island's northern end.

But it was a rugged stretch, which sloped irregularly from the sea to a cliff which probably will serve as the last stand of the Japanese.

Between the Marine post and the cliff runs a system of half-underground enemy defense works which, like others the Marines have faced in the last 10 days, must be taken the hard way. And the Japanese are beginning to show signs of desperation.

Third division Marines lunged forward 700 yards Friday to seize a 362-foot hill in the northern part of the island, within rifle range of the cliff, and in position to cut the boomerang-shaped Japanese line in two, approximately at the bend.

Once the Japanese back up beyond the cliff they will be in the open, between the Marines and the sea, and they no longer will have the advantage of connecting strongpoints.

INSULIN SHORTAGE

Toronto, March 3 — (CP)—Surgeon Capt. C. H. Best, co-discoverer of insulin with the late Sir Frederick Banting, said here yesterday the war has alleviated a shortage of insulin on this continent but the situation will become critical in the not too distant future unless demand continues at the present rate."

URGES STATE CONTROL

Paris, March 3—(AP)—Gen. De Gaulle declared yesterday that France's key industries and finances should be state-controlled at least for the duration of the war and urged Frenchmen to increase industrial and agricultural production.

HAD PARTING SHOT

Rome, March 3—(Reuters)—One of Britain's newest warplanes, the 33,000-ton King George V, had a parting shot at the Germans while on her way to a new station in the Far East and badly shook 30,000 of them on Crete when she let go dynamiting broadsides of one-ton high explosive shells at Germans on the Western tip of the island.

Two Bandits Make Haul of $15,000 In Montreal Hold-up

Montreal, March 3—(CP)— Two bandits escaped with $15,000 early Friday after an armored truck robbery outside the offices of Wilder Limited here.

Two guards of the Brink's Express Company were disarmed when the bandits took them by surprise as they were carrying the $15,000 payroll to an office where night shift workers were to receive their pay.

The guards said the two men, wearing masks and air-parka windbreakers, staged the holdup in a narrow passageway between one section of the meat-packing establishment and another. The bandits were gone with the money within three minutes, while the employees were waiting only a few feet away.

The bandits escaped in a station-wagon parked in front of the employer's entrance. Several witnesses told police the vehicle was similar to army station wagons and police said it was possible the men were army deserters.

A. N. Cyr, supervisor of Brink's Express, said the hold-up was the first in 18 years for the company in Montreal.

"The job was obviously an inside affair," he added. "All entrances are blocked to outsiders. Only persons carrying passes are allowed onto the premises. My men followed a set routine to deliver the weekly payroll and anybody knowing that routine because the holdup was flawlessly executed."

British Reach Yezin On Road to Mandalay

Advance Allied Headquarters, Southeast Command, March 3 — (Reuters)— British 14th Army troops, driving on Mandalay from their bridgehead on the Irrawaddy at Mimnyu, 30 miles west of Meiktila, have captured the village of Yezin on the south bank of the river.

On the Arakan coastal strip, 15th Indian Corps troops have advanced northwards against Japanese opposition, from Buthidaung towards Tamandu, 62 miles southeast of Akyab.

Re-allocation of Beer Quotas Made Among Ont. Hotels

Toronto, March 3 —(CP)— Hon. W. G. Webster, Ontario Liquor Commissioner, said Friday the Liquor Control Board of Ontario has been carrying out a re-allocation of beer quotas among Ontario hotels.

"There has been no great upheaval," said Mr. Webster, adding that the re-allocation was aimed at a trend of bringing about a fairer distribution of beer on a per capita basis and in rewarding hotels which were well-managed in preference to those whose records were unsatisfactory conditions.

He said the quota for London, Ont., had been increased about four per cent but he expressed doubt that it would mean that hotels there would be able to stay open in the evening as reported in a London dispatch. The Oshawa quota was increased almost six per cent, Several other centres also received increased quotas while others were reduced.

Mr. Webster said the original quotas were based on consumption in 1943 but many inequalities had developed since then because of various factors including population shifts.

WATCH REPAIRING IN WARTIME . . . !

Here are the Facts About A Little Known Problem . . . A Casualty of the War!

To paraphrase an old adage — the watch repair situation today "hurts us as much as it hurts you" .... We've worried and fretted over it for a long time now — and frankly we're up against a stone wall .... Extra watch repair men aren't available — materials are extremely short and we have to wait and wait for them. In fact materials require priority ratings .... The result is that we just can't give the kind of service you were once accustomed to at the Angus McFee store. We're doing our best — and all to often that "best" is 8 to 10 weeks delivery. Please be assured we are trying to do better — and we wish we could because we do realize the importance of keeping watches running.

But . . . We Know You Understand —And Will Be Patient!

THANKS FOR YOUR CO-OPERATION . . .

Rhineland Cities Fall

Irresistible pressure on the West and East Fronts that the war upon Hitler's legions in North Italy by the Allied forces in Italy are bringing results. News late Friday indicated that the whole Western Front of Germany was collapsing and many larger cities fell in the day's Allied push.

Events on this front now have been likened to the situation which developed after the D-Day invasion in Normandy.

Supreme Commander Eisenhower and his generals met Thursday for the first time since D-Day and conferred on the matters pertaining to the progress of the battle of the Rhine and the destruction of all German resistance on the west side of the river.

Overpowering air raids have been dealing destruction at the enemy defences and protecting and aiding the way of the advancing armies of the Allies.

"Walk Forward Together"

Prime Minister Churchill in his explanation to the British Parliament of the conference talks at Yalta in the Crimea turned at the close to the past few months and the outlook for the future in the decisions for war and peace reached at that great series of discussions. He said:

"I cannot say that during these last three winter months the human race all over the world have undergone more physical agony and misery than at any other period throughout this planet has passed." Then he reflected on life on this planet in earlier ages. "In the Stone Age mammoths were fewer and primitive creatures little removed from animal origin knew no better. We suffer more. We feel more. I must admit in this war I have felt no grave a sense of responsibility as I did at Yalta. In 1940 and 1941, when we in this island were alone and invasion was so near, the actual steps we ought to take and our attitude toward them seemed plain and simple. If a man is coming across the sea to kill you, you do everything in your power to make sure he dies before he finishes his journey. That may be difficult and it may be painful but at least it is simple."

The reason for his greater sense of responsibility was then touched upon by the British statesman: "Now we enter into a world of imponderables, and at every stage self-questioning arises. It is a mistake to look too far ahead. Only one link in the chain of destiny can be handled at will." And then he gave the reason for his confidence in the results of the recent parleys: "If Israel is the House will feel that hope has been strengthened, confidence strengthened by our meeting in the Crimea. The ties that bind the three Great Powers together and their mutual comprehension of each other have grown.

"The United States has entered deeply and constructively into the life and salvation of Europe. We all three set our hands to far-reaching engagements, at once practical and solemn.

"I am sure that a fairer choice is open to mankind than they have known in recorded ages. Let us be sure burn brighter and shine more broadly than before. Let us walk forward together."

This great and confident hope of Mr. Churchill and his associates in the Yalta meeting, Marshal Stalin and President Roosevelt, must be the hope of everyone so that it will be realized in all its benefits for humanity.

The practical statesmen facing the world's problems which have been so marked through the development of aggression have come to what they believe will be the greatest step ever taken towards this great object of a lasting peace in the world.

See Inspiring Indication

British Government confidence in the early end of the war in Europe is considered by observers as indicated by the announcement of Home Secretary Morrison that British double summer time which is to begin on Easter Monday, will be terminated by mid-July and by the hope he expressed that it would not be necessary to extend the terminal date beyond July 15 and that it might be possible to return to Greenwich mean time on October 2nd. At present Britain is as a war measure on summer time the year round. Under the Emergency Powers Defence Act (1939) summer time in Britain and North Ireland was made continuous throughout the year with the extra hour added during the summer months, this resulting in double summer time.

Before the war in Canada daylight saving time was a matter of local regulation. Railways ran on standard time, but many cities and towns adopted daylight saving time for the summer months, or probably most towns and the rural sections throughout the Dominion then observed standard time for the summer months. The Toronto council Ontario and Quebec municipalities which had been observing daylight time were compelled to continue to do so indefinitely throughout the year as a power-saving measure. On January 26th, 1942, daylight saving was made obligatory in all municipalities in Canada throughout the year.

"Mines Were Laid in Enemy Waters"

The mining of enemy waters from the air is a high activity. Recently it has been worked out as carefully to plan as the strategic bombing of Germany, and has become increasingly important now that the focus of the war is so much on the Baltic.

The conditions under which Nelson could sail into that enclosed sea and bombard the shore batteries of Copenhagen vanished with the invention of the sea mine. Now, paradoxically, it is the mine that has opened the Baltic up once more. Dropped from an aeroplane, the mine has provided a method of attacking the enemy's hitherto secure shipping from the Kattegat to the Gulf of Danzig. Just now, with the Russian right flank on the shore by Danzig, the main mining of the Baltic almost ceases to be a strategic operation and becomes tactical. It is going on, night after night, almost as regularly as Berlin is bombed by Mosquitos.

When the Germans invaded Norway in 1940, it was announced that the ports had been mined the waters of the Kattegat, Skaggerrak and western Baltic. The mines had been dropped by overloaded obsolete Hampden bombers which staggered out under the muzzles of shore batteries to drop one magnetic mine apiece. The mining organization was built up until, about a year ago, the Air Ministry was able to announce that it absorbed ten per cent of all Bomber Command's effort and that, up to that time, more than 18,000 mines-laying sorties had been made.

Technique has improved as much as it has in every other form of air warfare, and the mines are laid today by four-engined Sterlings, Halifaxes and Lancasters which carry many times the load of the old Hampden. As mine-carrying aircraft do not need to fly so high as bombers that attack Berlin and industrial German, it is possible to keep on this work veteran aircraft that would otherwise be relegated to the scrapheap or Training Command—a great saving of manhours to the factories.

The results of minelaying are hard to compute. They can be collected slowly by Secret Service agents and aerial reconnaissance. At the beginning of 1944 the Air Ministry reckoned that at least 500 enemy ships had been sunk by mines laid from the air. No figure has been published since, but it may be taken that the enemy casualty rate has gone up sharply, and thereby the minelaying effort has been stepped up and the mines set to search of delayed dividends. Until a mine has been swept up by the enemy, it may still sink a ship, regardless of how many years ago it was laid.

In addition to minelaying the R.A.F. has been attacking Baltic shipping in a more direct way during the last few weeks. A few days ago it was revealed that Coastal Command Liberators equipped with Leigh lights were preying on the enemy's Baltic sea routes. In one night these Liberators attacked a destroyer, four U-boats and a Merchantman northwest of the Gulf of Danzig. The ships had been forced to flee their ports by the advancing Russians, and the R.A.F. caught up with them.

THE VANISHED ONE

Oh, where do golfing parsons go
When winter hides the links with snow
And how, when white the fairway lies,
Do golfing parsons exercise?

Those afternoons, from getting to fall,
They were among us first of all;
The first upon the starting tee;
And first of all good company.

But with the dismal time of year
When thrush and robin disappear
They, too, departed in the gloom,
Deserting course and locker room.

But with the birds again a-wing
And purple hyacinth blooming,
Once more the parsons we shall see,
Awaiting us upon the tee.

Crews of B-29's Enjoy Life of Ease Between Bombing Runs on Japan

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Marianas Islands—(delayed)—Before starting out on my long tours with the Navy, I was invited to visit the famous B-29 Superfortress bases that are bombing Japan from here.

This came about largely because I have "kinfolk" flying on the B-29's, and I thought I'd kill two birds by visiting and writing of both at the same time.

So here I am, sitting on a screened porch in my underwear, comfortable as a cat, with the surf beating on the reef a mile from me. Palm trees are in the yard. They are all appendages of their good fortune, and I've not heard a dissenting voice. Of course, they would all rather be home, but who wouldn't?

The man I came to visit is Lieut. Jack Hales, another farm boy from down the road near Dana, Indiana. Jack is a sort of nephew of mine. He isn't exactly a nephew, but it's too complicated to explain. I've got to hold him on my knee and all that sort of thing. Now he's a man, but starting to get bald like his "uncle."

Jack's folks still live just a mile down the road from our farm. But Jack left the farm and went to the University of Illinois and got educated that good, and was just ready to become a lawyer when the war came along and he enlisted.

He spent a year as a private and then got a commission and now he's a first lieutenant and flew over with the B-29s from Nebraska last October.

When I telephoned Jack and said I'd be out in about an hour or maybe a few days, he said he would put up an extra cot in his hut for me.

When I got there the cot was up, with blankets and mattress covers laid out on it. Jack has told the other boys he was having a visitor, and on the assumption it was a girl, a whole load set eager volunteers digging him out of the hay. Even after I showed up, skinny and bald, it turned out such laziness had given all been decent about it.

Jack lives in a steel Quonset hut with 19 other officers. Eight of them are pilots, but Jack is a radio operator and another fellow flays charge of all his gunnery practice. He doesn't have to go on missions except when he wants to, I gather.

But upon arriving I learned, both to my great delight and surprise, that he had been on more missions than anybody in his squadron. In fact, he's been on all of them. The squadron commander has forbidden him to go on any more.

He doesn't go on so many because often he has to fly practice hops, and likes to go on combat missions. He also likes to be the thing to learn, and because he can coordinate things by going.

Another mission or two and he will have had his quota authorizing him to go back to rest camp for a while. But he seems to show no strain from the combat. He's pretty phlegmatic, and he says that after getting around camp gets so monotonous he can hardly wait to go on a hop just for a change.

During flight Jack sits in a little compartment in the rear of the plane, and can't see at all. All his missions over Japan he's seen only from 35,000 feet. Not that they didn't have plenty excitement from there, so busy he seldom gets to a window for a peek. The one time he did, a Jap came slamming under the plane so close I almost fell out the window.

Like all combat crewmen, Jack spends all night and at least half of each day lying on his bunk. He holds the record in his hut for "sack time." The most anyone else in the hut can get done doing nothing. He has worked up organized time, and doesn't take much of his time between missions. Of course there's nothing else to do, you just lie around.

Jack says he has put on any he won't be able to face a job after the war, so thinks he'll work into civilian life gradually by going back to school again.

The B-29 fliers sleep on folding canvas cots with rough white mattresses. Sleeping is heavy, and along toward morning you usually pull a blanket over you.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

War Veteran Urges Support of Blood Clinic

Chirlette St. Hospital,
Toronto.

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

I have been reading your paper and was more than surprised to see the "Blood Clinic" that is to be held here in Belleville have arranged for only one day. Why, in the issue of your paper you stated that there was only eight blood donors on Thursday at your local clinic. As a veteran of the last war I say that the people of Belleville would be doing more for the war effort if they supported their blood donors clinic.

The boys in Italy and France never hesitate to support the blood donor clinic that are established throughout the different theatres of war. I can well remember one occasion when a little corporal was asked to give a donation and every man volunteered. If the boys can come out of the lines and cheerfully give their blood I can see no reason why the citizens of Belleville can't leave their chairs and back up the good work that they have done so much for our fighting forces.

I know and I speak for the boys overseas as well as myself when I say that the Canadian Red Cross has done a wonderful job, and this is only one of many things that they are doing in this war. We have in our Canadian Army the best fighters in the world who are working day and night to save the lives of our wounded soldiers. So let's get behind our fighting men and give them the supply of plasma that they need so badly to carry on their great work. It is very well to talk about after the day of Victory, but we must realize that there are still a few thousands or men killed and wounded, and if these men are not supported we are not entitled to celebrate the great Victory they so dearly earned.

I am writing this letter in effort on the great job we still have to do on the home front to support our boys and I am sure we have an effort by all this people not just part of the people the more we will bring our fighting hair I can't promise it will be long.

Reader Y. R. writes: More than a year ago I wrote you about my arthritis and you published it and I am sure you have no more pain, my electric heating pad is

CALCIUM AND VITAMIN D

The relation between calcium and vitamin D is similar to that between Mr. and Mrs. Stork. Without Dame Nature's calcium carbonate and vitamin D she can't assimilate and retain it.

There are some "indications," as the doctors say, for taking calcium and vitamin D. For instance, if you have cold and clammy hands, heavy, weak breath or the sense of fullness or bloating when the stomach is given milk to "coax" probably you will have a pint or two or grains of unprepared chalk, otherwise known as calcium carbonate, given relief. It is nearly harmless to take once or several times a day if necessary, as any anti-acid we have.

For all general or systemic purposes, however, it is advisable to take some vitamin-D with every dose of calcium, whether it is calcium carbonate, calcium lactate, calcium chloride, calcium gluconate, calcium citrate, calcium phosphate to "gas" probably you will have five or six grains of unprepared chalk; otherwise known as calcium carbonate, gives relief. It is nearly harmless to take once or several times a day if necessary, as any anti-acid we have.

Returning fliers declared it a "perfect mission" from the standpoint of bombs observed on the target, and the weather.

Honor to Canada

Achievements of the Allied forces on all fronts and evidence of unity of purpose among the Allied nations confirmed by the Crimea conference were described as heartening.

"At the moment", he said, "we feel particularly proud that the Canadian army has been a spearhead of the mounting of tension in the west. It is an honor to Canada that units and formations of other Allied armies are distinguishing themselves under Canadian Command in Germany, just as the 1st Canadian Corps is distinguishing itself in Italy as part of the British 8th Army".

The purposes of the new session —the sixth of the 19th Parliament —will be to vote interim financial appropriations to carry through the election period and give to the Canadian delegation at the forthcoming United Nations Security Organization Conference opening at San Francisco April 25 an expression of support of Parliament.

Mr. King expressed the hope that "all parties will co-operate in the speedy discharge of essential business leaving other issues to be settled by the electorate and the new Parliament".

Troops Should be Supported.

While Canadian Forces are fighting at the front, he said, all other considerations but support for them should take second place. If possible the distraction and controversy of elections should be avoided.

"For our security, for the future of our country, for the freedom of mankind, the sons of Canada are offering their lives", he said.

"They are fighting and dying as Canadians without distinction of race or creed or party affiliation. To be worthy of them and of the cause for which they fight and for which so many have already given their lives we at home should live together and work together, in these fateful months, with a minimum of controversy, dissension and division."

The Government had sought and still sought to avoid an election while fighting was in progress. After the defeat of Defence Minister McNaughton in the Grey North by-election it had given consideration to whether a further session of the present parliament should be held.

It was decided to adhere to its resolution to avoid holding the election in the midst of fighting and also avoid the use of Government's warrants to finance expenses over the period of the election.

West Conflict With Loan.

Up until last week, it would have been possible to have arranged an election before April 23 the date the Victory Loan campaign starts and April 25, the day the United Nations conference at San Francisco is to get under way.

It was desirable that the election campaign should not conflict with these two events and Mr. King said it would be a "distinct advantage" to have members of all political parties take part in the loan campaign. These considerations made it clear that polling day could not be before the month of June.

"It is impossible to fix a definite date now because it is impossible to predict the course of the war," he said, "One thing, however, is certain. Each month and each day brings us nearer to the end of the war.

"It is perhaps not going too far to express the hope that before the close of the San Francisco conference organized resistance in Germany will have been crushed."

Of victory over the Germans Mr. King expressed certainty. He said the fate of Germany is sealed. It might be a matter of weeks or months but it was no longer a matter of years.

NAZIS WITHDRAW

Canadian troops' fighting in the Hochwald corridor have had a tough time and continuous counter-attacks yesterday and night forced leading infantry to withdraw one mile at the eastern end. They fell back from a wood 2½ miles from Xanten, to dig in again on the eastern fringe of the Hochwald.

In an effort to break from the eastern end of their corridor the Canadians drew the strongest German forces on the front onto themselves and probably the heaviest fighting of the offensive occurred in this vital zone.

Clear Southern Belge

Canadian infantrymen have practically cleared the southern bulge of the Hochwald and farther south British armor was making loose into open country, aiming at Geldern, 10 miles away.

In the northern section of the Hochwald other Canadian infantry was nearly through the forest and about a mile from Marienbaum on the Calcar-Xanten highway, British troops were 1½ miles west of Marienbaum.

As German resistance in the western sector of the forest collapsed, British infantry pushed north from Wyler, capturing Kevelaer with little fighting, and Winnekendonk between Kevelaer and the Hochwald. Northern troops also were facing down the highway to Venlo, taken yesterday by the U.S. 9th, and contact with them was said to be in most parts of this sector.

The weather was fairly clear and the air forces anticipated a big day if the Germans attempted to flee to the Rhine in daylight. Linked with U. S. 9th and Canadian Army forces would speed their retreat.

BRACKEN CRITICAL

With such an inquiry free of political interference the information could be obtained in a very short time.

"Let us not have the answer that this cannot be done for security reasons or that it will give comfort to the enemy," he continued. "That is only another way of saying it will not give comfort to the government. Let us be once and for all who is guilty of untruths, diabolical or otherwise. That is all I ask. That is my challenge made on behalf of our fighting men, the people of this country and least of all, myself."

At another stage of his address Mr. Bracken expressed criticism of the government for withholding information.

Shrouded in Mystery.

"For too long the unfair army call-up, the discriminating two-army system and the inadequacy of reinforcements have been shrouded in secrecy by a government which on this matter has been weak and vacillating and which has hidden its faults by the use of censorship and the excuse of security regulations", he said.

In a tour of the European battlefronts he had talked with men in the ranks and high ranking British officers.

"I am not given to strong words," he said, "but when young Canadians told me that they had come without adequate trained reinforcements, when they gave me the message to bring back home that they needed not only trained reinforcements but the assurance that the nation was behind them, when I saw them back of the line after three or four or five years of the abnormal environment of war and nearly two years of battle, I would have been mad, of some had I not spoken clearly to the nation they had left."

Defies Public Opinion.

The electors of Grey North in the election of Garfield Case, Progressive Conservative candidate, and defeat of Defence Minister McNaughton had answered that call from the men overseas. But Prime Minister Mackenzie King had defied public opinion.

"If Mr. King wants to prove that he believes in democracy, let him change his unfair and discriminatory policy, and let him ask for the resignation of his defeated minister both of which Grey North told him to do." Mr. Bracken said.

Gen. McNaughton in his statement that Mr. Bracken was guilty of a "diabolical untruth" in saying drafted men had thrown their rifles overboard on the way overseas had sought to sidetrack main issues.

"I refuse to accept the unsupported statement of Gen. McNaughton," Mr. Bracken said.

Says Policy Divide, Rule.

The policy of Mr. King had been "divide and rule".

It was Mr. King and his lieutenants who indoctrinated one province to fear a fair call-up for war," he said. "There can be no unity when the burdens of war are unfairly laid on any section of the country. Equality of sacrifice, effort and equality of sacrifice are both essential to the unity of any nation, whether in peacetime or in war."

The C.C.F. had opposed conscription until it heard the angry voice of the nation, he said.

"It was not a conviction on the part of the C.C.F. it was only the C.C.F.'s fear of the nation's anger as it rose louder and louder, insisting that reinforcements be sent to the men who needed them that made it trim its sails and reverse its course."

Minimum Voting Age in Ontario May Be Lowered

Toronto, March 3 — (CP)—Lowering of the minimum voting age in Ontario from 21 to 18 years, proposed by A. A. MacLeod (Lab.-Prog., Toronto Bellwoods) in an amendment to an election bill, received wide support among other Ontario Legislature Members. Further consideration of the move will be given next week to the bill introduced yesterday.

E. B. Jolliffe, C.C.F. Opposition leader, said reduction of the voting age would be supported by older persons as well as those directly affected. Setting of a minimum voting age was purely arbitrary, said Mr. Jolliffe, and "it would seem logical to draw the line at a point where young men and women are old enough to get married, work in industry and go to war, but where they are subject to punishment for lawbreaking."

Aurelien Belanger (L — Prescott) suggested that a special committee be appointed to study the whole question of reducing the age of majority to 18 years. It was argued that if the Voting Act were lowered, the contractual age in law and the minimum age of candidacy for political office should be likewise reduced.

Moves an Amendment

Bert Leavens (CCF — Toronto Woodbine) moved an amendment to the bill to permit those in houses of refuge and industry and other charitable public institutions to vote in elections.

Hydro Commissioner G. H. Challies, answering Mr. Salsbery, said the Ontario Hydro Commission has not discriminated "in any way" against any organization, among its employees and is not financing company union. Mr. Challies said Commission employees had helped their own association in 1936, but there was only independence of the Commission. The Commission had spent no funds to oppose an electrical union.

Amend Hospital Act

A bill to amend the Public Hospital Act was introduced by Health Minister Vivian. The amendment would permit hospitals and hospital corporations to expropriate lands in distant locations, and a section is repealed by which indigent patients must obtain an order from a medical officer of health to be admitted to hospitals outside their home township. A bill amending the Workmen's Compensation Act, given first reading, would clarify regulations covering employees contributing to an accident fund to ensure covering every possible situation.

Final reading was given bills providing minor amendments to the Counties Reforestation Act, Crown Timber Act and Public Works Act.

ROMANIA AT WAR WITH JAPAN

London, March 3—(CP)—A Moscow broadcast said last night the Rumanian Government Thursday "decided to declare war on Japan."

Yesterday At Queen's Park

By The Canadian Press

That the minimum voting age be reduced from 21 to 18 years was moved as an amendment to a bill revising the Election Act by A. A. MacLeod (Lab.-Prog., Toronto Bellwoods).

Aurelien Belanger (L— Prescott) suggested appointment of a special committee to study reduction of the age of majority so as to allow persons of 18 to vote, run for political office and have contractual rights in law.

Bert Leavens (CCF — Toronto Woodbine) moved an amendment to the election bill to give the franchise to those in houses of refuge and industry and other charitable public institutions.

The Ontario Hydro Electric Commission has not discriminated "in any way" against union organization among its employees, nor is it financing a company union, Commissioner G. H. Challies told the House in reply to J. B. Salsbery (Lab.-Prog. — Toronto St. Andrew).

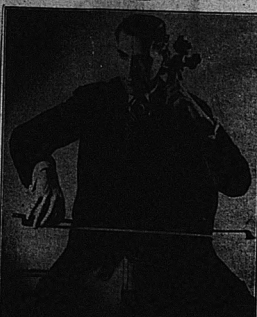
Famous 'Cellist To Play Here



GREGOR PIATIGORSKY, 'CELLIST

Gregory Pialigorsky, the famous 'cellist who plays here on March 15th, sponsored by the Belleville Community Concert Association was born on April 17, 1903, in Ekaterinoslav, Russia. Since 1942, he has been an American citizen.

The season 1944-45 marks his 16th consecutive American tour, since he came to United States for the first time in the autumn of 1929. Piatigorsky has played more concerts in the United States and Canada than any other violoncellist. He has given over 650 recitals and has appeared over 150 times as soloist with orchestra. Serge Koussevitsky refers to him as "the greatest 'cellist of our day".

On tour Piatigorsky uses his famous 'cello made by Domenico Montagnana in the year 1736, a wonderful instrument and one of the most valuable built in the world. It is conservatively valued at $30,000. He also travels with at least four bows from his fine collection which includes an unique specimen by Tourte, the most famous of bow-makers.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Don't Marry a "Roamer"

Do you girls know a sailor like this one? If you do, don't marry him, though I am sure he has the kindest heart in the world. Judge for himself. "Roamer," he of course warns all the girls around him, and I think he expects me to emphasize this warning, which I am prone to do.

"Roamer" is young, gay and (I am sure) handsome and charming. He has, evidently, a way with girls. He is great difficulty is that he is, as he says himself, restless. The susceptibility has gotten him into what he considers a fine mess.

"For some time," he tells me, "I've been going with a girl who is the finest, most grand times together. But I'll soon have to be shipping out and I've seen it, and at her family see it, we're engaged. In fact, we're supposed to marry.

"I wouldn't mind this a bit if the world were not full of girls. The trouble is that I like them all, and so, even if it's the middle of the Pacific Ocean, with all the native families were cannibals, I'm sure to find a girl who will seem just as good as this one. That's the way I am, and I can't help it.

"But I can't explain this to my present girl and her family. They expect me to talk 'forever and ever' stuff. But it would be a crime if I married this girl and made any promises, because I couldn't keep them more than a week. Tell me what the right line for me is, because though I'm sorry about this girl of mine, and I can't believe I'll ever have any trouble with her, there's something rather steely and determined about her father, and in fact her mother too.

(Signed) "Roamer."

"Roamer" should have considered himself into the belief that he is a "lady killer." His problem is not new, which is nonsense. At present the world represents the worst possible risk for any girl to marry. But if he faces facts and tries to make the best of them he will gain self respect. To extricate himself from the situation he describes, he will have to make a pretty full confession of his own weakness and the experience won't be a pleasant one for anybody.

Unfortunately, girls are "susceptible" too. So I hope they will be on their guard against "Roamer's" love with professional "Seamen's"

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Premature Wrinkles.

Crows feet and frown lines have no business on the faces of the thirty-age girls. One sees them now and then, also little progressing cuticles across the forehead. Something wrong! One's petals should not start to fall that early), not these days, when so much information on health and hygiene is available.

The victim of premature facial petals is nearly always thin, a nibbler at meals, highly emotional. She is on the go all the time. She expends energy faster than the physical motors can renew it. She is undernourished, isn't getting the various food elements she needs. Vitamins and minerals are lacking, no doubt. The delicate tissues of the face she is a state of semi-starvation; they soften and lose tone. With the underlying cushion of fibres gone slack, the skin surface hasn't the firm background it had in earlier years, so lills into tiny furrows.

Local treatment is helpful, but it must be backed up by a sensible correct routine of living. Nine hours of sleep are essential, because it is during sleep that nature makes repairs. New cells are created, the heart and eyes rest; the nervous system has time off. The girl with indigent sun rays streaking around her eyes must get to bed before she is utterly fatigued.

There is the important matter of diet, which should include meat, fish, poultry, dairy products—especially milk—eggs, fruits, vegetables and cereals. A quart of milk a day is not too much. One egg for breakfast is a requirement. The milk should be rich with cream, as it is the fatty content that has a rebuilding effect upon the facial tissues. Salty foods, highly spiced dishes, rich gravies and condiments should be avoided. Put more fat in the diet by creaming. Have a bowlful of crackers and milk at bedtime.

If appetite is not normal—if there is no interest in food—get plenty of exercise out of doors. You'll be as hungry as a wolf.

The facial tissues—the whole body in fact—need water, plenty of it. Without sufficient fluids, the skin surface dries out, is in condition to become lined.

Stop fretting and worrying. These two habits are responsible for many cases of premature wrinkles.

When washing your face, be gentle. Don't push the flesh up to the folds around the eyes. Use soap and water just warm enough to form suds. Hot water is depressing to tissues that have suffered a certain amount of depletion. Rinse with a cold rinse. Dry gently, apply a heavy massage cream, rubbing it in from the collar bones upward.

During the creamed fingers round the eyes, starting on the upper lid close to the nose, coming back underneath to starting point. Then over brisk. Let the cream stay on over night. In the morning dash on cold water, dry, use cream again.

Problems of North American Indians Discussed by Guild

Mrs. L. Andrews, Victoria Avenue, entertained the Young Women's Guild of Tabernacle Church on Monday evening, Feb. 26th. At the conclusion of the business meeting a short play, "The Gould Indian Princess Pen" was presented by Mrs. W. Harrison, Mrs. J. McCullough and Miss Reynolds, in the costumes of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

The Christian attitude toward differences of race and color was the theme of the devotional period, led by Mrs. Grant.

Mrs. H. R. Gibson, assisted by Mrs. A. Wilkes, Mrs. W. R. Vanderwoort, and Mrs. S. Kerr, led a discussion of the problems of the North American Indian today. Indian members of the armed forces presently interested in post-war rehabilitation plans and are wondering if they are entitled to share in their benefits.

The depletion of game and the wanton destruction of the forests has rendered the Indian dependent upon the white way of life and in many cases has left him landless. More than half of the Indian population is under 21 and is now engaged in farming. The Federal government provides an educational program which gives special attention to agricultural arts and crafts. Federal assistance is also given in the handling and marketing of the products of Indian handicrafts.

Tuberculosis, which affects 15 per cent of the Indian population, presents a major health problem. A seminar conference of Yale University and the University of Toronto held in 1939 to discuss the problem of the North American Indian, has recommended that he be trained for citizenship and given full citizenship rights. Mrs. Gibson concluded the business meeting by reading the program which will be given in Ottawa; and that a new health program had been put into economic betterment be devised. Conditions and conservations of resources might form a basis for operative organizations. An educational program for whites as well as Indians is required to solve the problems of the Indian people.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the hostess committee.

The Experts Say

By The Canadian Press

Ottawa, March 3.—(CP)—Wife or mother assisting the war by a soldier's heart while he is on furlough these days need not be surprised if he asks for poached apples with creamed cheese or banana fritters with apricot sauce "just like my mess sergeant used to make."

The army's official cook book includes recipes calculated to tempt fighting men from the four corners of the realms of their families who are now not getting the right things to eat. Measured by weight for 100 portions most of them are based on British army rations but with a distinctly Canadian flavor.

First pianos at the little cream-colored tables in the mess—supposition that soldiers have a well-developed sweet tooth . . . the section headed "Sweets" contains directions for cooking with 20 lbs. beef, 17 for potatoes, with an extra unit their skins, and 16 for other vegetables. In addition there are 27 for pastry and cakes, from gluten bags to fruit puddings.

Other sections of the book, however, give directions for cooking bacon dishes, egg dishes, cheese, soup, fish and liver dishes, grills, meat dishes, meat substitutes and pork dishes.

Variety is stressed in the general instructions as the layouts for suggested menus. Also there are tips for giving a wide selection should the cook not everyone responsible for maintaining the standard of meeting in the army.

Typical of the British custom, has included substantial teas and supper dishes in the menus. Along with tea and bread and butter they suggest cheese and short breads, jam and fruit cake, or salmon salad.

The thing to keep in mind about meat, says the cookbook, is to remember that hamburg and pot roasts are the most economical and most expensive cuts. And while you're cooking them they take a little more time and a little more attention—then, they can be made into extra special dishes.

BAKED ONIONS: Vegetable dishes are ideal for Lenten meals and the cook in the choice, arrangement and preparation of vegetables of different textures and colors. Baked onions will tempt even the most "picky" appetite.

This recipe for Baked Onions from Dorothy Darling, tested by the Agriculture Department's home economics onions, two cups soft bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon salt, a dash of pepper, ¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning, 2 tablespoons melted fat, two tablespoons mild-flavored fat.

Cook the onions in boiling salted water until just tender, drain thoroughly. Drain, remove and chop a portion of the onions. Mix with bread crumbs and seasonings, add melted fat and chopped onions and mix thoroughly with a fork. Fill onions with this mixture, stuffing. Place in a shallow baking dish and bake in a moderate oven (375°) for about one hour. Serve hot. Serves six.

Applesauce can be kept ready for emergency meals. Peel the apples, core and slice, put in a saucepan with a little water and boil until soft. Add sugar to taste and keep in a cool place. The sauce is delicious for fruit desserts, pies, cakes, as an accompaniment to meat, and for pudding. For variation add a dash of cinnamon, a few drops of lemon juice or a dash of cloves or cinnamon when serving with other meats.

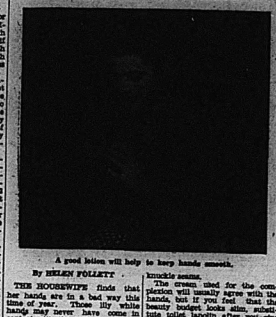
Keeping Hands Attractive



A good lotion will help to keep hands smooth.

By HELEN FOLLETT

THE HOUSEWIFE finds that her hands are in a bad way this time of year. Those lily white hands may never have come in for such hard work with the result until the war forced her to do her laundry work; she won't hurt her any knuckling down to hard labor. However, her pride is hurt when she looks at her hands. But, by and by, she'll take proper care of them? They're tired out, you've said, they are rosy red and there is no hands in sight. They are useful, but not ornamental. At the bridge table they are a disgrace. Cleaning Hands.

If the hands are very soiled, because of heavy work, try rubbing in a cleaning cream before using soap and water. It will condition the flesh, and the suds will not be so drying. Afterwards use a hand lotion, one of those milky, semi-fluid preparations that dry quickly, so you can go about your household duties. Nevertheless, it is advisable to add cornmeal to the lather; it grinds out the dust in the knuckle seams.

The cream used for the completion will usually agree with the hands, but if you feel that the beauty budget looks slim, sometime toilet lanolin after you give your cuticles a manicure. Its usual buttering at bedtime. Lanolin is lapped up by the dried out skin; you can keep heaping on more and more. In the morning, hands will be satin smooth and white.

Vanishing Cream.

If you are preparing for the merry evening party, and the day's work has been tough on your hands, you might try rubbing in a little vanishing cream which gives a nice finish, prettens up the rosy glow of the fingernails.

The preparation of vegetables will often put stains on the hands. Keep a cut lemon as handy rub the pulp over the flesh. Surprising, too, how lemon juice will whiten fingernails in a jiffy. Peroxide of hydrogen is good for classic discolorations, if they are not too pronounced. Dip a bit of cotton in the peroxide, place over the stains.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Service Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am planning my informal wedding in June. Will you tell me the fact my fiance is in the service, and the date of his furlough will not be definite until just before it is to come about, would it be improper for me to write notes to my relatives and friends informing them of my forthcoming marriage, the date, time, place and inviting them to come if it were convenient for me to order engraved invitations? And if this is proper, who should write these notes, my mother or I?

2.—A friend of mine is also getting married. Both of her parents are dead, and she has asked me to ask you who should announce her marriage, her brother who is in the service, or her sister with whom she lives? Is it necessary for me to order engraved invitations? And if this is proper, who should write these notes, my mother or I?

1.—Since your wedding is to be informal, you will would not be correct not to send engraved invitations or formal, engraved invitations. Your mother, as hostess of your wedding, should write most of the invitations, but you should write those to be sent to your own intimate friends.

And in these days what with the uncertainty of furlough dates and the consequent number of last minute things to be done, I think it's wise to write the informal notes to the prospective guests, telling them the date and the wedding plans: for example, that the wedding will probably be in May, and that it will be informal; the place in the country and approximate time (morning, afternoon, or evening); and any other arrangements that you think being "Kingdom of God in the World". Mrs. Coulter, Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. Morton and with the prayer.

The Study Book "West of the Dale Line" was given by Mrs. Stoneberg and Mrs. C. Holmes.

Mrs. Jewell gave a duet, "Whispering Hope".

JUNIOR CLUBS KEEPING HOCKEY FIRES AFLAME

Twenty Teams Vieing for Right to Enter Memorial Cup Finals

(By The Canadian Press)

Cancellation of the Allan Cup finals may have deprived senior hockey of first place in the Canadian sport urn but junior clubs across the Dominion still are ardently keeping the hockey fires aflame.

In provincial leagues throughout the country, 20 junior teams are vieing for the right to enter the Memorial Cup finals, emblem of national junior supremacy, scheduled for Toronto where they have been held for the last two years and are likely to be played for the duration.

The path least of the senior classic affords the army navy and air force banned personnel from participating two years ago was sounded a week ago when the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association voted to cancel the finals due to travel and player difficulties.

President Frank Zingrow said yesterday the C.A.H.A. had rejected application to consider a challenge series for the cup by Quebec Aces, who won the trophy last year in the finals at Quebec, and Vancouver, where the club was expected to be be played this year.

Zingrow said the Association does not object to exhibition matches or staging a series between their senior champions and provincial title and interprovincial playoffs are not put out of the question.

No Senior Playoffs.

In the West a movement is afoot to match last year's semi-finals, Port Arthur Bluebirders, with Saskatoon Royals, Winnipeg Monarchs, Donald's Aircrafts or the Vancouver team.

W. J. Hewitt, secretary of the Ontario Hockey Association, which announced that the O.H.A. winner, probably Hamilton Majors, now tied in 1-1 in a best-of-seven series with St. Catharines Saints, will play the northern O.H.A. winner.

Majors last night lost 6-3 against Saints while in the north, Kenora Thistles Open Ph. edged Porcupine All-Stars 5-4 in the first of a best-of-seven series.

The Quebec Senior Hockey League is reported not particularly keen on a playoff between that league and the interprovincial senior league while in the Ottawa district a playoff between Ottawa district league and the N.O.H.A. winners is under discussion. Senior playoffs will be held in the Border cities.

C.A.H.A. officials described senior attendance last year as "good" and if the Axis can shake their grip they are loose — many are frozen in essentials for industries and unable to travel — an unofficial Canadian final may result.

Meanwhile the juniors, their finals a certainty, are engaged in playoffs. Port Arthur West-End Bruins will represent the Thunder Bay league in Memorial finals.

Monarchs Dominate West.

Winnipeg Monarchs dominated the Manitoba Junior League all season but have run afternoon opposing Rangers and Winnipeg Esquire-Beacon Wings have advancing to the semi-final playoffs.

In Saskatchewan the powerful Moose Jaw Canucks are expected to have little trouble outsing the Prince Albert Black Hawks in the provincial finals and in Alberta Edmonton Canadians are matched with Calgary Avenue Grills for provincial honours.

Playoffs have started in the district O.H.A. Junior Group with St. Michael's College Majors leading St. Catharines Teepees 2-1 in a best-of-seven series, Galt leading Oshawa Generals (Memorial Cup champions) 2-0 in a best-of-five series, Toronto Young Rangers leading Toronto Marlboros 1-0 in a best-of-three series.

In Quebec, Montreal Royals and Montreal Nationals still are in the running but will have to overcome the winners of the Ottawa Junior City series for the province's title. They are expected to be Hull Volants 2-1 winners over Montreal Concordia semi-final with Ottawa Trojkels 1-0, Ottawa Canadians and Montreal guards are scheduled to open the other half of the semi-finals Tuesday.

Six teams continue the playoff hunt in the Maritimes, Sydney Bruins, Glace Bay Miners, Halifax Tyro, Amherstein and Moncton Bruins. It is not expected the Prince Edward Island junior team from Freetown will enter the play offs.

GETTING READY FOR 21ST SEASON

...ington, March 2 (AP)—Billy McGowan, baseball umpire who fired Lou Gehrig as "Ironman", is preparing to start his 21st season and his 21st in the major.

Second oldest of major league umpires, broke into the big show in 1922, and worked more than 16 consecutive seasons, without missing a game until arthritis laid him up for days in 1941.

Billy has actual count of the games he officiated without skipping one, but it figures out about 2,500. Gehrig's playing record was 2,130.

Toronto, March 3 (CP)—Though spring is in the air, the usual gloom that accompanies the thought of term end final examinations is not present on the campus at the University of Alberta. Instead a jubilant spirit is in evidence and Gateway, university journal, Jack-Intosh reports that many students were even whistling on the way to 8 o'clock lectures—imagine that!

The reason? Well, it seems that U. of A. has many literary magazines in the Prairies—has tested its worthy case for many years, and this year the literary organ brought home the Rigby trophy.

To win the honor, Gateway Gold squad defeated teams from the universities of Saskatchewan and Manitoba within a few hours.

Some Scoring.

Ontario (Ki-Toule) Joanette, scoring ace of the Oshawa Braves in the Interprovincial Senior Loop, has set a record that will take some equalling. Joanette recently compiled 101 points playing in 27 of the 30 games.

The four-team Interprovincial League wound up its schedule with 778 goals scored in 77 games. One contest saw 27 markers rifled into the two nets, Valleyfield topping Cornwall Cookies, 19-8. Valleyfield, by the way, scored 240 of those 778 goals.

Suggestion Dept.

Recalling the farce of last year's Memorial Cup finals in which the Western finalists were far outclassed by Oshawa Generals, Mike (Kingston Whig-Standard) Rodden says the C.A.H.A. officials would be well advised to cancel the playoffs this year if they are convinced that either team is below the required calibre.

Last year the Westerners broke all known records by enrolling Eastern stars so that the series would not lose public support. It certainly is not an inspiring spectacle to see players floundering around helplessly while the crowds howl in dismay.

JOYCE UPSETS IKE WILLIAMS IN TITLE BOUT

Manager for Willie Wants Fight Against Juan Zurita

New York, March 2 —(AP)— Willie Joyce upset Ike Williams in Madison Square Garden last night and thereby threw next month's scheduled N.B.A. lightweight title bout between Williams and Juan Zurita, of Mexico City, in confusion.

Pete Moran, matchmaker for Herman Taylor, promoter of the title bout in Philadelphia, said the bout would go through as scheduled on April 6. However, Charley Johnston, manager of Joyce, said he would "refer" to Abe Greene, president of the N.B.A., that Joyce should get the title fight.

"We're not bragging," Schuster asserted. "We think Joyce is entitled to a title chance."

It is likely that Greene will arrange a compromise by ordering the winner of the Williams-Zurita bout to meet Joyce for the title within 30 days.

Joyce, who has all fast beat Williams at Philadelphia as a 6 to 1 underdog, won the decision in a second bout with the Trenton Ike, lightweight champion and added his way to victory in the fight. In the 12th round he brought the crowd of 21,137 (including 4,000 GI's) to their feet by knocking Williams into the ropes and then scoring a kayo victory.

Joyce, a Gary, Ind., lad who thus jumped into prominence as a lightweight contender, piled up a nearly lead of points, taking five of the first six rounds.

Joyce weighed 136 pounds, Williams 135½.

What's Doing in Sport

The Board of Governors of the N.H.L. has modified the regulations governing qualification by rookie players for the Calder Memorial Trophy award, it was announced today by President Mervyn (Red) Dutton. The amended code will be effective beginning with the number of players who have participated in more than two league games or playoff games in the 1944-45 season. According to Dutton, a player who has participated in more than two games but less than 20 games can still be regarded as a full-fledged rookie.

A somewhat similar exception was made two years ago at the suggestion of the late Frederick (Cy) Calder himself when Gaye Stewart, who has annexed Maple Leafs and now a lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Navy, was awarded the trophy after he had played 19 minutes in the 1942 Stanley Cup game against Detroit Red Wings.

Gunder Haegg, great Swedish miller, had a brief workout yesterday in New York in late preparation for his race in the garden. He soon meet there tonight against Jim Peters, Englishman who paces this season, and three other U.S. star performers. Haegg and Joe Rankin Seaton Lidman had arrived from Boston only Thursday after a 23-day ocean voyage.

A former track steward, E. J. (Jack) Cleary of Miami, Fla., yesterday was named general manager of the Jockey Club, operators of six years, succeeding John H. Hertz, deceased. About 500 riders, including the topnotch performers, are members of the Guild.

Paced by Sgt. Jimmy Fowler, ex-Toronto Leafs defenceman, and Cpl. Barney Reid, starry wing, Camp Borden Flyers breezed to a four-goal rally in the final period to defeat Centralia R.C.A.F. 5-3 here for the championship of No. 1 Air Command. Centralia, last year's champions, were heavy pregame favorites.

Arthur MacNamara, Director of National War Service, gave the green light to all sports in Canada yesterday by declaring at Ottawa his department considers that a year of recreation in maintaining morale and physical fitness of the war effort were allowed to play pro hockey, pro football while, in horse racing, not many men were tied up, it's said.

Formerly with New York Giants, Cecil Travis, veteran shortstop of National League catcher, has signed with the Philadelphia Phillies, it was announced today.

Washington Lions scored a 4-3 victory over New York Rovers last night in the U. S. Amateur to take the opening game of their best-of-three title finals at United States Eastern Hockey League.

Clinton R.C.A.F., new basketball champions of No. 1 Air Command, last night handed a 47-34 defeat to West End Y.M.C.A., Toronto, on the latter's floor in an exhibition display. Top men on the Clinton Americans' winners were Boiter and Shuggar. Gentle scored 16 points for Y.M.C.A. Reid, Hayes Steel of Merriston, Ont., senior intermediate champions, defeated the "Y" Pirates 57-46 in an exhibition basketball engagement, with Mason accounting for 28 points.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, March 3 —(CP)— The world flyweight champion, finally won a fight but hard-bitten ring followers such as the sports-writing gentry took the view that Jolting' Jackie Paterson had slipped from the heights.

Jackie, recognized as world king by both Britain and the United States, was seeking to regain a little of the prestige lost in two unexpected and decisive defeats. He fought Peter Kane, no unknown, Bisker Jack Grimes who put him down from the packed house in a London ring, but not for the count, son got a close verdict after eight rounds.

The fight itself was a humdinger, a featured toe-to-toe exchanges and there wasn't a big difference in points despite Grimes taking six rounds to three. The Paterson fans also hit the canvas—four times—but Jackie, with a left swing missed their target.

Newspaper stories of the fight emphasized that this wasn't the Paterson of the devastating punch who rode to the top through quick knockouts. His timing was bad, he didn't have the same zip, said a rough stoker just wouldn't stay down. Indeed, the writers figured it was a sad commentary that a world champion couldn't defeat with an unknown who, at best, had but a mediocre success.

Paterson won the world title back in 1943 when he took just 61 seconds to flatten Peter Kane, a former to knock out Peter Kane, a former Blackpool miner who came to the fight position through a series of wins. Soon after success followed for Jackie, until he met Peter Kane, Memorial Negro member of the Canadian Army, in a non-title bout last October. Webb, another Canadian, gave Jackie the champ a pasting and forced him to retire after three rounds.

Several weeks later Paterson met Petty Officer Ben Duffy, another fleet-footed Kane, and the crowd saw Jackie knocked out for the first time in his blazing career. The end came in the seventh round. Paterson previously had beaten the sailor twice on points.

The non-title fight with Grimes was at the feather limit of 126 pounds but this was more of a heavyweight battle than a boxing session. Jackie weighed 122 but the sailor had to train hard to get down to weight.

Paterson has been fighting featherweights for years. He told the British and Empire feather crowns that he had to get his fighting kit in his collection. It's not really much of a weight handicap because Jackie has plenty of trouble even getting down to the flyweight limit of 112 pounds.

On the same night as toe Paterson-Grimes battle, Duffy drew with Syd Woodcock in a featherweight champion, in a 10-round affair at Birmingham. Grimes previously had beaten Woogan on points and, according to the confusion, Danny Woods, a six-foot shipworker and had been Woogan on points and, according to the confusion, Danny Woods, a six-foot shipworker and had been touted as a boxer, came to London a few weeks ago and beat Duffy.

A boxer who suffered a fractured jaw midway through an eight-round welterweight bout between Ron Jury and went on to win. He was Joe Grazalski of the Flying Fortress navy and he defeated the strong Jury before, crowning the fight and later hitting the floor three times for final round.

However, on the Jock Harty artificial ice it will be a better test as to just how rugged the Vics Hotelway's charges really are in the junior ranks . . . Horse Sense Bridge

By SAM GORDON
The Bridgemaster.

When you unscramble expert jumble, it does not take you long to fumble. You can take any long acrobatics as hiding simple mathematics.

Despite what bridge experts hide with flowery phrases, you can dig up this simple facts. Two and one still make three; five and two still makes seven; seven and three still make ten.

Among other things, an opening bid of one starts with a basis of five. Give or take, every responding basis is two tricks. Each raise is also one more trick in the raiser's hand.

Just because you make another bid does not mean that you show another trick. Only when your bid is a raise does it confess one more trick.

Here is a simple pair of partnership hands:

NORTH
♥7 5 3 2

SOUTH
♠K 3
♥K Q 8 6 3
♦Q J 8 5 4 2
♣A K 4 2

The bidding goes like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 D	1 S
2 D	2 S
3 S	4 S

South has seven tricks; five high cards, a short card in spades and in hearts. North has three tricks; five high cards and a short in clubs.

South's opening shows the basis of five tricks. His raise of two clubs over one spade shows another trick. His raise of three spades over two spades shows his seventh trick.

North's basis is two tricks. His one spade over one diamond is not a raise. His two spades over two clubs is not a raise. Up to there he has consumed no tricks beyond his basis of two.

But when north bids four spades over three spades, it is a raise. That is when he consumes another trick; his third and last trick.

Does your bridge act different lately?

American Universities Are Complex

Nothing so strikes the foreign observer with surprise as the size and power of American colleges administration, Jacques Barzun writes in The Atlantic.

The best offices in the best building; the vows and rows of filing cabinets, the serried ranks of secretaries and stenographers, make the head reel. Where can he have wandered by mistake into the armor of some business concern; these thick carpets, the brush and polish of these surroundings, cannot form part of an academy.

Dithered In Europe.

The foreign is used to a distinctive shabbiness, to hollowed steps and an inky smell, without which no school, college, or university seems genuine, be the place England, Germany, Italy or France.

On the contrary, at least, the whole of university administration is embodied in a superior janitor who gives out information, enters names, and in some cases collects fees against a receipt. Beyond sits a rector in a handsome room, but if I may use an Irish boil—he is never there. In short, he behaves like universities run themselves. Their constituents are tasks for few but necessary decisions. The state appoints five teachers and, jointly with tradition, regulates the programme; the students take care of such records as there are.

No Vast Offices.

There is no vast office full of clerks and machinery to register marks; hardly a single American university student has a small booklet in which every instructor enters the grade of the examination just passed. A single small transcript is filled — again, with the help of American institutions, dealing as they do with younger people and vices, have to be run by a separate body of diversely specialized managers known collectively as the administration. The director of admissions admits, the registrar registers, the bursar bursts, and a galaxy of deans, deanesses and a dean of men, a dean of women, a dean of graduate students and deans in droves. In a large university, there are as many deans and executive heads as there are schools and departments.

Intricate Relations.

Their relations to one another are intricate and periodic in fact, "galaxy" is too loose a term: it is a solar system. The head of all is the president of the university as a central sun. One can see eclipses, inner systems, and opposition. But usually more sympathy obtains among fellow administrators than between them and the teaching personnel.

If it came to a pitched battle, I feel sure that the more compact executive troops, animated by a single purpose, besides being better fed and disciplined, could rout the more numerous but disorderly rabble that teaches.

In Manhattan

By MICHAEL O'HARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, March 3 — (CP) — A censorship ban that is making theatrical history is under way along Broadway with the American Civil Liberties Union and at least 17 theatrical trade organizations lined up on one side and the New York Licence Commissioner Paul Moss standing in the shelter of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia on the other.

Mr. Moss brought down the thunder and lightning on his head when he banned the controversial play "Trio"—already the centre of considerable notoriety this season.

A request from the Author's League of America, first of many such organizations to protest the ban — that Mr. Moss be removed from office brought from Mr. LaGuardia the reply that he would take "full responsibility" for the Commissioner's action.

Mr. Moss, he added, "has committed no wrong."

The theatre groups then began laying plans for calling public meetings of protest and appealing to the city council for legislation halting alleged one-man censorship.

"Trio" career has been stormy.

The play — after Lee and J. J. Shubert had refused it a theatre — found a home at the Belasco where it ran 67 performances up to last Saturday night, but theatre changed hands and Mr. Moss told its new owners their license would not be renewed if "Trio" stayed. Producer Lee Shubert was forced to withdraw his production. Mr. Moss, in taking this action, termed "Trio" a "lewd, lascivious and immoral" play. Most critics in reviewing the production—including the writer—found little to justify this opinion of the play which deals with a Lesbian tragedy in a manner not calculated to offend most adults.

But it is not on the merits of "Trio" as a play that theatrical and liberal groups have entered the fight against Mr. Moss, rather only on the grounds that his action has exceeded his legal powers.

It is argued that the Commissioner cannot on his own authority ban any play. Any reasonably but must await conviction by a jury of the alleged work presenting such an immoral play.

At least 17 theatrical organizations — the Dramatists' Guild has the added interest of filing the action against Mr. Moss to "seek relief in the courts against this and similar actions by the censors of the American theatre by self-appointed, one-man czmars."

Spr. Bert Hyde, basketball team set a Garden record of 85 points against Temple last night, it was the Violets 102nd Garden game. If they'll thought of that, they probably would have made it 103 points.... Ancient Bill Tilden says he can't see why anyone objects to play an exhibition for charity.... Maybe it doesn't mean anything, but the "thoroughbred records" for Horse Thoroughbred Trade Journal arrived in a wrapper that looks suspiciously like butchers' paper.

Little Benny's Note Book

My sister Gladdis and Harvey came over to play bridge with pop and me after supper, and pop and Harvey started to talk about different subjects such as the war and how hard it is to get the kind of cigars you want, and me said, How William, you 2 aren't saying a thing you claim to be in the game of conversation, so you might as well get out on the bridge table and we'll have a nice early start.

Yee gods, what enemy of amiety ever invented bridge? pop said, and Harvey said, That's what I often ask, but I always blame it on fate for a satisfactory answer.

Such a thing to say about a wonderful game like bridge, me said. Everybody knows that bridge is one of the greatest social forces that exist in the world today, she said, and pop said, By golies there's something to that. Bridge brings people together who never would of looked at one another, he said. No question about it, it's a social game, Harvey said, and Gladdis said, Now Harvey, you're very well that bridge is one of the finest relaxations ever known.

That's right, Harvey said, business man has been found after a siege of bridge hanging by his nails in such an extreme relaxed condition that he never got started. Harvey said, and me said, It making bridge is such a game anyone claim that bridge is killing the art of conversation, because most of the people that you'd be at a parsnip! lose for words if they couldn't fall back on bridge.

I've noticed that, pop said. I've heard bridge partners sling words at each other that I didn't even suspect were in their vocabulary. It was a liberal education, really, he said, and me said, Now William, are you going to get out the card table, or are you going to struggle?

I'll struggle, he said firm.

Which she did.

"Going My Way," the motion picture in which Bing Crosby and Barry Fitzgerald star, was the choice of theatre operators and motion picture critics as the best shown in Canada during 1944. The theatre men, voting to determine the ten best films from a standpoint of public patronage, chose "Going My Way" and the critics, who are influenced by technical and artistic excellence, did the same.

While the choice of the public and the critics was the same in the matter of the best film, the same old difference of opinion asserted itself when it came to the rest. Eight pictures picked by the critics did not find places on the list of the those most patronized during the year.

The poll, conducted annually by the Canadian Film Weekly, a trade publication, showed that Bing Crosby was the leading box-office star at Canadian theatres, while critics named Barry Fitzgerald as having given the best acting performance. The latter appeared in a supporting role to Crosby in "Going My Way" and the choice of anyone but a star is unprecedented.

Following are the complete selections in each case:

Theatre Choice of Ten Best Boxoffice Films

(1) Going My Way, (2) Covert Girl, (3) House in Indiana, (4) Story of Dr. Wassel, (5) The Sullivans, (6) As Thousands Cheer, (7) White Cliffs of Dover, (8) Two Girls and a Sailor, (9-Tie) A Guy Named Joe, Bathing Beauty and Buffalo Bill.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER 8

She had not attempted to make an answer. She stood there quite still, for a long time. Figures dimly seemed the stairway behind her, paying no attention to her. Then secretary in the maid having been helped Lights began to go out; a door somewhere struck twice. Still Cherry stood at the top, with one hand of stone, with one hand on the banister and the great palms of the standing draught; a great shudder across her. And it seemed to her as if her heart and mind had stopped still too, and as if they would never move again.

For the first time in her life, Cherry spent an entirely wakeful night. Her wearied mind thrashed over and over and over again the episode of the ill-starred party; her weary body twisted and struggled in a physical misery that matched the torture of her soul.

From no aspect was the situation bearable. She was not only a shirking—an upper servant really—in a dull, wealth-choked and convention-choked and suffocating old mansion, subject to the tiresome demands of a querulous child, spoiled old lady, but she was helpless against this near, indifferent contempt of stupid little mountains like Amy Marshbanks, and a social crowning touch she had blundered out like unsayable, and treasonable thing to Kelly Coates. Intruded upon his personal affairs with all the strumpety of her race, nee, her youth, her complete inexperience in such matters.

She could not bear it, and she had to bear it. Oh, what must he think of her!

The hours went by; chill daylight came into the room. She got up, jaded and weary, bathed and brushed her black hair and somehow was at breakfast with Emma in a tumult at eight o'clock. Emma gave her a quick look as if she thought that even last night's activities should not have left such traces, but she said nothing; both women rustled the morning papers and drank their coffee almost in silence.

The customary miracle of service was going on in the house, as unquestioned when Cherry walked through the downstairs rooms at noon after a full, fire-warmed morning in Mrs. Porter's apartment, the ordinary procedure of letters, communications and telephone calls. The great house had reassumed its aspect of luxurious nonchalance.

Cherry felt stifled. She told Emma she did not want any lunch; she took a long walk instead, for Mrs. Porter, all Cherry's restoration and amazing vitality at breakfast, had admitted by mid-morning that she felt sleepy—and no wonder! And, in Cherry, do the machinery of the day had stopped, though that was five mins late in the afternoon.

She walked toward the Presidio and down its barrow eucalyptus-shaded paths to the cliffs, and so along to the bay shore. Bright across the bay, under the arch of the long red bridge, was Sausalito, and somewhere there was Kelly's studio, "Tuposte."

Cherry sat down on a wall and stared wistfully at the hills in front her thoughts could cross the miles, and somehow find him and show how let him know how eager she was to make her apologies, "Forgive me" could easily be reached on a long afternoon's walk. It would be but a short half-dozen miles in all, her fancy began to play.

Some day—her next all-fire day she would start early and walk straight across the bridge, and when she reached the great Famous Marshbanks County side, she would ask some one where Spanish Farm Road was, and follow it to some gate or fence that said, "Tuposte." Her heart beat fast and hard at the thought. They would talk, he and she, and the memory of what had gone on before would be wiped away for both of them, and afterward they would be friends—Cherry the most ardently, the least exacting, the proudest and most loyal friend he had ever had.

She fed upon this hope all day; it was with her when she went to sleep at night, at the end of the day began to wheel by she worked hard enough every free hour she could find, studying, sketching, thinking

Sometimes almost hungry in her determination to fit herself for that meeting, to be worthy of that friendship when it should come, and with every hour of humiliation and determination she coldly compelled herself growing stronger and more sober.

Emma, quiet and stern-faced and impressionable, had to concede herself sufficiently like Dan Cupid's friend to succumb to a heavy chest cold when changeable March weather was vexing the city, and for a few days the household was seriously alarmed about the effect old employer was ill too, and a nurse who had often cared for Mrs. Porter was installed in the rooms next Cherry's. There was a mystery made as well to relieve the first. Emma, however refused any such help and battled her way sternly through the days on her own terms. To Cherry fell much of her domestic responsibility, and except for those days when Emma kept to her uncomfortable to talk, she constantly found a reason constantly, made lists and wrote notes and took care of Emma.

For the little time that Mrs. Porter needed diversion, her nurses read to her or chatted with her and Cherry formed the habit of spending the early evening hours with Emma, as Emma grew convalescent. Although the older woman never acknowledged in words that she liked her companion or missed her or waited for her, Cherry grew to enjoy these evenings and suspected that Emma did, too.

Emma was about fifty, but she might have been any age between forty-five and seventy. Her face was thin, narrow and marked by sternness and reserve. Her graying hair was worn coronet fashion in tight braids in which never a hair was awry. She carried her narrow shoulders high, was almost painfully neat and fresh in appearance and in her speech betrayed the trained nurse's attitude.

This strange, self-sufficient woman, Cherry used to think, as Emma sat with a soap wrapper, set back panting against her pillows, and attacked the day's bills, menus, and Cherry brought up a lamp that illumined the ceiling and sent a soft light down for the invalid's table, put a chinese plate of brown tea in the sunshiny south window when Emma could employ times of languor in watching their hourly change.

And finally, shyly, she brought out a tiny kitten, a bundle of wet, wailing fur that she had found by the Presidio wall.

Emma laughed a short, scornful laugh at this last contribution. She never could stand cats, she said. But Cherry, noting the confidence with which the small stray, newly warmed and fed, was advancing toward Emma's languid hand, promised with a confidence that she would remove the little creature the minute he became troublesome.

From that moment the cat was visibly the absorbing consideration of Emma's life, valiantly as she pretended to hide her complete captivation from Cherry. Cappy stayed wherever he pleased in the daytime, and curled warmly against Emma's shoulder at night. In the evenings when she set up the card table and Emma watched her play solitaire, Cappy walked across the cards between intervals of biting thoughtfully at Emma's hand.

"Did you first go to the Marshbanks as a nurse, Emma?" Cherry asked idly one night. Emma looked at her quickly, hesitated before speaking. "Yes," she answered then. "I'd taken the boys, Fred and Judson, through tonsil operations, and then, through scarlet fever, at the hospital. Then I was in training. The old lady took a liking to me, and when they'd come back from abroad a few years later and I'd left the old madame—as we used to call Mrs. Marshbanks, though I don't suppose she was more than fifty—I was asked to me to take care of the colonel. Her health broke down with sleeping sickness; he was on a couch for two years before Linda—she was the only daughter and had married and an engineer from Springfield—was born. We have a baby. The old lady was so pleased about the baby both ladies so much about the grand child. And then to have both die—that was a bad time. What with one thing and another, the old lady all but collapsed herself, and we had her in a nervous breakdown for a couple of years.

"I stayed on as a nurse and housekeeper; I had my sister's support, and it was a comfortable place. I wasn't treated like a servant and came to them."

"Was she a friend of theirs? No, she wasn't." Cherry thought herself, for her. For I remember the judge saying he would never open her. How'd you know my mother, Emma? You never told her at the Marshbanks'?"

Emma looked thoughtfully at her companion.

"No, I never her before that; she finally said. And then, for some other cause: "Your mother was my sister Cherry."

Cherry stared at her. The words did not seem to make sense.

"My mother—" she began in a whisper, and stopped.

"Yes. Your mother was my sister. You were named for her."

"But Emma," Cherry said breathlessly, confusedly conscious of shock and reluctance, "you never told me!"

"Well, you don't always tell children everything," Emma said after a moment. "I thought it best. But little thing when your mother died."

"I could have known that!" Cherry exclaimed. A thousand slights and hurts vanished with the revelation, and she felt hurt and resentment still had first place.

"I never told you because I didn't think you'd be especially pleased," Emma said dryly. The subject was closed.

"Is not that! Of course I'm—I'm glad!" Cherry stammered. Emma have had any family, and—and of course I'm glad!"

And, immediately to her own amazement, she burst into tears. She had often imagined what her connections might be; she had even dreamed this Emma as contained and cold and distant—her own aunt! Cherry pushed the table away hastily and went to the window, and stood looking out at the dark night, and the far city lights that shot arrows and flashes through her tears.

"I'm sorry. I was thinking of mother," she presently said. Emma made no comment, and Cherry came back to her seat. She had cried her eyes; but the hands that touched the cards trembled; her voice was thick, and she could not see clearly.

"Mother—mother never told me!" she stammered with a watery laugh.

Emma had not spoken for some three or four minutes; now she said, in a tone not quite as harsh as usual, "sometimes were. "I didn't know how much you remembered your mother, Cherry."

"I—I—what I remember getting up on the bed with her after she had been ill at night and her telling me a story."

"I guess you remember Pippy," Emma suggested. Cherry with her own particular effect, of grimness and brevity. But Cherry suspected she was trying to lighten the situation.

"My old doll that the dog tore to bits!"

Emma added nothing more, and Cherry looked down at her cards with blinded eyes and made herself move them here and there as if she were playing. Then she finished her game, and said with a shaking voice that she would go to bed. Emma still making no comment, Cherry put away the table and asked Emma if there was anything more she could do.

"No," Emma said, "nothing."

The girl came to her bedside, looked down.

"Good night, then," she added in a light, level tone, with a muscle twitching. "Would you mind if you liked—shall I call you Aunt Emma? she added hesitatingly.

Emma looked at her gravely for a few long seconds.

"I don't know that I'd make any change," she said then, in the same thunderous voice that Cherry had used.

"Need more sorry."

"No; I'm going to listen to the radio and then I'm going to sleep," said Cherry and, with a parting second attempt at a smile,

She walked to her own room, slipped into bed and lay with narrowed eyes and a biting lower lip, pondering. Thought, long denied, came with a rush and she was drowned with the bitterness of it. Other girls had mothers and fathers and homes. Other girls left school to step into ladyhood with clothes and money and allowances and a thousand other desirable and delightful things to bring them to life. And she had—she had only the dim background of Saint Dorothea's and the humiliating revelation tonight!

Over these things to creep down Cherry's cheeks; presently she began to sob heartily. She cried herself to sleep.

One morning Cherry found herself free at last, and determined to take one of the long walks she loved, to have a sandwich and a cup of coffee at some corner stall out in the Mission direction and not to be back in the house until it was time to preside at the five o'clock tea table. The old friends were lunching with the now completely convalescent Mrs. Porter, and Emma was quite herself again.

Cherry saw some blocks away from home when a low-slung, open disreputable car drew near to her on the curb and a voice said, "Cherry!"

The world wheeled about her for a few seconds, for it was Kelly Coates who had spoken; he was driving the car and beside him sat Fran Marshbanks smothered in soft fox skins, with a daring red hat pressed over dark hair. Cherry laughed from sheer excitement as she greeted them and stood hesitating, wondering if they really wanted her, and if they did why they possibly could.

"I want Mrs. Marshbanks to come and have lunch with me," the man explained in honeyed tones with his voice, flashing smile, "and she won't come unless you do."

"Are you free from those old ogres for a while?" Fran asked in her careless, fascinating, hoarse voice.

"I'm free until half past four," Cherry did not want to go and yet was wild with excitement to go. She thought that he was in love with Fran made her feel like Kelly's company exquisitely painful to her, but she had conquered to see these persons again, to be one of them, to know what was going on, and this opportunity would not come twice.

"I'd love to," she said, smiling, as she climbed in and wedged herself snugly beside Fran. The moment she did it she regretted it, wondering through what fatality of complacence she had accepted the invitation to play a part in their affair. But why had they asked her?

"Mrs. Marshbanks," Kelly said, "once your to a movie to which a girl visited an artist in his studio, and everything went wrong—for fifty years afterward. Was that it Fran?"

"Something like that," said Fran's exquisite voice lazily. "Oh, she didn't want to come home and lunch with me." Kelly explained.

"Perhaps I know my own weakness." Fran contributed idly.

Far-Reaching Victory Piling Up Against Germany on West Front

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(A. P. War Analyst)

While we still look details as to how Gen. Eisenhower is proceeding in his ambition to finish the job of Germany west of the Rhine, we are in the comfortable position of knowing that, quite apart from this main objective, he is living up a great and far-reaching victory.

You'll remember that when the supreme commander bluntly announced his purpose at the beginning of this offensive (which Field Marshal Montgomery calls the "last round"), he added a little rider. This was to the effect that if necessary he would follow Field Marshal Von Rundstedt across the river into the heart of the Reich. General Eisenhower didn't enlarge on this, and its significance was rather lightly by the sensational thought of knocking the Hitlerites out this side of the Rhine and so destroying their whole western defence.

Tremendous Feat of Allies.

Still, clearing the strategic approach to the Rhine, so that our forces can line up against it, is in itself a tremendous feat and must represent a grand success. This will mean that the western Allies are all set for the final lunge across the Rhine into the vitals of Germany. They will join hands with the Russian armies advancing from the east. Should things work out in this way—that is, if Rundstedt should succeed in keeping the bulk of his forces to the eastern bank of the Rhine for a time—one would expect Gen. Eisenhower to pause on the west bank and get set for the final lunge across the river when the good weather arrives a month or so hence. This operation would be co-ordinated with the Red drive, Many Prisoners Taken.

It's reported that the western Allies have captured more than 30,000 prisoners since the offensive started. Also, that the German losses in killed and wounded, Allies, the big Canadian force driving down against the German flank from the north, and the American 5th army, operating on the right ward to the Rhine, have formed a pocket which may contain a fine bunch of prisoners.

The fighting has been, and still is, heaviest on this northern end of

Third Shipment Of 5,000 Fags Reaches Corvette

Whenever the monthly shipment of 5,000 cigarettes are equally divided among the officers and men aboard the Corvette "Belleville" such comparisons as "Belleville sure knows how to look after us", "Good old Army and Navy," and "Belleville never forgets our crew" can always be heard among the crew, according to a letter received by Warrant Officer James Lassaby of the Army and Navy Veterans' "fag fund" received from Lt./Lieut. G. J. Garner, the ten officer aboard the Corvette "Belleville" this week.

"Today we received our third shipment of 5000 cigarettes as a gift from Unit 301 of the Belleville Army and Navy Veterans and although in a non-smoking mood I cannot to your organization the sincere appreciation of the lot of the crew. As canteen officer I realize how difficult it is to procure cigarettes. Your thoughtfulness and generosity are deeply appreciated," added Lt./Lieut. Garner.

Aside from the H.M.C.S. "Belleville", President Lassaby was also the recipient of scores of similar cards and letters from Belleville and District lads now serving in the various fighting zones around the world. In every case the replies carried a note of thankfulness and hope of the continuance of shipping Canadian cigarettes to our fighting forces.

The list of 180 local lads sent individual shipments of 25 cigarettes each by the Army and Navy Veterans' fag fund this week includes:

Capital Closeups

By JACK BEATLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 2 —(CP)— You can take it from State Secretary McLarty — retiring at the end of the present parliament — that no political berth is a cinch and no wartime cabinet post a sinecure.

Tray lunching served at the desk, late evening conferences and general interruption of social activities are accepted inconveniences in the life of Canada's government leaders.

The 56-year-old Minister, considered one of the cabinet's most entertaining orators, has held three posts — more distinctive a departmental record than any other member of the present cabinet.

Elected in 1940 to represent Windsor, Ont., mild, good-humored Mr. McLarty held the widely-diversified portfolio of Post Office, Labor and State.

Hon. C. D. Howe was Transport Minister before his present portfolio of Munitions started to merge into Reconstruction and Hon. Ian Mackenzie was Defence Minister before his Pensions and Health Department was split and he became Veterans Minister. The merging of departments, however, robs the two incidents of Mr. McLarty's distinction.

Mr. McLarty won't commit himself on which has been his toughest job. All government departments have their critical periods which entail long hours at the desk, exhaustive labor and great decisions.

More Capers: Another story of Canada's farming corvettes going the rounds in naval circles here concerns the search for the German battleship Bismarck in the North Atlantic.

A tiny corvette, detached from her convoy, intercepted the crackling or signals as the German raider exchanged signals with her escorts and the British navy spoke to each other and their air arm. The signals indicated the corvette was in the path of the mastadon.

Receiving no orders to the contrary the youngsters in command cleared the decks and prepared for action. Two hours later and with the Germans nearing the vicinity, a British man-o'-war steamed over the horizon and signalled: "You may return to your convoy. We'll look after the Bismarck."

REFERENDUM REPENTANT

Toronto, March 2. (CP)—Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal House leader, said yesterday in an address he "probably made a mistake in attacking Prime Minister Mackenzie King in a personal way".

One outspoken critic of Mr. King, he said only in the Liberal Party and in the application of Liberal, rather than reactionary, principles was there any hope for unity in Canada.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They toss and toss—try to make and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be faulty kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and may cause backache, pains, headaches other ailments. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy.

Russians Begin Shelling Suburbs of Stettin

Berlin Reports Fall of Stargard Near Baltic Port

Red Army Slashes Through To Baltic in Pomerania

By RICHARD KASISCHKE
(AP Staff Writer)

London, March 5 — (AP)—Marshal Georgy Zhukov's big guns have begun shelling the suburbs of Stettin, which lies east of the Oder, Moscow dispatches said today, and the Berlin High Command reported the fall of Stargard, a fortress 18 miles east of the big Baltic port.

After plunging triple spearheads to the Baltic the Russians were reported launching two powerful new attacks — one to the north between Stargard and the Oder toward Stettin; and the other to the west, from their Baltic toeholds, toward Stettin Bay.

Advanced units already were in sight of Stettin, Berlin said.

Two Russian spearheads on the Baltic near Kolberg and at Koslin have been isolated by a third farther east between Koslin and Schlawe, the Germans reported.

Stargard, one of the most important cities of Pomerania, was taken after a brief street fight, Berlin reported, by Marshal Zhukov's 1st White Russian Army.

Chief Obstacle Knocked Out

Capture of the city of 36,000 knocked down one of the chief obstacles in the Russian advance upon Stettin, under threat from Russian forces that had reached and to within 16 miles on the south and were now in position to push past the city from the northeast.

Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky's 2nd White Russian Army, overcoming 600 localities in a four-day 60-mile advance which left piles of Volkssturm dead in its wake, reached the Baltic at Koslin while Marshal Georgy Zhukov's 1st White Russian Army pushed to the Baltic in the area of Gotzow, 35 miles west of Koslin.

The cutting of the land communications of perhaps 200,000 German troops in Eastern Pomerania, Danzig and the Polish Corridor was one of the biggest encirclement operations of the eastern front, Moscow announced by Monitor last night.

Gain 32 Miles in Four Days

"The Baltic beachhead which gained 32 miles in four days in radio silence struck out boldly to the west today after setting up a strong foothold on the Baltic," AP correspondent Eddy Gilmore reported today.

"The force, made up of the two hitting units of tanks led by big infantry forces, large numbers of motorized infantry and supported by an umbrella of Stormovik and medium bombers, split out along split ways, highways and secondary roads and is striking behind German groups east of the Oder Half or Stettin Bay.

Soviet front line dispatches, he added, already had reported some units within 16 miles of Stettin.

Fate of Danzig Sealed

The fate of Danzig, too, appeared to have been sealed by the dash to the Baltic, although a street fight might be necessary before the ancient Hanseatic City is occupied by the Russians.

With Russian air bases along the Baltic, Danzig's sea communications were likely to be subject to a powerful fire.

West of Danzig, the Germans said, the Russians opened a fresh drive on Gotenhafen today with the greatest deployment of material." The attack was west of the Lower Vistula in the old Polish Corridor where the Russian communique said it threw 30 miles of Danzig were captured.

The Germans reported several more towns had been taken today.

General Roatta, Fascist, Escapes

Rome, March 5 (AP) — Gen. Mario Roatta, former head of the Fascist secret service and army chief of staff, escaped last night from a hospital where he had been held pending his trial on war crime charges.

The escape took place shortly after a visit with his wife, whom authorities seized for questioning. They also arrested an Italian medical officer.

The ministry of interior offered a $5,000 reward.

The presiding judge ordered the trial to continue as though Roatta were present.

It was learned that all the lights of the hospital, where Roatta was confined because of a heart condition, went out for about an hour last night. The escape was discovered an hour later during a routine inspection tour.

CANADIANS IN R.A.F. IN RAID ON KAMEN

London, March 5 — (CP Cable) — Scores of Canadians were in R.A.F. Halifax bombers which pounded the synthetic oil refinery at Kamen, from Dortmund, Saturday night, Allied Air Force said today. Bad weather in Group did not operate during the weekend.

"There was a terrific red explosion which colored all the clouds with an orange glow over the target," said FO. M. E. Sloan, a bomb-aimer from Toronto.

Flt. Lt. Ken Inglis, a pilot from Green Island, Ont., said he spoke of the cloud which obscured the ground detail as "like a sea a good attack—well-concentrated."

Production of Bomber Plane, Tank Parts Resumed as Strikers Return

Detroit, March 5 — (AP)—Production of bomber plane and tank parts was resumed by the Chrysler Corporation plants today as an 8-day strike of 7,000 Dodge employees Dodge main plant ended. The union decision on an end to the so-called approximately 30,000 workers back to their jobs.

Direct appeals from the War Labor Board and Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson influenced the action of Local 3, United Auto Workers (CIO), in calling off the strike at the Dodge plant. Union and company spokesmen agreed the action would result in resumption of full production at all six plants of Chrysler "within a few hours."

A second major Detroit labor dispute — involving 11,150 workers at the Detroit and Evansville, Ind., plants of the Briggs Manufacturing Company — continued, but Union officials forecast an early end to the trouble. Union spokesmen said the strike-bound local 212, U. A. W.-C. I. O., spat of the dispute, had empowered its executive committee to meet with the management today.

The Briggs strike began Tuesday following company discharge of 140 Union members for allegedly "inciting" a walkout of all Dodge workers. Union officials said the company "fired" the union employees for "inciting" during a previous walkout.

Strikers at both concerns received a blunt warning from Mr. Patterson that unless the Detroit area labor strife continues, the paralysis that would result from the "threat" of a general strike will make its effects felt on the very field of battle . . . the finest tanks in the world will be unable delivered to a dead soldier the day after a battle."

Mr. Patterson's plea came less than 24 hours after W.L.B. Chairman William H. Davis had charged and company officials to end the Chrysler dispute immediately.

RAIL NETWORKS, OIL REFINERIES HEAVILY POUNDED

Over 1,000 Planes Fan Out Over Germany Seeking Trains And Road Convoys

London, March 5 (CP) — Four hundred United States heavy bombers from British airfields smashed the railway network at Chemnitz and oil refineries at Bohlen and Magdeburg in the 31st straight day of stiffening Allied offensive.

The United States 8th. Air Force bombers were escorted by 600 fighters, which fanned out seeking railroad trains and road convoys.

Simultaneously, the Royal Tactical Air Force attacked the two great road and rail bridges over the Rhine at Wesel, principal escape route for Germans west of the river. Results were unobserved due to clouds.

While an R.A.F. Mosquito hit Berlin last night another group attacked the communications railroad in the northern end of the Ruhr.

The Air Ministry said no planes were lost in either operation.

The heaviest attack air offensive was kept in high gear Sunday despite bad weather that brought snow and rain to a large part of Europe.

Concentrate on Rail Yards.

Approximately 1,600 British and American heavy bombers concentrated on railroad yards at Ulm, 50 miles southeast of Stuttgart, and Wanne-Eickel, one of the great Ruhr industrial centres.

Italy-based American bombers struck the rail networks in Austria and Hungary, the Air Ministry said.

The German rocket-launching zone along The Netherlands coast was bombed and strafed in a shuttle attack.

More than 1,000 units of rolling stock were destroyed or damaged last and at least 35 locomotives were destroyed by attacks by more than 500 U.S. 8th. Air Force heavy bombers and hundreds of fighters yesterday. Mediterranean Allied Air Force headquarters said the day's operations were coordinated with Red Army operations on the Hungarian front.

More than 2,500 Italy-based planes took part in the forays.

Thirteen Allied aircraft, including five heavy bombers, were missing.

VANDENBERG ACCEPTS INVITATION AS DELEGATE

Washington, March 5 — (AP) — Senator Arthur Vandenberg announced today he has accepted President Roosevelt's invitation to be a delegate to the United Nations Security Conference in San Francisco.

The Michigan Republican said he had made his decision after "an exchange of views with the President and personal letters with the President" and clarified "my right of free action."

As a delegate, Senator Vandenberg will be free to speak and vote within my power to establish a practical collective system of security as a basis for effective peace."

Nearly Eighty Persons Injured When C.P. Train Derailed Near Zorra

Zorra, Ont., March 5. (CP) — Nearly eighty persons were injured, three or four seriously, when nine cars of a Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train bound from Montreal to Chicago, were derailed early today at this Oxford County Station. The accident was attributed to a broken rail.

The train carried about 250 persons, many of them bound for London, Ont., and most of these, some 190 escaped with a shaking up.

Two sleeping cars rolled down a 15-foot embankment, falling on their sides in a gully, twisted sideways lay with ends in a field. The remaining cars remained up, right, the heavy steel rails shook them torn up and twisted.

Rescue workers worked for two hours to save the lives of those in the wreckage. Some were carried through broken windows to homes, service and civilian ambulances. Others had walked from as far away as London to carry the injured to hospital. Injured persons were taken to hospitals at Woodstock, Ingersoll, Tillsonburg and St. Thomas while farmers' homes, the fire area and the station at Zorra were turned into emergency dressing stations.

Rail Snags.

A rail which snapped under the train wheels was blamed for the wreck, the second in the same spot within the past 25 years, a C.P.R. spokesman, Divisional Superintendent of the C.P.R. at Toronto.

He said a "traverse flaw" (a flaw in the rail) which could not be detected beforehand caused the break after the two locomotives and a baggage car had passed.

A statement issued by Toronto by F. D. Cottrell, vice-president and general-manager of the C.P.R. said: "Every effort is being made by the derailment to a broken rail caused by a traverse fissure. He said it is expected the line will be clear of debris for traffic by 7.30 p.m. today. Ten cars, mainline, he said, trains are being detoured over the Canadian National Railways between Toronto and London.

Car Operations.

A rail test car was operated over the Zorra area last Oct. 26, he added.

With the derailment crashes in the train were blocked out, eye-witnesses arriving in London said. Passengers were calm as the cars lurched wildly as servicemen passengers urged fellow travellers, to keep calm.

An eyewitness recalled an airman shouted: "In the darkness to keep cool everybody, take your time."

Eye-witness, who made up the greatest part of the passengers, helped to organize first aid, Lieut. (Nursing Sister) M. J. Eley of Dresden, Ont., and stationed at London, was among the passengers who escaped with slight shock and treatment. She was uninjured.

16 Army Personnel Aboard.

Sixteen Army personnel, including the baggage car, with some of its crew, left the rail, continued a considerable distance along the track after the derailment, eyewitnesses said.

Fifteen Army personnel, including the baggage car, with some of its crew, left the rail, continued a considerable distance along the track after the derailment, eyewitnesses said.

Fifteen Army personnel, including Women's Army Corps, were in London Military Hospital and Westminster Hospital suffering slight injuries as a result of the wreck. Hospital authorities said the patients escaped with lacerations and sprains, some with minor head injuries.

The Toronto statement, Mr. Cotterell said of the injured passengers: "Apparently only three, or four "can be classified as seriously injured."

SEES NO GENERAL UNEMPLOYMENT AFTER HUN DEFEAT

35-P.C. Cut Back in War Orders After Nazi Collapse Says Howe

Ottawa, March 5 (CP)—Reconstruction Minister Howe announced today a cut back of 35 per cent in war orders is anticipated in the interval between the collapse of Germany and the defeat of the war against Japan. The announcement was made at a press conference held in the parliamentary press gallery.

"During this stage we anticipate no problem of unemployment, said Mr. Howe.

"Stage two will really be a period of re-adjustment between the demands of war and the demands of peacetime industry."

The reconstruction department does not anticipate any general unemployment problems, he said, but every-wide scale immediately following the defeat of Germany, Munitions Minister Howe said today in a review of his department's plans.

Fire-Fed Furnaces Aid Steel Output

Mr. Howe outlined a five-point program to meet problems that period which are expected to be largely local resulting from war plant cancellations in communities where there is an abnormal wartime population and heavy concentration of war orders.

Outstanding steps to be taken to meet these conditions will be:

1. Identification of areas where war employment will cease.

2. Dissemination of all available information on the general situation in the community, including likely transfer of labor and plans for other industrial activity.

3. A general survey of industrial activity including steps necessary to speed up conversion and stimulate general expansion.

4. Determination of the extent or extra activity required to maintain public works programs.

5. Carrying out programs in cooperation with various government departments.

Local Conditions.

Steps taken to meet these immediate local conditions would substantially become part of the long-range program for conversion from war to peacetime economy.

In this program manufacturers would have to take the initiative but the reconstruction department would have the responsibility of facilitating the change-over.

LIMITED GAINS IN NORTHERN IWO MADE BY MARINES

Japanese Dead Number 12,584 of Garrison of About 20,000

Guam, March 5 —(AP)— United States marines made limited gains in northern Iwo Jima Sunday and hurled back a counter-attack in which hundreds of screaming Japanese were killed, Admiral Nimitz announced today.

Enemy dead numbered 12,584 as of 6 p.m. Saturday, of an estimated garrison of 20,000 men, he said. Prisoners, the majority Korean laborers, numbered 212.

In bloody, hand-to-hand fighting the Leather-Neck marine division continued their tortuous advance against defenses which Nimitz described as "naturally and artificially formidable."

Like blind marines, however, could see for what they were fighting and why they were dying. Iwo is but a 3.2 mile, returning from a Tokyo raid, B-29 Superfort, southern bomber field. Repairs were made in the fuel line and the plane continued back to its base on Saipan.

Value of Iwo Airfields to Americans.

Iwo's value to the Americans and the Japanese empire flows from the Marianas have resulted in fewer crash landings on the last lap of the 1,500-mile homeward flight. Now cripples can stop at Iwo. The Iwo airfields will mean substantially increased bombing power for the Pacific.

Compressed into an ever-tighten-ing area on Iwo's northern end, the Japanese garrison are fighting with untamed fury, Nimitz said, but that the lines of battle were "subwardly unchanged," and enemy resistance was "stiffening in all sectors." Nimitz reported no change in its intensity.

Against the concentrated hail of artillery ship shelling, combined with a storm of strafing and artillery fire, the enemy was forced to withdraw to his heavy shells into the southern area airfield today as evacuation planes landed and took off with improved frequency.

Carrier aircraft joined with heavy bombers to attack Chichi Jima in the Bonins Saturday, while marine aircraft hit enemy-held islands in the Volcanoes, Bonins and Western Carolines and Hap. Navy search planes flew out to raid enemy bases in the Marshalls.

CANADIANS BREAK HOCHWALD HINGE ON NORTH SECTOR

Germans Desperately Fight Behind Hinge For Week To Cover Their Withdrawal

With the 1st Canadian Army in Germany, March 5 —(CP Cable)— The Hochwald hinge which the Germans defended desperately for a week to cover their withdrawal from the Rhineland, was breached by the 1st Canadian Army.

With the Hochwald hinge gone, German resistance in the forest belt of Cleve, long the most ravaged city of the Rhineland, is expected to organize firm aid. Lieut. (Nursing Sister) M. J. Eley of Dresden, Ont., and stationed at London, was among the passengers who escaped with slight shock and treatment. She was uninjured.

Powerful Attack Is Launched On Fourth Largest City

House-to-House Fighting As City Lies Under Smoke Pall

By JAMES M. LONG
(AP Staff Writer)

Paris, March 5 — (AP) — American tanks and infantry stormed into Cologne at 7:10 a.m. today in a final powerful attack on the great Rhineland metropolis and slowly fought toward the heart of Germany's fourth largest city.

The final assault started in the cold darkness of 4 a.m.

The 3rd Armored Division passed the city limits, striking from the north through the suburb of Bocklemund. There the tanks were about three miles from the towering gothic cathedral at the heart of Cologne, long the most ravaged city of the Rhineland.

House-to-house fighting was reported off quickly. Gen. Whitehead, Associated Press war correspondent with the United States 1st Army, reported.

Fight Fall of Smoke.

Cologne lay under a pall of smoke. The thunder of battle was rolling across the city in its greatest ring fury as the Americans closed in on the 11th day of their great drive from the Roer river, 21 miles behind.

Some 46 miles to the north the 1st Canadian Army had virtually written off the Germans trapped in the bloody Hochwald, but enemy still in the fire belt of the Rhineland still continued a well-organized resistance behind the weakening hinge to Allied air support for Gen. Eisenhower's armies.

The United States 9th Army captured Homberg a manufacturing city on the left bank of the Rhine, the approaches to two Rhine bridges, Gen. Simpson announced this morning. Almost on the Rhine for its entire length from Duisburg to the north held another 30-mile stretch of the meandering west bank.

Total Passes 60,000.

Germans surrendered by the thousands; the total in the offensive passed 60,000. 3rd Army elements toward Coblenz and the middle Rhine suggest an imminent break-through there, Paris said. Tuesday the Army fought in the Siegfried Line but outside the old capital of Staatsbucken, which was heavy artillery fire.

Artillery also was pouring heavy fire in support of the Canadians who can guns wheel to wheel with Cologne, ringing on all its sides west of the Rhine.

Cologne, a city of 768,000, is surrounded by the most powerful defenses in Germany. Only Berlin (4,332,000), Hamburg (1,918,000) and Munich (838,352), Captures 46 Villages.

Earlier United States 1st Army troops had captured 46 villages and close to Cologne's suburbs and cut the Autobahn (superhighway) road to the Rhine. From the ravaged city, Rhinehaven bridge and the Remagen bridge and the Rhine from the ravaged city.

Cologne's railroad yards, hours behind the action, and the Rhine-land metropolis was encircled on the west, Paris said in its account said "Cologne is ours when we want it."

Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, said that the 1st Canadian Army had broken through German defenses in the area and German resistance in the Pervez area "could not be extended." Since this morning," Feb. 8, the Canadians have taken 17,000 prisoners, he wrote. Three Forces Smash

A great artillery duel raged across the Rhine and the Germans broadcast unsubstantiated reports that the Americans already had won their first crossing. An Allied Supreme headquarters, this was reported unofficially but a sign of

Rome, March 5 — (AP)—Italian Infantry units of the British 8th Army, supported by British artillery and tanks, have further cleared the forests south of the Po Di Primaro River, seizing 200 prisoners, it was announced today.

In another United States units of the Allied 5th Army captured another dominating hill position, Monte Della Croce — and further improved their position west of the Bologna-Pistoia highway with the capture of several small villages.

The Americans, advancing on the mountain ridges adjacent to and astride the highway, have taken 60 days ago. There were several sharp clashes in that mountainous area.

The battling along the Po Di Primaro River, which is an extension of the Reno River to the Adriatic, was headed by a battalion of heroic exploits by Italian "Cremona" troops, the Italian Command announced.

In one instance, an Italian officer armed only with two grenades crossed to the north bank of the stream, made his way through a minefield and captured 23 Germans. He also rescued an Italian officer who lay wounded in the minefield.

Three German civilians, dressed as enemy railroad workers and an armed train near the French-Italian border, were discovered by Italian Ladies' Auxiliary Canadian Legion, Everybody welcome.

Fight Fall of Smoke.

Cologne lay under a pall of smoke. The thunder of battle was rolling across the city in its greatest ring fury as the Americans closed in on the 11th day of their great drive from the Roer river, 21 miles behind.

Some 46 miles to the north the 1st Canadian Army had virtually written off the Germans trapped in the bloody Hochwald, but enemy still in the fire belt of the Rhineland still continued a well-organized resistance behind the weakening hinge to Allied air support for Gen. Eisenhower's armies.

The United States 9th Army captured Homberg a manufacturing city on the left bank of the Rhine, the approaches to two Rhine bridges, Gen. Simpson announced this morning. Almost on the Rhine for its entire length from Duisburg to the north held another 30-mile stretch of the meandering west bank.

Germans surrendered by the thousands; the total in the offensive passed 60,000. 3rd Army elements toward Coblenz and the middle Rhine suggest an imminent break-through there, Paris said in its account said "Cologne is ours when we want it."

Tuesday the Army fought in the Siegfried Line but outside the old capital of Staatsbucken, which was heavy artillery fire.

Artillery also was pouring heavy fire in support of the Canadians who can guns wheel to wheel with Cologne, ringing on all its sides west of the Rhine.

Cologne, a city of 768,000, is surrounded by the most powerful defenses in Germany. Only Berlin (4,332,000), Hamburg (1,918,000) and Munich (838,352), Captures 46 Villages.

Earlier United States 1st Army troops had captured 46 villages and close to Cologne's suburbs and cut the Autobahn (superhighway) road to the Rhine. From the ravaged city, Rhinehaven bridge and the Remagen bridge and the Rhine from the ravaged city.

Cologne's railroad yards, hours behind the action, and the Rhine-land metropolis was encircled on the west, Paris said in its account said "Cologne is ours when we want it."

Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, said that the 1st Canadian Army had broken through German defenses in the area and German resistance in the Pervez area "could not be extended." Since this morning," Feb. 8, the Canadians have taken 17,000 prisoners, he wrote. Three Forces Smash

A great artillery duel raged across the Rhine and the Germans broadcast unsubstantiated reports that the Americans already had won their first crossing. An Allied Supreme headquarters, this was reported unofficially but a sign of

The novel contest with its $15, $10, $5 and $2 prizes, is proving a challenge to the creative ability of the students, but officials point out that novelty alone is not the chief characteristic demanded by the judges. A simple name may win.

The contest will close at the end of the month and all students are urged to send in their suggestions. There are no strings attached, and in case of duplicate awards, two prizes will be given. Names may be submitted to school offices or to Mr. Schrenk at Upper's Department Store, Front Street.

Former member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and overseas since December, 1939, C.S.M. W. J. Foster, R. C. of the late Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Foster of Wooler, was wounded in Holland while serving with the Canadian Scottish, according to word received by his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Belnap of Rossmore.

Enlisting in the R. and F. E. Regiment at Belleville, C.S.M. Foster was a member of the unit when that regiment made its famous foray into Dieppe in June, 1940, with other First Division units, and when it left its remnants the mascot in the tender care of a French patriot.

Calling of Doctor To Attend Childbirth Frustrates Thieves

The fact a woman was about to become a mother frustrated a robbery at Norwood over the weekend. The village physician was called to the maternity case shortly before two o'clock Saturday morning. Enroute he stopped at Jack Brewer's garage, in Norwood, to inflate a pad with air. While getting the pad inflated the doctor heard suspicious noises in Mr. Stewart's garage and later noticed the proprietor, who hastened to the garage only to find that robbers had loaded the office safe into his own motorcar and were about to leave. The robbers escaped through a rear door when they heard Mr. Stewart coming in the front entrance. Provincial Constable Gray, of Campbellford, investigated the matter. Mr. Stewart said he will make the new baby which was expected that night a suitable reward.

R.S.M. Robert L. Cook Gains His Rank The 'Hard Way'

The 27-year-old R.S.M. is now leading his squadron of the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, more familiarly known in army circles as the "Plugs" one of the first reconnaissance regiments to be formed in the Canadian army overseas, "somewhere over there".

One of the youngest regimental sergeant majors in action with the Canadians, Cook has fought his way to his present rank through sheer hard work and adaptitude.

He joined the first battalion of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in 1939, and left with the first draft to that unit early in 1940. He was part of the unit when that regiment made its famous foray into Dieppe in June, 1940, with other First Division units, and when it left its remnants the mascot in the tender care of a French patriot.

In New Service.

Returning, he started training in a new arm of the service, a reconnaissance unit, from whence he went armed with a machine gun and carrying three men, the modern recce units were born and Cook became one of the leaders of these improvised mobile units. He was part of the First Canadian Recce Squadron made up of units from each divisional infantry regiments. Cook, on the formation of the "Plugs" he was sent to that unit and has remained with it since.

Before going to active service of war, his unit formed part of the First Army in defence of London. Later he went to Sicily and took part in that campaign. He made the jump to Italy where he has fought his tanks against every enemy troops and formations since.

Cook's rise came rapidly and he quickly advanced from trooper to the highest non-commissioned rank in the army.

A brother, Eric, has been in the army for the past three years and was a survivor of the Canadian tank "Regina" when that corvette was sunk in the English Channel a few months ago.

Una Merkel Burla Has Narrow Escape

New York, March 5 (AP) — Mrs. Arno Merkel, 70, was found dead in her gas-filled kitchen today and her daughter, stage and screen actress Una Merkel Burla, 41, was overcome in the bedroom of their mid-town apartment.

The actress was revived by an inhalator after a half an hour. She was taken to hospital, where her condition was reported as good.

Police said the mother had committed suicide and that the daughter was overcome accidentally.

They said they found a note on a living room table, written in pencil. They were able to make out the words "I'm ill and can't take it any more. Forgive me."

Police said they assumed the note was written by Mrs. Merkel and that she had turned on the gas to disposition of money and jewelry.

A watchman reported he smelled gas coming from the Merkel apartment. Mrs. Merkel's body lay on the floor and police said five gas jets were open. Police said the woman also had slashed her wrists with razor blade was found on the gas stove.

Mrs. Merkel, in night clothing, was in bed.

Chances Increase Session Running Its Full Course

Toronto, March 5 (CP)—Chances of the current session of the Ontario legislature running its full course appear improved after last week's sittings, in which the House survived two successive crises and then proceeded with lawmaking in a spirit of harmony.

The family allowances issue, which precipitated a vigorous attack on the Progressive Conservative government and threatened dissolution of the House, apparently was handled successfully Monday when Premier Drew re-defined his government's policy toward the Federal Act and gave assurance the administration would do nothing to prevent the legislation from coming into effect. This placated opposition factions sufficiently to permit dropping of the matter, temporarily at least.

Sharp contention arose again Tuesday when Premier Drew told the assembly his 36-man government would step out of office if defeated on major legislation. This statement followed moving of a five-point amendment to the Throne Speech passage motion by E. B. Jolliffe, C.C.F. opposition leader, which censured the government's program one of "unprecedented timidity."

The Premier's declaration underlined the potentially explosive situation in the House, where the C.C.F. with 21 seats and the Liberals with 16 can exercise a voting majority. Ignition may be provided in the remainder of the Throne Speech debate, in which Liberal leader Mitchell F. Hepburn and Labor-Progressive leader A. A. MacLeod have yet to speak. Government action on C.C.F. amendments and any subsequent amendments could bring a decisive division, as the possibility is seen the administration might ask a vote of confidence.

It was reported last week, however, that both the C.C.F. and the Liberals intend to avoid voting in concert at least until the budget is brought down and any new tax impositions are disclosed. Also weighing against a premature ending of the session is the belief that neither the C.C.F. nor the Liberals, apart from their announced opposition to another wartime election, would welcome going to the electorate at this time.

Bridges Destroyed By German Engineers Says German Agency

London, March 5 — (Reuters) — The Germans have smashed all bridges across the Rhine between Cologne and Wesel, a German Transocean agency report said, today.

"All the bridges, including those at Neuss, Krefeld and Duisburg have been destroyed by German engineers," the report said.

200,000 HOLD PERMITS

Fredericton, March 5 — (CP) — The annual report of the New Brunswick Liquor Control Board shows that approximately 250,000 adult citizens of the province, or upwards of 200,000 held liquor ration books during the year ending Oct. 31, 1944.

Zorra, Ont., March 5.—(CP)—Fourteen persons were injured, two seriously, when eight cars of a westbound Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train were derailed early today at this Oxford County Station. The accident was attributed to a broken rail.

FOURTEEN HURT

Eight of the injured were taken to hospital at Woodstock and six others were taken to Ingersoll. Most seriously injured were Mrs. Elizabeth Hall of Toronto, in the Woodstock General with serious head injuries, and LAC. John Henry, 25-year-old airman from Campbellville, Ont., who also suffered head injuries.

Condition of the other seven in the Woodstock hospital was reported as satisfactory. They were: Anthony Concella, of Port Hope, Ont.; Mrs. Lelia Bass, of Toledo, Ohio; Betty Simon, of Detroit; Margaret Hall of Toronto; FO. Ray Jackson, of Windsor; Michael Englander, of Detroit; Harold Ropp, of Woodstock.

Besides Henry, the injured at Ingersoll are: Frances Waterman, 22, Detroit; Mrs. Evelyn James, 35, Detroit, and her son, Jack; Thomas Young, 45, Fergus, Ont.; Mrs. Margaret Mitchell, 31, Windsor. Diagnosis has not been completed in all the Ingersoll cases.

Three or four army ambulances and one R.C.A.F. ambulance from Woodstock, two buses from Woodstock and taxis from nearby centres rushed to the scene and helped remove the injured to hospital.

Zorra is about five miles north of Ingersoll about midway between London and Woodstock.

The wreck occurred at 12.15 a.m., E.D.T., at the station here and at 4 a.m. the main C.P.R. line still was blocked. Tracks for a considerable distance were torn up.

Uninjured passengers were taken to London aboard a relief train after rescue workers worked for more than 1-2 hours to free some of the trapped passengers.

Text of Statement.

Toronto, March 5 (CP) — About 60 passengers were injured in the wreck of a Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train at Zorra early today, but injuries of only three or four "can be classified as serious," E. D. Cotterell, vice-president and general manager of the C.P.R. in a statement issued here today, said.

Text of the statement:

At 12.15 a.m. today, Train No. 19, travelling from Toronto to Detroit, engines 2232 and 300, with nine cars, had all cars derailed at Zorra, 18.7 miles east of London, Ont., cause, broken rail due to transverse fissure. All cars remained upright with the exception of the first two coaches, which turned over.

Relief train with doctors left London 1.45 a.m.; doctors were also sent to the scene from Woodstock and Ingersoll.

Preliminary reports indicated about 60 passengers injured, casualties or four of which can be classified as serious.

Doctor's Orders Are Easy To Take At Health Centre

Servicewomen Find No Trace of Hospital Atmosphere at Oakville, Ont., Convalescent Home

By HAZEL DEAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 5 (CP) — Servicewomen are obeying doctor's order with a smile at the No. 8 Women's Services Health Centre at nearby Oakville where a patient's life is full of variety.

Doctor's orders are easy to take at the newly-opened convalescent home for women's personnel of the three services. They're issued by petite Major D. R. Kober, a woman army doctor from Whitby, Ont., who believes a holiday from rules and regimentation can put a "browned-off" servicewoman on top of the world a lot faster than patient medicine. Her prescription works like magic too.

The centre, with a capacity for 200 women, doesn't serve bad or psychoneurotic patients. It was opened chiefly for the benefit of servicewomen recovering from serious illnesses or injuries—girls too far from hometowns to go home for convalescent leave.

It's also a boon to the servicewoman who's had a bit too much routine and hard work for her own good. Even her medical officer discovers her nerves are beginning to fray she's packed off to the Oakville centre for an indefinite period. She's usually full of vim and vigor within ten weeks.

Initial Check-Up.

Activities prescribed for the patient's particular trouble are decided on next. If Major Kober decides the newcomer just needs a rest from routine, there's no prescription other than "enjoy yourself."

The second surprise comes with a tour of the centre. The big main lounge looks like a country club lobby. Overlooking the snow-covered lawns, the room is bright with sunlight, fresh-cut flowers and gay, chintz curtains. Patients are glad to lounge and swallow up the comfortably in easy chairs, listening to the radio, or lounge before a blazing log fire.

The rumpus room is a replica of the lounge on a more casual scale. Three ping pong tables take up most of the space. The girls use the room for square dancing at night.

Patients live in five adjoining Nissen huts divided into 36 room units. The rooms are warm and cozy, walls tinted in soft pastels and hung with bright pictures. All furnishings in the huts and main building were donated by the Red Cross.

It's the daily routine—or lack of it—that supplies the greatest surprise.

Late Breakfasts.

There's no six o'clock reveille at the Oakville centre. The girls can get a breakfast snack as late as 10 a.m., although the last full-course breakfast is served at 9½. During the morning unless a patient has special classes in physical training, the girls do exactly which as they please. There's an indoor swimming pool and gymnasium, handicraft rooms where weaving, sewing, leather and woodwork are taught. There's a library for the bookworms and a able librarian, Cpl. Mary FitzGibbon of Port Erie, Ont.

There's a beauty parlor for the servicewoman who needs a touch of glamor to chase away the blues. There are acres of open spaces for the office worker who's tired of that "shut in feeling." Outdoor girls like to hitch a ride on Babe," the centre's work horse.

Patients are issued three late passes a week when they can stay out until 1 a.m. Not that the evenings are dull. Movies are shown most nights and there are evening classes in dancing and handicrafts. Visiting hours are allowed several afternoons and evenings a week.

There is no heel-clicking and saluting. The girls don't wear their uniforms at the centre, except at the dinner table when they are required to "dress up." Instead, there's a free and easy atmosphere that quickly puts a routine-weary servicewoman in a holiday mood.

Canadians Ready for Victory Loan

Canada's forthcoming Eighth Victory Loan which will be launched on April 23rd and continues until May 12th, a period of eighteen days, will have the highest objective set of any of the campaigns for subscriptions during this war, the amount of one and a half billion dollars.

Now this figure is not unknown to Canadian investors and buyers of war and victory bonds for only last October in the campaign for $1,300,000,000 no less than $1,500,000,000 was invested by Canadians.

This recent success gives the promise of the attainment and likelihood of exceeding the objective and so setting a new high for all-time.

The efforts of Canadians fighting alongside the forces of the other Allies have been bringing the victory nearer by their courage and fortitude. What the men at the front are the millions working at the home front have done is making for the greatest victory that is to come, the triumph over aggrandizement and tyranny to bring in an era of assured and lasting peace.

The campaign is seven weeks away and the people will be prepared to give to their utmost to make this the campaign of the heaviest subscriptions ever raised by the Dominion of Canada.

Through the Red Cross

In its work of humanity and mercy the Canadian Red Cross Society is doing something of which every Canadian must know a great deal and be so filled with appreciation of the service that the approaching campaign will achieve its goal. As the war has expanded and the war effort of the United Nations has grown with the passing months, so has the work of this society. Its responsibilities have increased considerably for the coming year.

According to the statement of National Campaign chairman Norman Urquhart the society has been informed that more than 17,000,000 persons are in acute want and destitution in the United Nations, many of them without homes and clothing and some even without food. In Mr. Urquhart's words "women and children of our Allies must be helped, not only in the name of suffering humanity, but because we feel that our fellow Canadians, who are well known for philanthropy would want us to make a practical expression of our gratitude for the fortitude and courage displayed so magnificently by these people throughout the bitter years of conquest and the tide of war that moves on to victory and the battlefields recede millions of people have been left in privation. They look to you—the members of the Red Cross—for help."

It is to be remembered that Canadian United Allied Relief Fund representing the war charities of eleven of the peoples of the United Nations asked to have their funds included in the appeal of the Red Cross to avoid two financial campaigns and to use to the fullest the vast machinery of the International Red Cross in bringing practical aid and relief to the people in such dire need. With the permission of the Government this has been done and so the Red Cross has increased its budget quota for 1943 to take care of the people of the United Nations. Arrangements for the distribution of the relief will be undertaken by the Red Cross.

So Canadians under auspices of the Red Cross will gird themselves to the task of making it possible for the society to carry out its programs in this year of heavy responsibilities. The society is certain that the Canadian people will respond to this appeal.

Patriotic Gardens

With spring officially just about two weeks away many people will soon be planning for the gardening season, which is a natural development at this period of the last days of winter. The patriotic instinct for production this year of the output of the garden will be of the greatest importance.

Victory gardens will in view of the liberation of Nazi-held territory, which has been so much before the public in the past half year particularly, occupy more than ordinary attention in the home.

Gardening has always the merit of being a health-giving task and of being good for the mind and the body, it is healthy exercise, it provides essential foods for the body and it stimulates the mind to contemplate that one is a producer and a grower for the man who is helping to feed himself is helping out the nations and their millions of people by providing for himself a good portion of fruits and vegetables from his own garden. Incidentally gardening is remunerative as many private gardeners know from personal experience.

There will remain a heavy demand for food, however stocked-up shops may be. So he who produces his own food is a good provider.

School of Prison System

The United Kingdom War Office is organizing, with the co-operation of H. M. Prison Commission, a course of studies of penal administration for officers who have been selected for the task of controlling the German prison system. The course will be held partly at Wakefield, Yorkshire, under the auspices of H. M. Prison Commission, and partly in London.

At Wakefield the students will be instructed in the general principles of penal administration and in the daily administrative problems of a large prison, and will have opportunities of observing the practical application of principles in some well known English prisons. During the subsequent period in London the students will make a special study of the German system of penal administration.

Merchant Landing Craft?

The various types of landing craft which have been developed during the war may have a revolutionary effect on the post-war-life of some of the remodelled ports of the world.

It is not distance alone that cuts off some of the Pacific Islands, for example, from the rest of the world. Many of them have no regular commercial shipping service because the physical formation of their coastlines prevents the construction of harbors.

It seems probable that after the war, adapted landing-craft ships will take cargoes direct to their beaches in the same way that these ships have been delivering military supplies to the assault beaches. An Australian firm has already offered to buy a number of these ships from the Admiralty, as soon as the war is over.

"The marvelous American invention, spelt D.U.K.W." as Mr. Churchill called it, is expected to be used for unloading cargoes from ships carrying them to the points ashore where they are needed; and holiday tourists may trave into seaside resorts on converted Infantry landing craft. Such possibilities are now being studied by shipping concerns.

Pensions That Go On Forever

(New York Sun)

This annual report of the administrator of veterans' affairs shows that in the fiscal year ended on June 30, 1944, the War of 1812, though it came to an end 129 years earlier, was still an item in the federal budget. At the end of the year one pension was still being paid to a dependent of a deceased veteran of that war. As for the Mexican war, the end of which is almost a century past, 68 pensions were being paid to dependents of deceased veterans of that war, 65 going to widows. From these examples it is clear that it may not be possible to fix the full cost of the present war before the year 2064.

LITTLE HOSTESS

Ministers, doctors or book-selling chaps;
Boys with the groceries; fixers of taps;
Readers of meters, gas, water or light;
Postmen and peddlers and fellows who write!
Whoever the visitors happen to be,
Ellen Elizabeth asks them to tea.

Carpenter, painter and laundress downstairs,
All are her friends, as she often declares,
Time up to now hasn't poisoned her mind,
Filled it with prejudice; made her unkind;
Well-dressed or ragged, no fault does she see,
Ellen Elizabeth asks them to tea.

People are welcome whenever they call,
Rich folk or poor folk, she cares not at all.
Such is the friendship of childhood, she sees
Only in people their efforts to please.
Caste, creed and color of every degree,
Ellen Elizabeth asks them to tea.

Long Over-Water Flights by B-29s Are Hazardous Ordeals for Crews

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Marianas Islands — (delayed)—When you see a headline saying "Superfort Hits Japan Again," I hope you don't get the idea that's all there is to being there. It's high and that she'll be bombed out of the war within another week or two.

Because that isn't the case. We are just barely getting a good program of bombing that will be sound and tough with this war. Even under constant bombings it would take years to reduce Japan to the stone ages. And our bombings are not yet heavy.

Too, we have lots of things to contend with. Distance is the main thing, and Jap flak is another sick and foul weather are other things. The weather over Japan is their best defence. As one pilot jokingly suggested, "The Nips should broadcast all the weather every night, and save both themselves and us lots of trouble."

Almost the first thing the B-29 boys asked me was, "Has the Superfort as home think the B-29s are going to win the war?"

I told them the papers played up the raids, and that many wishful thinking people felt the Superfort might turn the trick. And the boys said:

"That's what we were afraid of. Naturally we want what credit we deserve, but our raids certainly aren't going to win the war."

The B-29 raids are important, just as every island taken and every ship sunk is important. And in their present strength it would be putting their clear out of proportion if you think they are a dominant factor in our Pacific war.

I say this not to belittle the B-29 boys, because they are wonderful. I say it because I want myself and want it understood by the folks at home.

Their lot is a tough one. The worst part is that there's over water every inch of the way to Japan, every inch of the way back. And brother, it's a lot of water. An average time for one of their missions is more than 14 hours.

The flak and fighters over Japan are bad enough, but that sends perfect fear into the hearts of any one of the Empire only from 30 minutes to an hour depending on their target. Jap fighters follow them only about 15 minutes off the coast.

Then after the boys the woolies is "sweating out" those six or seven hours of ocean between them and the way back. To make it worse, they're flying alone.

Some of them are bound to be shot up, and the staggering along that's always the object of running out of gas, from many forms of mechanical trouble. If you've got one engine gone, others are liable to quit.

If anything happens, you go into the drink. That's where the "ditching" I suppose around a B-29 base you hear the word "ditching" almost more than any other word. "Ditching" out here isn't like "ditching" in the English Channel where your chances of being picked up are pretty good. "Ditching" out here is usually fatal.

We have set up a search and rescue system for those ditchings, flies but still the ocean is awfully big, and the mighty hard to find a couple of little rubber boats. The chances that we do rescue about a fifth of our "ditched" fliers is amazing to me.

Then that long drag back home after the bombing is a definite mental hazard, and is what really usually makes the boys sit and stare.

Maybe you've heard of the "buddy system" in the Infantry. They use it in the Air, too. For instance, if a plane is in distress and can't keep up, and has to drop behind, somebody drops back with him to keep him company.

They've known planes to come clear home accompanied by a "buddy," and you could go so far as to say some might not have made it were it not for the extra courage given them by having company.

But the big point of the "buddy system" is that if a plane does have to ditch, the "buddy" can fix his exact position and get surface rescuers on the way.

GEN. J. H. ROBERTS IS GIVEN POST

Official for Control European District, Imperial War Graves Commission

Ottawa, March 8.—(CP)—Defence Minister Ralston announced today that Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts, 31, of Kingston, Ont., who commanded the Dieppe raid on August 19, 1942, has been released from the Canadian Army to take up the appointment of Chief Administrative Officer, Central European District, with the Imperial War Graves Commission.

Gen. Roberts, who was awarded the Distinguished Service Order for gallantry at Dieppe, was born in Pipestone, Man.

He was commissioned in the Royal Artillery on graduating from R. M. C. in June, 1914, and saw extensive service with the Artillery in the Canadian Expeditionary Force during the First Great War. He was served in France in 1915 and serving continuously with the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery until he was wounded in March, 1918.

He was created an Officer of the Military of the 1st Canadian Division, and was in France commanding a brigade of the Royal Canadian Artillery in the dark days of June, 1940. When his regiment was ordered back to England on the collapse of France, he brought back every gun under his command.

Guerillas Kill Thousands of Japs On Northern Luzon

Manila, March 8 (AP) — American infantry pushed deeper today into the mountains of Northern Luzon, the reported headquarters stronghold of Gen. Yamashita, as Gen. MacArthur disclosed the Filipino guerillas had cleared one entire northern province of enemy troops.

Other Americans overcame the last determined resistance which continued their eastward pressure through the city's water supply area and occupied the town of Pinlas islands.

The headquarters said units of the 26th. and 32nd. divisions of the U.S. 1st. Corps had made new gains in the northern mountains along the Baguio-Bontoc road. The Villa Verde Trail and the Ambaguio River.

These columns were east and south of Baguio, the Philippine summer capital, which Gen. MacArthur's "Tigers" conqueror of Singapore, said several weeks ago he have withdrawn them to direct his defence of the Philippines.

Other Filipino units have been engaging the Japanese for days in the mountains between 25 or 30 miles southwest of Baguio, the Japanese base.

Guerillas struck in the north coast province of Ilocos Norte, MacArthur's communique said, "put fear of fighting" baffled the Japanese, and "as a general result, the enemy suffered heavy losses, running into the thousands.

Activity in this area might also threaten the northern port of Aparri, which is the principal base of the first Philippine invasion landing in 1941. Jap troops in the area are left in their hands.

The final action in the fire-and-shell-ridden district was the mopping up of the last Japanese pocket Saturday, flanked the Japanese positions on the Escolta, Manila's Fifth Peninsula. They were the 19th. and 21st. Infantry regiments, and an, "The Great Commoner", and the three time Governor of Nebraska.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

CAPACITY OF THE STOMACH

Size of the stomach varies greatly in different individuals, but the average dimensions are four to five inches in length and 4 inches in diameter at about the middle, and the capacity of the normal stomach is approximately 3½ pints or slightly less than half a gallon. This does not mean that a normal person can drink three pints of water or other liquid at one sitting, for merely that the stomach can hold that quantity without discomfort.

A frequent question is whether the stomach can "shrink" or "expand," that is, whether the size of the stomach determines the individual's appetite or the amount of food the individual must take in order to feel satisfied.

The answer is yes, in a way. The stomach doesn't actually "shrink" or dilate in a healthy person, but being a muscular organ, it is pushed back along the alimentary canal, it changes position considerably in capacity or size from moment to moment, according to amount of food. It is a mistake to think of the stomach as a simple receptacle of the conventionalized shape depicted in almanacs and the sucker ball of childhood days. Nearer the truth to think of it as a long tube, folded in the middle. Every twenty seconds or so, during digestion, powerful waves of contractions or waves pass leisurely from the middle portion to the lower outlet (pylorus) at the right side, and this change in shape and capacity pushes food toward the pylorus or, when part of the food is sufficiently digested, helps to push the pylorus into the upper portion of the intestine (duodenum) where it is further digested by the enzymatic juice and the bile. Of course, that portable movement, wave or contraction is automatic, goes on independently of the consciousness, will go sensation or feeling of the individual. Moreover this physical or muscular or motor part of digestion is not limited to the stomach. It continues more or less through the length of the alimentary canal or food tube, and is no more subject to "regulation" by physic and medicines than is your breathing or the beating of your heart, stupid.

The muscular coat of the stomach and the entire length of the intestine, like the muscle coat of the arteries throughout the body, the heart which is composed chiefly of muscle and indeed the voluntary or skeletal muscles of the healthy individual have their share in gaining firmness, resiliency. When the stomach is stretched from a presumable amount of food gives that vague satisfaction which commonly called "filling the stomach." On the other hand, if the stomach has poor tone it is consequently stretched by and it takes more food to "fill" the stomach than is not literally true, for there is never any empty space in the stomach.

Deficiency of vitamin B-complex, particularly thiamin (thiamine) impairs the muscle tone. Increased intake of B-complex improves muscle tone throughout the body. A great many flabby, overweight (because of excessive consumption of refined carbohydrate foods), individuals have found that an adequate daily intake of vitamin B-complex for a reasonable length of time (three months) will be stated with less food than they formerly required.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Out of Season

My husband has obtained a lot of relief from following instructions in your booklet, "Intestinal Stasis Shortage" and "Relief from Constipation." He will be stated constantly with "hay fever" both in season and out of season. He has in five days the trouble stopped and now in two months he has had practically no return.

(Mrs. H. O. A.)

Answer. Thank you. Most out of season hay fever sufferers have another kind of allergy. On request the booklet named will be mailed to readers who provide stamped addressed envelope.

Permanent or Removable

Three teeth missing. Dentists advise permanent bridge, which requires drilling holes in teeth on each side of gap and anchoring the bridge to them. Would you advise this or a removable bridge?

(A. E.)

Answer—I'm not competent to judge—in your place I'd leave the decision to your dentist. Perhaps you have consulted me before you lost those teeth. If you should have sent twenty-five cents and stamped addressed envelope for booklet, "Save Your Teeth."

CIRCLES AROUND MOON

Under date of January 26, 1780, George Washington wrote in his diary:

"A very remarkable circle around the Moon—another Indication of falling Weather."

The apparent circles around the moon, or halos, as the weather meteorologists tell us, are just that—signs. They precede stormy weather as bad and they have little if any value as weather signs.

True halos around the sun and moon are produced by the refraction or light rays passing through a high, thin cloud of ice crystals which usually surrounds the sun or the reflection of light rays from the surfaces of such crystals.

Even in the warmest weather the temperature of the upper atmosphere is below freezing and below the dew point at all times of the year.

Perhaps, since the type of clouds favorable for the production of, the Old Farmers Almanac on either side of a widespread cyclone, it would be more accurate to say that the halos precede rain or fall of precipitation following such circles around the sun or moon.

As a general rule halos caused by ice crystals precede rain, but halos caused by reflection are white.

Halos are often a great variety of sizes and forms, depending on the shape and position of the ice crystals, but the most common are the simply prisms.

Such usually smaller rings around the sun and moon are called "coronae" and are produced by light rays passing through minute drops of water in the atmosphere.

Procurement Director Is Bargain Hunter for Allies

On the desk of a mild mannered not just routine man in Washington, write Marquis W. Childs and Edward A. Harris, in Liberty, stamped all the less possible requests that come from our Allies in the four corners of the globe. Sometimes Clifton Mack gets a little discouraged. It seems to him in his job as director of procurement that they all around thinking up things hard to find.

One day came a supercargo message from the Russians. They wanted 147 miles of submarine cable shipped cable to lay under the Caspian Sea. That was more, they wanted it in 11 pieces of varying lengths, bought 86 miles.

Mack knew the assignment would be a tough one; 86 miles of copper cable in one inch is past. That experience has helped him to get through his present herculean task.

Clifton Mack is the quiet MAN who bought more than $4,000,000,000 worth of things from watch parts to bombers in nursing bottles to complete railway trains. Military equipment is not the only thing purchased directly by the armed services. Food for the Army is bought by the war food administrator.

Mack's shopping sleuths have sent thousands of pounds of cloth for diapers to liberated areas for use in the months to come and they get back one disconcerting report that Arab shepherds are using the stuff for turbans. In the peak period last March the procurement office sent out half a pound boxes of common pins and 2,000 grosses of safety pins to F.E.A.'s clients, presumably for fastening those diapers.

While the procurement office played no direct part in equipping the second front, invasion always did raise new problems for Mack. Even in advance of the launching of the front, procurement often gets word of the materials the liberated areas will require — types of clothing and shoes, medicines and what not.

Sometimes liberated areas have leaned heavily on the lend-lease program and the know of the office of procurement. In their methodical destruction of Sicily, during the early invariably blew up all power plants to keep down the use of Russian rehabilitation. The Reds hit on the idea of using mobile power equipment. In this theater, while could move, into a stricken city and hasten humanitarian relief by restoration of electric lighting and other power facilities. But they had no such mobile power units.

Quick Action.

The war production board, operating on the order, gave it top priority and immediately sent to the line. So urgent was the thing that the power machinery was built by private plants for special the domestic program was temporarily halted. Private utilities supplied the equipment out of their replacement power facilities. Even the Army's mobile power units were ready to do the job in the reconstruction of the soviet's devastated cities.

Mack was assisted in procurement when a power plant supply mission from the Russian government arrived in this country in North Africa headed by Gen. Ivan Susloparov, who had been separated from the rest, jarring and pounding drinking that all important cable. The train was stopped, and Russian and American engineers personally inspected the scene. As a result of their inspection, part of the whole order was sent back to the plant for new tests.

Three weeks had been lost. But still the cable for the Caspian was loaded in time. With it went explicit diagrams and directions in Russian and English on how to transfer the previous lengths of copper from shipboard to railroad cars and then how to insure safe arrival overland. That's an important phase of Mack's job. It not only to get the stuff, but to get to it in safe arrival.

Official Buyer.

In this war Mack is official shopper for lend-lease, the foreign economic administrator, the United Nations relief and rehabilitation administration, and the Red Cross. Foreign governments and United State orders through lend-lease.

Before the war Mack was shopper for the federal government. With quiet efficiency he had consolidated the task of buying the thousand and one things a swollen government in Washington

Mack's old clothes consultants survey Kresge, the square-bellied warehouses and sprawling buildings of the old clothes centre in search of the diverse items those executive's and gripes. Engineers and buyers for the various procurement are familiar figure in the brisk, hurrying crowds of ties for foreign relief distribution.

Here they pit their bargaining genius against the wiles of clothiers. Women's dresses are obtained for 30 to 35 cents each. Every individual, of the magnitude of this particular purchase job, the figures show that from the time of Mack's March of the year procurement-thought 68,000 items of second hand work garments for relief in Algiers, Italy, Greece and Yugoslavia, 150 "sheets" quilts and 30,000 men's and boys' overcoats for the Finnish civilian use in North Africa.

Clifton Mack was a wool salesman before the federal government service. In his speech is the twang of his native Missouri, but his eye is an Ancient Coolidgean glint as he looks with calculated skepticism on the buyers and the sellers of this world's goods.

He became the special agent in the intelligence unit of the bureau of internal revenue, one of the few outposts of his work soon brought him to the attention of Elmer Irey, chief of the unit, who has put most of his big shot gangsters in prison for failing to account for their income tax.

Within three years Mack was made head of the New England office of the intelligence unit. In that job he established a great many absent minded citizens in jail.

A little later, at the suggestion of Irey's chief, he was performing special jobs in Washington on a permanent. His reputation as a trouble shooter was established on when serious trouble developed for the treasury's procurement division. Secretary Morgenthau called on him.

In June, 1940, he was named director of procurement. Since then he has consistently followed the procurement technique. Separate government agencies do their own shopping on their own and paying a high variety of prices. They had duplicating warehouses. Each of them only half full, in cities all over the United States. In contact with the war job, Mack is getting this jungle straightened out.

Up to 1944 his division has spent more than $4,000,000,000 for lend-lease materials, $1,500,000,000 for emergency relief, including expenditures under the various projects administration, $221,000,000 since 1933 for ordinary purchases for government buildings, $40,000,000 for stratgic and essential materials under the war program, $38,000,000 for the Red Cross since 1941, and $36,000,000 for defense housing.

With the end of the war drawing closer, Mack faces a new task of towering proportions. Under the supervision of Donald L. Orlich, who was appointed last May by Secretary Morgenthau to oversee the disposal of the property and dividend's war surplus consumer goods, Mack will work out details of sales to the public of such consumer goods as cash, typewriters, drugs, silbes, trucks, lumber, electrical equipment and a variety of other commodities.

He has always been getting experience in his new line. Last year ending last February 1, the administration sold civil property amounting $100,000,000 worth of surplus property, mostly by mail order sale agents, with a pocket for each grenade, to packers and from smudge pots to boks and motor cars.

The division has just completed the sale at public auction of 30,000 horses, made necessary as a result of the army's program of reducing cavalry units. Professional auctioneers were hired, and the government cleared an average of $70 a head. The top price $700 was bid for a span of two mules.

Ten thousand used trucks are now being sold by Mack to retail dealers at O.P.A. ceiling prices. And 4,000 used motorcycle are in process of disposal, and for a "take" of $837,000 were harnesses and saddles disposed of during World War I. They have been kept in storage by the government ever since, and when it was decided recently that they would not be needed, on the block they went.

War Production Faces Curtailment By Strikes, Layoffs

Detroit, March 3 (CP) — The city's year war production program today faced severe curtailment from the widespread strikes and resulting layoffs idling more than 125,000 employees at Chrysler Corporation and its parts manufacturing Co. plants.

Regardless of any action taken at a War Labor Board hearing in Washington, it appeared likely that any degree of production at the 12 affected plants could be resumed before March 11, company officials predicted it would be several days after an end of the strikes before normalcy again could be reached.

While denouncing the strikes as unauthorized and in violation of the Union's no-strike pledge, International United Automobile Workers (CIO) officers said they looked forward to the W.L.B. hearing for an opportunity to air the strikers' grievances.

Winnipeggers Argue About Girl Cadets

Winnipeg, March 3 (CP) — Winnipeggers are divided in their opinions on the advisability of having a girl cadet corps. Those in favor of the idea like it because it teaches girls manners and gives them better deportment, while against the corps don't like it because it "makes girls unfeminine."

Recently the inter-service cadet committee meeting in Winnipeg unanimously decided that any action taken by a War Labor Board hearing in Washington, D.C., would forward a recommendation to Ottawa.

Mrs. Jack Armstrong said that the corps is a "splendid idea. I think it's something like the Girl Guards, of course we don't want that, but it's good training."

"There is no point in it," said Mrs. Winnipeg garageman. "Health training and citizenship, yes, but I don't see why they need military training."

The principal of a school which has a girl cadet corps was in favor of the idea. "The girls' deportment and everything is so much improved."

The Greater Winnipeg area alone had 15 municipal Victory Clubs girls in their cadet program. Instructors are being assisted by members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps in organizing training for the girls.

So far this training of girl cadets is unauthorized and no government grant is allotted to it, though girl cadets are eligible to five in the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association competitions.

Public officials, including aldermen, would make no statement for or against the corps for girls until they had studied the idea more thoroughly.

Mrs. McCormond was a town council member for nine years before she became mayor. She was born at Kingston, Ont., and educated at Queen's University. Following her marriage to J. T. McCormond, a railway employee, she lived for a time at Fort William and moved to Sutherland in 1913.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Card of Condolence

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

If I send a card of condolence to a lady on the death of her husband, should I add my address to my name? I feel that if I do, it would look as if I intended a correspondence; and if I don't she won't know my address to which I wanted to. Please tell me which is correct!

M. E. L.

If you mean, as I judge you do, should a lady attending a send a printed card of condolence, please let me urge you not to. The message printed on such cards is a most impersonal note, but the words of the manufacturer, and they know it. And when you take thought to realize how you mean, and how needed are the sympathetic words of our friends in these dark hours after the passing of a dear one, you will want to write a few words personal. Your note may be brief, just a few lines or three sentences — but it should express your sincere sympathy of sympathy. Then, as in all letters, you must write your address and the date at the beginning of the note, not at the right hand corner. Such a message will be a comfort to the bereaved, and she will have your address to write to, to tell you her appreciation of your kind thought.

A Change in Wedding Plans.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I very much appreciate your answering my other question about my wedding. I have planned my wedding exactly as you suggested, but because of the death of a number of our attendants, may I change it? Can one more question? I am having a maid of honor, and my fiance is having a best man. Then, besides my two bridesmaids, I am having my 13-year-old cousin as flower girl. Besides my fiance's two ushers, he has now decided to have his 14-year-old cousin as an usher to escort my cousin to church. Now who would be the proper order of the bridal party and the members of the church?

A. F.

Your fiance has certainly created a problem (unexpectedly, I should say). In addition to the two ushers to be in the procession merely to "seat" guests with the bride's family. Of course in the procession this would be first; and in the recessional, definitely second. But in the procession, this means that three persons have to walk alone, not a good "balancing". In the recession this would have to be the order: first, two ushers, walking together; then the younger cousin walking alone; next, the two bridesmaids, walking together; then your junior bridesmaid, walking alone; next, the two ushers, walking together; then your junior bridesmaid, walking alone; last, the two maids of honor walking together; and last, you on your brother's right arm.

In the recessional, the best-planned recessional is the reverse of the procession: first, bride and bridegroom; next, maid of honor, walking alone; next, your sister, junior bridesmaid, walking alone; next, the two bridesmaids, walking together; then the two ushers, walking together; then your young cousin, walking alone; last, the two ushers, walking together.

This plan means that the dramatic highlight of the recessional is where it should be, on the one "alone", the bride and bridegroom. But if you and the bridegroom intend to walk off the recessional, then the maid of honor walks alone, then the best man; the junior bridesmaid, with the two "junior ushers"; and the bridesmaid, with the ushers.

An heirloom handed down in the family from mother to daughter through many generations, it came to her 40 years ago and originally came from one of the family in Switzerland.

The unique beauty of the piece lies in the rare quality of the glass which contains a blend of colors: black, violet, purple and many right through the heavy glass. Mrs. Murfray says antique experts here have told her the formula by which the glass was made has been lost for 400 years.

Another Soldier Falls in Love With a Girl's Picture

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My sister-in-law visited us for a month, after my brother went overseas. We both fell for each other hard; we were more like sisters than sister-in-law. She grew so fond of me, she wanted to keep us as a sister and wrote to her brother who is overseas that she'd found just the girl for him. She also sent him my picture.

Just as quickly as it could come across the ocean, her brother wrote me and said he had fallen in love with my picture, and would I wait for him. We've been corresponding ever since. He's not the jealous type and tells me to go out and have a good time 'til he can come and claim me. Don't you think it's funny that I've fallen in love with a man I've never seen, and yet I've known loads of boys and have had dates since I got was 16 years old? Can you explain falling in love with someone you've never seen?

Jo Anne

The new sister-in-law who has made such an impression on you, has made you think well of the entire family. In addition to this, there is the added aura of romance. The young soldier wrote you he had fallen in love with your picture, he writes you delightful letters and there is the added stimulus of the unknown.

Whether this long distance love affair ever wins up at the altar, considering the uncertainty of the times, you've probably both enjoyed hugely, and my best wishes go with you. This will also answer a similar letter signed Pat.

Waste to Care Her Husband of Boiling Chairwise

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband is the type of man who always falls in the fact. He was wounded twice overseas, not seriously, and has now been sent home. He got an excellent position in an insurance company of which his uncle is an official, and that has blocked right out as the conquering hero. Everyone is lovely to him because he's been overseas, has been wounded, and is back home.

In these early weeks and months of infancy, milk is the very symbol of life itself. Throughout that critical period, the milkman's daily visits mean just about as much to baby's health and growth as a mother's loving care.

Your milkman never forgets this. No matter how bitter cold the day —no matter how deep-piled the snow-drifts — he knows that many a little customer is counting on him. And that same thought, too, is in the mind of the trucker who fights the blizzards to bring the milk to town—and the dairy worker who watches, eagle-eyed, over the purity and freshness of the milk as it is pasteurized and bottled.

Your dairy is keenly conscious of the trust you place in it—of its own responsibility in keeping that trust. That is why, over the years, today's dependable system of milk distribution has been developed and perfected — a system you may casually take for granted, but a service that's vital to your daily living.

A Relaxing Beauty Pick-up

Mary Ashworth, NBC songstress, has a beautiful complexion

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN YOU are weary unto a state of tears, when everything seems to go wrong in the day, put on your chirpy hat and seek the solacement of a beauty shop. Have a facial treatment. It will pick you up, put you all together again. It will freshen your complexion, soothe your jangling nervous system. You'll go in with dragging heels, come out on your toes.

The operator who knows her business, with gets results, whose appointment book is crowded every day, begins with definite orders by the cash customer.

Relaxing Treatment.

"Fluid, if you please," she will say. "Can't talk, that indulgence keeps the facial muscles tense, and they should not be that way if the manipulations are to be beneficial. Make your body, too. Let your nerves go to sleep, close the doors of your mind. Do a flop, mentally and physically."

At the end of the treatment, the good looks patient will enjoy a delicious sense of refreshment and alertness. Her spirits are renewed. This happy state of affairs is not accidental. Due to the creaming and massaging of the complexion and because, for one sweet, heavenly hour, one has stopped repeating worry, has dropped into a condition of blissful inertia. We're all galloping these days. One wishes there were time to take breath.

Pleasant Thought.

Let's not forget that hard feelings make hard faces, that what goes on under your hair-do comes out on the face. If you brood or worry the eyes will be dull, the countenance clouded. If you can cook up pleasant thoughts, your face will carry a compelling radiance.

Unpleasant emotions of any kind act unfavorably upon the facial tissues under the skin, destroy those tissues as wil la sign of sickness, causing wrinkles to form.

No woman likes to discover that her petals are falling. The next ward against that beauty misfortune is adding a ground-length overskirt, open down the front and attached to a fleshlike belt.

Redingote overskirts were used with plain colored frocks, and a gathered panel made from alternating squares of pale blue and pink georgette served first as an apron front on a black gown and later as a cape.

Another was a boy jacket worn with a short black day-dress was converted into a bolero by removing the lower part which was fastened at the waistline.

BUTCHER SHOP STRIKE

London (CP) — The Wadsworth Food Committee permitted a woman to change her butcher when she said her health couldn't stand the strain of "the unsatisfactory, disgusting, bullying treatment" she got.

Utility Costume Fashion Keynote

London, March 5, (CP) — Dress-transforming gadgets intended to make one dress do the work of two or three were features of a fashion show here.

Bolero's of flower-printed material, particolored apron panels, and long jackets convertible in a moment into a bolero were among the devices shown.

The flowered bolero are intended to be sniffed plain black dresses. One little black day-frock with a matching bolero, on display at the show, became an almost-backless cocktail dress by removing the bolero.

Kingston Vics Score 9-2 Win Over Belleville Jrs. in Second Game and Win Round 14 to 4

Winners Pack Too Much Weight and Stone Almost Invincible in Twine for Victorias

Without fanfare the Belleville juniors passed out of the junior O.H.A. hockey picture at Kingston Saturday night when a goodly crowd saw the Limestone City "Victorias" triumph 9 to 2 over the locals. Kingston now meet Oshawa "Bees" in the second round of the Junior "B" playdowns in the O.H.A. Kingston won the round with Belleville with an aggregate score of 14 to 4.

As for Coach Tools Holway's Belleville "Red Shirts", they did themselves noble in the initial period to carry the play in a futile effort to haul down a three-goal lead tied up by the Victorias in the initial game of the series here. The task was too mountainous and plus be heavy Kingston ice surface the Red Shirts found themselves rallying by five goals at the end of the first period. Kingston added 3 more in the middle session and also netted Belleville's first goal in clearing. The Vics added two more in the last frame as George Reeves combined with Roddy Lyall for a Belleville counter.

Use Help Locals

With Doug Green in the penalty zone for tripping Kingston moved five up and Potts scored for Belleville. Jones added another for Kingston to send out the first period. In the middle session it was Potts and Rod Allen who scored before Allen batted the rubber past Stone in the Kingston net, in closing. Jerry Moher had carried inside and was credited with the goal. Kingston added three more in this period to make the game's count 7-1.

The last period was filled with excitement for the fans as fisticuffs broke out following which a penalty to a major penalty as the aggressor in a fight. Somewhat disturbed with official decisions, not only did Belleville team register their indignation, but Billie Holway drew down a misconduct penalty for his "non canis worth" in a period that gave the fans plenty to exercise their vocal chords.

To the "Ultimate Kids", Billie Holway and Doug Green goes the lion's share of honors although the Belleville line, with Barrett, Moher, Day and the Meagher brothers turning in sterling service in a losing effort. For Kingston Stone stood out on the Vics' pets in the absence of Reeves who was the aggressor or team.

Others who were Bob Allen, Scrutton and the fast-starting Potts were the best. Once again the difference in weight made a vast comparison and took its usual toll in favor of the winners.

The line-ups — Belleville — goal, Fitzpatrick; defence, Green and Holway; centre, Barrett; wings, Al Meagher and Bernie Meagher; subs, Moher, Day, Cressitta, Lyall and Reeves.

Kingston Victorias — goal, Stone; defence, Plumb and Snider; centre, Potts; wings, Allen and J. Allen; subs, Fowler, Scrutton, Stuart, Arnold and Potts.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

York Belting, senior basketball champions of Toronto, injected fireworks into the O.A.B.A. executive proceedings at Hamilton over the weekend by threatening to protest the Playoff game with the Hayes Steel at St. Catharines Wednesday night. Basis for the protest is the presence of a number of American players in the squad of the 1944 Dominion championship.

The Toronto club promised to ask for Canadian Amateur Registration Cards of the Hayes players, and threatened, those without such registration, "will be referred to the B.C.M.P." The counter-argument appeared to be that the players were sufficient to qualify the holders as residents of Canada.

A survey of organized baseball announced at Chicago yesterday, showed a drop in minor and major players in the armed services of about twice as many as now registered on the active list. The active players total is 1,753 men, compared with 2,526 in December, 1943. The new loops have 565 active players and are exempted by 509 in the armed services.

With a six-under-par 66 for a 72 hole total of 266, Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., annexed the richest first prize of $1,000 in the open golf tournament at Jacksonville, Fla. for his sixth win of the winter circuit. Bob Hamilton of Chicago, with 270, was second.

Gunder Haegg, Swedish miler, arrived Thursday in New York from overseas, had a workout Friday and finished last Saturday night in a special five-mile feature at the indoor meet in Madison Square Garden. Jim Rafferty, the winner, ran the distance in the slow time of 4:16.4.

Paul Kann, outstanding racer from North Conway, N.H., won 17 top North American and Canadian ski skiers by racking up a precipitous Mount Delly at Ste. Marguerite, Que., yesterday to take both the slalom and cross-country phases of the International ski races for women.

Condition of Jimmy Conyers, 20-year-old Ottawa figure skater, last night remained "serious" at a hospital in Montreal where he was taken Saturday after the automobile he was driving skidded into a department store window.

Conyers, who was alone in the vehicle at the time of the accident suffered scalp lacerations and a fractured skull.

Spring training for the St. Louis Cardinals opens March 19 at Cairo, Ill., it was announced Saturday by President Sam Breadon of the world champions. He would not say how many players had signed 1945 contracts.

For the third straight year, Gretchen Merrill, 19, of Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts won the U.S. ladies' senior figure skating title at New York, getting the unanimous approval of all five judges. Janette Ahrens of St. Paul was second.

Coach Happy Emms of St. Louis Flyers Saturday night rushed an overtoss to defenceman Vic Lynn out on the ice at Hershey, Pa., as a skate of one of the Hershey Bears tripped his pal, Lynn, early in the period to the dressing room for new equipment.

GALT RED WINGS TROUNCE OSHAWA FOR THIRD TIME

Young Rangers Eliminated Monday and Yakons Even Series With St. Mikes

By The Canadian Press

Two of the three remaining playoff series in O. H. A. Junior "A" hinged into deciding games Monday when Galt Red Wings defeated Oshawa Generals 7-5 at Galt in their third straight appearance while Toronto Young Rangers emerged from the first Hayborn round by blanking Marlboro Athletics 2-0. Young Rangers now face Galt in a best-of-five series, the winning to take on the winner of the St. Catharines-St. Mikes tilt for the Ontario finals which will be a best-of-seven affair.

St. Catharines Falcons broke even on the series with St. Michaels Saturday night when they defeated Toronto contenders 4-3 at the Garden City. Falcons made the second time this year that Falcons have defeated the Collegians in the previous reverse having been the first time for the "Big" league leaders in 18 contests of the scheduled race. Saturday night's result gave them a 3-2 win over the best-of-seven series.

Falcons ran their lead to three straight goals in the first period and added a fourth in the second before St. Mikes began to orient in the final frame. Ted Sloan grabbing both the winning and insurance tally. Falcons were Dager, Delmonte, Peterson and Stewart.

It was three times and out for Oshawa Generals, last year's Dominion champions at Galt when Red Wings went into a 1-0 lead in the first stanza and added the count to 4-0 in the second before the Oshawa range. Generals went down fighting lightweight, but not a determined offensive in the third period lost to the locals.

Curik and Mosseau were double scorers for Galt with Gallagher and star marksman for Oshawa with a pair.

Not until the last period of the all-Toronto setto did Young Rangers get their offensive clicking as two chapters being blanks. Bishop counted for No. 1 against the Marlies and Payne put the Rangers out front for keeps with No. 2 about five minutes from the finish.

New York, March 5—(AP)—Frankie Frisch returns sports car dealer and drum beater who hasn't been idle, but important sports events during the war years, to the old following list as the best hooters he has seen in each class: Heavyweight, Jack Johnson; welterweight, Stanislaus Zbyszko; lightweight, Ad Wolgast; featherweight, Abe Attell; middleweight, Terry McGovern; flyweight, Panama Joe Gans; featherweight, Attell's reasons for picking 'em are plain enough. Frisch says he challenges anybody to make a better group and say he's seen them.

Pat in His Place

Following the recent Jenascola, Fla., open golf tournament, ex-sailor Sammy Snead complained: "I guess I'm the only golfer who ever annexed a shoot golf. Every time myself, Jimmy Demaret or Sammy Byrd would tee up a few feet from the pin, we'd never board a word from the gallery. No applause, no yelling — no nothin'." . . . Byron Nelson couldn't let that pass. "Shucks, my," he explained patiently, "applause isn't supposed to get any applause. That's what you're supposed to do—lay them up there next to the pin."

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

The Night Knee.

The new secretary was recounting her experiences of past employers to the cynic.

"My dentist," she began, and after hearing of five different dentists in seventeen months, you have had a lot of them?" . . .

"Yes," replied the young secretary, "but I think I'm on the last leg now."

Finis.

There was curtains for the Belleville juniors at Kingston Saturday night when they lost 9 to 2 and dropped the series 14 to 4. The local fans were quite satisfied the heftier "Vics" were by far the better team after lamping them here last Thursday. The old adage of "a good leg team is better than a good little team" again was proven, but even in defeat, the Holway-led Belleville kids never at any time admitted the inevitable. They went down fighting, as every opposition in team sports in Canada has found in the hearts of Belleville athletes since time began.

Throughout the season the local juniors have enjoyed one of the hockey seasons since the war began. As a matter of fact the entire "Little Six" loop can label of the same condition. With a war on and hockey fans here have been exceedingly fortunate to have such a hockey loop in their midst. Even in junior hockey sporting conditions do not exist, so we have been truly thankful for in that respect. Maybe another year won't be just as good in that respect.

Here and now credit must be given to Doug Green and Billie Holway, the two-man brain of the locals. With a short exception of the Kingston trip Green and Holway have played the entire game on the Belleville defence ever since Rance Bush's operation. And Holway played in during with a broken nose. The pair has asked no favors and at times had to revert from heavy body checking in order to save themselves for the 60-minute ordeal. "Toss the orchids my way. Up until the time the Vics whipped the locals here on March 1st, the Belleville team hadn't lost a game on home ice since Jan. 1944, something of a record in O.H.A. circles.

As for the Kingston Vics, Max Jackson has gathered together a fine, fast-skating club that should agree carry the name of Kingston far and with respect. Plumb is an especially steady defenseman; for a junior and seemed to have a future in the game. Wallis, Potts and the Allen brothers also have the markings of future stars in their chosen sport and a little more of this goes for Scrutton.

The Whiner

LESSON NO. 622

No use talking now when I may run short of hands to talk about. You should live so long. A pack contains 635,013,559,600 different hands, no two of them exactly alike. See what I mean?

Each deal contains something worthwhile to discuss. So I have some of the whiners I play or receive by mail. From these it is easy to select an example for illustrating the point of the day.

Let's take this easy pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠ K Q 6 5 4
♥ A 8 6 4 3.
♦ 7 5 2
♣ A

♠ 9 3 2
♥ Q 9 7 5
♦ A 9 6 3
♣ K Q 8

Louth has six tricks; two high cards and two short cards in suits. North has four tricks; four high cards and no short cards.

With ten tricks in their pair they should reach a contract of four. How will they show each other the tricks they have? Each raises about one trick in addition to their share.

The basis for an opening bid of one is five tricks. The basis of a responder is two tricks. Thereafter, add a trick for each raise by either player and it shows the number of tricks he has.

South, opens with a bid of one spade, which shows only his basis of five tricks. North responds with two diamonds, a raise over one spade. With his basis of two tricks, north thus shows three.

The second bid by south is two spades. It is not a raise over two diamonds; therefore, it does not yet reveal his sixth trick. He still has that sixth trick for a future raise, if necessary.

North then bids three spades, a raise over two spades. This is where he shows his fourth trick. And south then goes to four spades, a raise over three spades, to bring out his sixth trick.

Perhaps a pair of players would reach that contract without any such simple arithmetic in their minds. But the basic principles of these figures underlie their acts just the same.

If players would stop to add, their bridge might not be so bad.

General Breakup Of Moira River Not Too Far Distant

Its slow winter current visibly swollen by the addition of melted snow, the Moira River is now in full flood stage and is rising rapidly. Its banks, though still confining the waters, are being overtopped in many places by the broken ice which is considerably less than in other years, despite the many nights of zero weather during the winter.

Below the upper bridge water is running under the ice but from there to the bay the river ice is generally solid, although a brief break appears under the lower bridge at Bridge Street, where running water is visible beneath the bridge.

In the rural districts streams and creeks are again showing signs of life as a result of recent mild weather which has appreciably reduced the depth of snow still to be found and are showing clearly in the open fields.

Nazi War Planes Attack England All Day Sunday

London, March 5 (CP)—German war planes with pilots changed Britain last night after a similar attack early Friday morning — the first such blows since the June 18 when the pilotless bum bomb offensive began.

Last night's raids were not as heavy as the morning attacks, which cost the Germans six of their raiding planes.

Dipping low over one east coast town a Luftwaffe pilot unloaded a stick of bombs on the roof of a hotel which burst over the roof of a nurses' residence. The only casualty of a woman attendant who was out by a splinter.

One of the morning Nest raiders penetrated to the London area. The fact that only a few bombers were involved, considered large, hit at widely separated places showed the extent of the attack.

The attacks killed and injured a number of persons, and caused considerable damage to property.

The planes roared down to roof-top level, machine-gunning streets of dwellings and pedestrians.

The Germans also continued to send their V-missiles into Southeast England, the Air Ministry announced a Damage and casualties were reported.

Danish Underground Works Effectively

Allied Supreme Headquarters, March 5 — (AP) — A special communique today said the Danish underground was attacking German troop movements so effectively that "the whole train is liable to reach Germany without having been declared.

"This action by Danish saboteurs is an effective contribution to current military operations on both the western and eastern front," the communique said.

The troop movements presumably were related to the withdrawal of German divisions from Norway for defence of Germany.

Cornwall Flyers Reverse Decision

Montreal, March 5 — (CP)—Cornwall Flyers reversed the decision on Lachine Rapides Sunday for a 7-5 victory that left the Rapides still leading their Intermediate Senior Hockey League playoff semi-finals by a 5-4 count in the best-of-seven affair.

Lachine had taken a 7-6 decision at Cornwall Saturday night, but they ran into a determined bunch of Flyers Sunday and couldn't quite tag the victory that would have given them an overwhelming edge in the series.

Bobby Burr was the big gun for the winners with three goals, including two in the final period that really decided the issue. Flyers piled up a five-goal lead by the middle of the third, then only goal of the first period and four goals in the rapid fashion in the second. Flyers had a chance to tie the score before the second was over, however, to cut the Cornwall lead to 5-4.

Burr came through with two counters in the third frame to make the Cornwall margin final, because a final Lachine tally near the end.

DETERMINED RESISTANCE

Paris, March 5 — (AP) — First Canadian Army troops are meeting "determined resistance" in the area of Xanten, German anchor position on the north bank of the western front, but Allied forces elsewhere have made "good progress," headquarters announced today.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE STARGARD

London, March 5 — (CP) — The Russians have captured Stargard, eastern fortress of Stettin, the Berlin radio said today.

Little Changes In Team's Chances For Playoffs

Cleveland Barons and the Buffalo Bisons Continue to Hold Lead in Their Divisions

(By The Canadian Press)
Week-end games in the American Hockey League ended with little change in the team's chances for the play-off berths.

Cleveland Barons, western division leaders, strengthened their hold on first place when they shut out Capitals 8-0 last night at Indianapolis, Saturday night, on their home ice, they had already defeated Capitals 6-2.

Hicks, eastern division leaders, nipped Hershey Bears 2-1 last night on their home ice at Buffalo, N.Y., Saturday night, they had ended in a 3-3 draw game at Pittsburgh with Hornets.

Providence Reds shellacked Pittsburgh Hornets 6-1 last night at Providence, R.I. while Saturday night Providence collier-defenders, St. Louis Flyers, were defeated by Hershey Bears on their home ice.

The Bisons-Reds encounter at Buffalo last night was marred by a serious injury suffered by Don Webster, forward, recently traded to the Bears by the Bisons. The game itself was a pounding duel between Legs Fraser, new Bison star, and Nick Damore, Harrisburg, Pa., steel plant worker.

Roger Gagne, Jacques Lavoie and George Bellemarre were the high scorers for Reds when they beat Pittsburgh Hornets at Providence last night.

The Pros. Session-Earl Bartholome team did much Saturday night to down the Carleton Club at Cleveland, Rowe-Hall Tod Pollrai, helped by Bill Summers' brothers, did their best in vain to defeat Indianapolis Capitals.

Vernon Whitney Jones was the outstanding marksman for Buffalo Bisons in their Saturday night win when Tony Hemmerling scored two of Hornets' three goals.

AT THE BELLE

Irish Eyes Are Smiling

Guns and from the night of the fun-filled shenanigans on the screen of the Belle Theatre Saturday, it's a broth of a time local movie fans will be having with Damon Runyon's "Irish Eyes Are Smiling." The new Technicolor musical starring Monty Woolley, June Haver and Dick Haymes is true four-leaf entertainment from start to finish.

By this time, it's common knowledge that when 20th Century-Fox dips into the sweet nostalgia of the past, it lacks out giant scoops of lushly flavored fun, peppered with sentiment, blended with wonderful music, and all lavishly served up in gorgeous settings. "Irish Eyes Are Smiling" is no exception. It stands out as the most glittering screen fare of the season.

The picture involves about the life of Ernest R. Ball, America's greatest composer of sentimental ballads. Producer Darryl Zanuck and Director Gregory Ratoff have taken rich advantage of the riches in color and brilliant times in which Ball lived, to present a stirring saga. Broadway at its gayest — the setting for this fast-moving romance of boy-meets-girl, boy-loses-hearts and the flaming melodies that have always typified American life passed.

Monty Woolley is cast as the famous meat-about-town, Edgar Bixley, former gold mine operator, horse owner, snake oil salesman and get-rich-quick specialist who walks backwards into the life and romance of Mary "Irish" O'Brien and Ernest Ball. The part is tailor-made to fit Monty. Woolley and he plays it to the hilt in one of the most enjoyable performances of the year. Lovely June Haver, who scored a signal success in "Home In Indiana," comes into her own in "Irish Eyes Are Smiling." June is seen as Mary "Irish" O'Brien who can deliver a sweet note or a telling sock in the eye with equal facility. That Haver girl has everything it takes for top-of-the-screen stardom, and if this film is any indication, she has already arrived.

The Canadian Bell Foreverall, a Terrytoon Colortoon Cartoon "Rise 'em Toe" and a new "March of Time" presentation "Americans All" precede the feature attraction.

Americans Close in on Cologne, One of Greatest Prizes of War

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

American troops of making a major stand in the Cologne plain has been killed by the steam-roller Allied advance, but Field Marshal Von Rundstedt continues to fight a grim rear-guard action as several main avenues of escape.

The German commander is in the midst of one of the most dangerous operations war can produce—retreat across a great river under attack. It's a task that would test the military genius of any age, and it must be said for Rundstedt (who is one of Hitler's best generals) that he has been doing a workmanlike job. His undoubted capabilities add to the credit of Gen. Eisenhower and his captains in their magnificent offensive.

Von Rundstedt's last-ditch resistance west of the Rhine is for two purposes. First, of course, he is protecting the withdrawal of his forces and such of his equipment and supplies as he can rescue. Secondly, he is continuing to carry out the policy of his master to wage delaying actions everywhere so long as possible.

It's vastly important to Germany now to prevent Allied crossing of the Rhine to the last minute, for just east of the river lies the Ruhr the last great industrial area left in the country. There it is food and drink for the German military machine. Even now Eisenhower has his big guns pumping high explosives across the Rhine into the

They crossed the bridge and on the eastern shore moved along a wide, smooth highway for a few miles, turned left and mounted an earth road that wound up to the hills. Scattered cottages, hidden among oaks and eucalyptus, faced the road here and there. Kelly's place was at the head of a small tree-lined canyon, and consisted of the cottage, or perhaps three rooms, a large white barn, various sheds and fences that suggested that the place had once been a small farm. There was an arbor covered with young grape vines, sheltering a long table and two benches, young berry bushes just in leaf, a languishing little garden whose neglected rose and geranium bushes were choked with last season's dried grass and some apple and apricot trees getting ready to bloom.

Cherry was under the spell of the peace of Kelly Coate's place, its simplicity. Its scanty about before she had gotten out of the car; she had never dreamed of anything so informal, so comfortable, so complete. There was a blackened little brick grill under a spreading tree; there was a bowl of apples mixed with bananas and oranges, a round big brown onion in the centre of the table; there were smaller bowls of blue and red brown pottery, a copper frying pan or two, wooden spoons and some checked linen towels.

They were all hungry; they fell upon preparations for luncheon together. All this went on in the small kitchen, for a black wind had blown up from the south and it was too chilly and overcast out of doors for the arbor to be the dining room, much to Kelly's disappointment. He was nervously eager that everything should be right. The women puttered about finding the furnishings, drawing a card table to the fire, asking directions when he brought in great armfuls of wood and crashed them on the hearth. Cherry had not seen him in this mood before, but she understood it. This was Pran's first visit to Topcote, as it was here, and he was all anxiety that Pran's impression should be a good one.

They were very much in love, Kelly and Pran; Cherry could see that. Or at least Kelly was, perhaps Pran was dazzled. Sometimes Cherry could not be sure, but this was evidently a game of which she knew very little.

After lunch he begged them to leave the table discreet just as it was because he could not wait another moment to show them his paintings, and they went to the big barn studio and while Kelly dragged out canvas after canvas Pran and Cherry looked and commented. Neither one assumed any knowledge of his art, but he accepted their criticisms gratefully and pointed out details of technique with no thought that he might be leaving his audience somewhat behind him.

Presently Pran drifted to the great north window that had been cut down to the floor, and stood looking dubiously between the house-span curtains at the slow steadily falling rain. Kelly came over to stand beside her, and after a moment Cherry followed to the house thrilled by the mere nearness of their admiration and realizing what this moment almost might mean to them. For she had not been blind and deaf to the apparently casual phrases and glances that had been sprinkled through the luncheon talk; she was not unaware of the shrewd look Cherish gave Jules over heard Pran at a moment when he thought himself unobserved in the kitchen, answer some remark of Kelly's with a pathetic shadow in her voice that made Cherry sick at heart for it. She knew that Pran was not all right in any sense of the word, and then, another second: "No, but I did promise Kelly, and I'm breaking my promise."

Cherry had heard no more, and what she did hear had not surprised her. She had surmised from a quick, open remark or two made in the car that Judge Marshbanks had asked his wife not to see Kelly, and that the two had met by chance and were making a discovery that might have been extremely uncomfortable for them both.

And when she found herself alone in the kitchen, she began to feel a certain shame in the eager part in the part she was playing in the affair. She felt ashamed for them and for herself.

When the kitchen clock said quarter to four, she went back to the barn. Pran and Kelly were still standing at the window looking out at the rain that was mingling with an early dusk.

It was raining steadily again when they went out on the open car. Pran had refused Kelly's suggestion that they telephone for a taxicab, and said, "We're late now! We'll be home in twenty minutes; let's make a dash for it!"

The women were bundled into any shawls with bandannas tied over their heads, and they packed themselves into the wide seat and Kelly tucked them close over them. A quarter of a mile down the hill there was had turn and Cherry felt the horrible sensation of wheels skidding, and instantly they were sliding sideways. Kelly's engine's nose stuck into a dripping bank.

When repeated efforts had proved that the car would not move with its load, Cherry and Pran got out and stood still laughing helplessly, under their umbrella.

"Don't hurry. I'm just as good as divorced now," Pran's voice with its poignant note of laughter and tears said calmly.

"This'll only take a minute," Kelly struggled valiantly for fully two minutes, his arms wrenching at the steering wheel, his face red. "Damn it!" he muttered under his breath, as the wheels spun around and the car sank deeper into the soft wet earth.

"We'd better go back, I think, and telephone for a taxi," Pran suggested.

"Lord, I'm sorry about this," the man said apologetically. "The old car is not to be blamed before!"

Their arms linked, slipping and laughing and pulling one another back to balance, they started up the road, with a hard pull, and when they reached the house Pran was with a sort of hysteria of relief that the women shed their outer garments and crouched close to the revived fire. Delicious warmth began to creep through their shivering bones; Kelly lighted lamp, mixed them cocktails and that started the blood moving again. The clock ticked toward a half five.

Beaulalio could supply no taxi but San Francisco obligingly offered to send one.

While they waited Cherry telephoned Emma; she had come with friends to Beaulalio; they were delayed by the storm; they would be home in an hour; please tell Mrs. Porter that she was not to worry. She answered that the old lady had felt ill after Cherry's going and was in bed, so that Cherry need not hurry, this tremendously relieved cherry's mind.

Pran was restless and uneasy and Kelly miserably aware of it. His happy day was having the worst possible conclusion; he had long exhausted apology and encouragement, and could only settle down with his guests at the fire and make the best of a bad job.

It seemed a very long time before the honk of a taxi was heard outside, and Cherry insisted that Kelly should not come with them; they would surely need nights and were off.

"Cherry," Pran said then, calling her by her name for the first time,

Security Set-Up Might Raise Some Touchy Issues

London, March 5 — (AP)—Britons saw a possibility today the Inter-American security set-up in Mexico City might create touchy issues at the San Francisco Conference.

Asserting the Act of Chapultepec may prove an awkward precedent, the Manchester Guardian said: "Admirable though the (the Mexico City) decision is in principle, one cannot help feeling that it is rather more than a forerunner of San Francisco."

Raising the question of the relation between regional agreements and the general world organization, the newspaper asked if the Mexico City decision ruled out intervention by the Security Council in the Western Hemisphere.

The Act of Chapultepec, unanimously adopted by a joint session of publics at Mexico City Saturday, guaranteed Western Hemisphere frontiers and an independence during the war and provides for a lasting treaty afterward.

It obligates each American republic to contribute to the defense against any aggression in the hemisphere or invasion from beyond the seas.

GIVEN TWELVE YEARS

London, March 5 (CP)—Gerald Percy Sandys Hewitt, 44, an Englishman who broadcast for the Germans during the occupation of France, was sentenced today to 12 years in prison for acts likely to assist the enemy.

On Wets Front

London, March 5 —(CP Cable)— A Canadian colonel was the subject of a story in London newspapers today.

He was a hard-boiled companion he was shown approaching a farmhouse at his front, minus his pants. He got soaked by a German river floods but, as the Daily Mirror said in its caption, "that did not dry up his enthusiasm . . . He came on a ruined farmhouse and off came his trousers. While they dry he carries on in his underwear."

The Stars and Stripes, American Army daily, titled the picture: "On the Wets Front."

For security and other reasons, the colonel's identity was unidentified. Probably he always will.

$51 Million Subway Plan Is Proposed

Toronto, March 5 — Plans for a $51 million rapid transit system for Toronto, which would include high-speed subway lines running north along Yonge and Queen Sts., and east and west on Bloor St., and other system on the continent with the exception of Montreal, were made public today by officials of the Toronto Transportation Commission. After three years of steady planning in which transportation engineers and experts from United States have been called in to work with T.T.C. engineers, and in which two preliminary projects were considered and rejected, the T.T.C. has come out with a revised plan which includes principally:

Construction of a subway and depressed track, open-cut line up Yonge St. from the Union Station to Eglinton Ave., in the north.

Electrification of the city belt line, connecting the city along Queen St., running through Trinity Park in the west to Gerrard St., and Bloor St. in the east.

Over and above these improvements will be necessary a general revision and rehabilitation of existing surface lines, the replacement of all old-type vehicles with modern streamlined units or trolley buses and a general extension of bus lines.

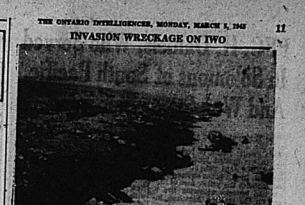
INVASION WRECKAGE ON IWO



Pictured is a section of the beach where U. S. Marines stormed ashore on Iwo as it appeared two days after D-Day. Wrckage of our landing craft along the shore gives some idea of the stiff opposition put up by the Japs while defending the island.

All United Nations Excepting Poland Asked to Parley

Washington, March 5, (AP)—The United States Government announced today that all United Nations except Poland are being asked to attend the World Security Conference at San Francisco.

If all accept, the result of this will mean an attendance of forty governments.

By a last-minute hitch France refused to join Britain in approving the conference. This leaves sponsorship to Britain, the United States, Russia and China.

France, it was announced, said has agreed to participate in the conference but felt that, partly because she had not signed the work of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals, she could not yet join in sponsoring the invitations.

The voting procedure agreed on by Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Premier Stalin at Yalta to fill the last big gap in the Dumbarton Oaks plan also was announced.

In substance it provides that a small nation may have the right to bring charges against a great power and get them heard by the proposed World Security Council even though the great power itself may object.

However, on any vote to decide that a great power has threatened the peace, or to take action against that power, each of the great powers would have, in effect, a veto.

Voting Proposals

The voting proposal requires that a majority of the council should always be seven members. Since there are six and only five great powers on the council this means that even on matters considered at least one great power would have to vote affirmatively.

The text of the voting procedure was made public in the text of the invitation itself. From this statement said the four great powers were asked by the 39 United Nations signatory to the San Francisco meeting "to prepare a charter for a general international organization for the maintenance of international peace and security."

The inviting powers also suggested "that the conference consider as affording a basis for such a charter the proposals for the establishment of a general international organization which were made public last October as the result of the Dumbarton Oaks Conference and which have been supplemented by the voting procedure."

There was no direct comment on the Russian attitude from official circles. Officials here expressed the hope that the new Polish "provisional government of national unity" to which the "Big Three" proposed at Yalta may be created and recognized in time for an invitation to be sent.

In that case there will be 46 countries at San Francisco.

MONTY'S MOTHER WANTS MONTY TO WIND UP WAR. BY MARCH 31ST

London, March 5 —(CP)— Field Marshal Montgomery, always an obedient son, has been told to wind up the European war by March 31. Lady Montgomery, mother of "Monty," has predicted that the war will be over by that date, the Evening Standard said in a copyrighted story.

And she says she has written to the Field Marshal to make sure her forecast is fulfilled.

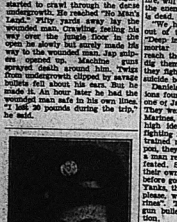
PFC. H. Daniels, Who Served In Solomons of South Pacific, And Won Silver Star is in City

The Yank patrol had ventured far into the matted jungle in front of Guam the Japs were strongly entrenched. In all three strong points and fishholes the yellow men of Nippon had brought withering fire to bear on the American infantry.

A blast of machine gun fire caught the patrol leader across the chest and he crumpled to the jungle floor seriously wounded.

From the American lines hidden in shell-smashed pill boxes and trees sniper bearers watched the patrol. They saw the leader slump down, machine gun bullets in his body.

Then a lone khaki-clad figure started to crawl through the dense undergrowth. He reached "No Man's Land." Fifty yards away lay the wounded man. Crawling, feeling his way over the jungle floor in the open he slowly but surely made his way to the wounded man. Jap snipers opened up. Machine guns sprayed death around him. Apes from undergrowth clipped by savage bullets fell down into the fray he made it. An hour later he had the wounded man safe in his own lines. "I lost 30 pounds during the trip," he said.



Pfc. H. Daniels

Pinned Silver Star On.

And a few weeks later, General A. Patchett, United States Army proudly pinned the United States Silver Star on the breast of Private First Class Horace Daniels, 24-year-old stretcher bearer, and a native son of Belleville.

The 26-year-old United States soldier, after serving three years in the South Pacific and four years in the army in home on a well deserved furlough, and is spending a 30-day holiday here with schoolday friends and other acquaintances in the city.

On his breast three gleams bright the Silver Star, third highest military decoration in the United States, the ribbons of the good conduct medal, the Asiatic Pacific campaign and the American Defence Medals.

With his two brothers, Archie, a Pfc. in the United States Army, and Jim, now a flight sergeant in the R.C.A.F., somewhere in England, young Daniels first saw the light of day in this city. A few years ago his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Daniels, moved to the United States. Both died during their sons' absence in the various theatres of war.

Refused Commission.

Blood, and the comradeship of his buddies under fire played a strongest element than the silver bars of a commissioned officer. Horace was recommended for his commission; but he refused. "My brother Archie, who is now in the United States on a sick furlough, and I enlisted together," he said. "We served three years in the South Pacific together, saw our buddies die, and got them home—and I belong to the best outfit in the world that when I went back to be." He expects to be sent back

Eyewitnesses of Wreck Emphasize Lack of Panic Among Passengers

London, Ont., March 3 — (CP) — and one a.m.

Eyewitness accounts of the train wreck at Zorra, Ont., early today in which nine persons of a westbound Canadian Pacific Railways passenger train were derailed as a result of a broken rail, emphasized lack of panic on the part of passengers, 60 of whom were injured.

"It was very quiet," said Mr. W. L. Schenck of Chicago. "No one cried or called for help."

Mrs. Schenck, who told her story of the derailment in an interview here, received no injuries.

She said she was sitting today at the time of the wreck, sitting in the second coach from the locomotive.

"I was thrown to the left to see when I woke up was water. The seats were down and there seemed to be fumes of some kind that had a dulling effect."

Paul Sobbit of Detroit, said he didn't realize where he was until he found himself walking around in the snow outside the train.

"How I got out of that car I don't know," he told reporters.

He was in the first coach and suffered lacerations to face, head

"It's a fine way to start a furlough," said James Turner of Windsor, Ont., who was on his way home from duties with the Royal Canadian Navy on the east coast. He was in the first coach and received minor head injuries.

Norman McKenzie of Galt, plunged into left hand through the window when he was thrown against the side of the car after the derailment. He suffered lacerations of hands and feet.

"Some people landed on top of me," he said. "But I managed to wiggle out and we lighted matches and went to work helping people out of the car."

He said the lights went out when the cars were derailed.

The seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Mendell of Windsor, didn't get as far as the cars crashed, her parents said.

"She was asleep," Mr. Mendell told reporters. "When the crash went off the track my wife was thrown from the seat and hurt her head but my little girl was all right."

Canadian Military Government Staff Functioning in Germany

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army in Germany, March 5. (CP Cable) — The Canadian military government staff of the 1st Canadian Army has begun functioning in Germany, dealing with the problem of what to do with German civilians in the conquered lower Rhineland area.

The immediate policy adopted is that civilians back on the land to raise a crop and prevent civilian food shortages which would be a further burden on military operations. Farmers were being sent back to their farms, along with inhabitants of wrecked towns as repopulation of rural areas, with country and urban people is considered essential.

At present civilians are living off their own food stores and the military government has supplied no food. It would be provided if necessary under the policy laid down but the staff wants to make sure it will not be necessary by raising good crops this year.

This military government organization is headed by Brig. Chad Weld of Toronto, and Col. J. J. Hurley of Brantford, Ont., is chief of organization, operating with forward tactical formations.

The Canadians are responsible for the combined towns of Kleve, Uedem, Calcar, and neighboring areas. In each case the local German administration is going to be set up again as soon as possible. A good many minor government officials are among civilians still in those areas.

The German administration, however, will be under strict control.

Prediction at Peak.

War production now is at its peak, said Mr. Howe, and dollar value this year will return to about $9,000,000,000. That is about 55 per cent reduction in war orders, after the end of the European war would bring dollar value of production down to about $5,000,000,000.

This cut-back, a reduction in over-all production and industrial output, is in line with what is planned for the United States and the United Kingdom and based on estimates prepared by the joint agencies dealing with economic phases of the war.

It will not likely mean a discontinuance of any important lines of production, but will be spread across the board and will affect production of jeeps, quantities in cost items.

The manpower situation this summer will be tighter than ever, Mr. Howe predicted. As re%fo%ny of production facilities can be released from war uses they can be turned over to production for domestic as well.

"In stage two we look for no problem of unemployment," he said. "We think our manpower will be fully engaged without any need for relief camps."

The number of workers in war industries, he said, had been reduced from 1,000,000 to 750,000, but despite this reduction in the war plants were producing more equipment than ever.

'Dagger' Division Only Eighteen Miles From Mandalay

On the Irrawaddy Front, March 5 —(Reuters)— Troops of the 19th Indian "Dagger" Division, commanded by Maj.-Gen. Wyndford Rees, pushing rapidly south along the east bank of the Irrawaddy river, today had reached a point 18 miles north of Mandalay, closer than any other division.

They were meeting only disorganized opposition.

Thirty miles west of Mandalay, the British 2nd Division had consolidated its new bridgehead in the Ngazun area. And after fierce fighting, had seized the village of Ngasin. This bridgehead, the second one across the Irrawaddy west of Burma's second city, was established Feb. 24.

In the Myinmu bridgehead two villages, hitherto strongly held by the Japanese, were occupied by Allied troops after a heavy air blow.

North of Mandalay, in the Singu bridgehead, troops of the 19th Indian Division had taken a position on the island of Kyphin 44 river miles north of Mandalay.

Southeast of Kyphin they had captured the villages of Schwegondaing and Shwepyi.

Reds Closing on Stettin Reach Oder River

Army Units Thrust Within 15 Miles Of Huge U-Boat Base

Zhukov's Army Advancing Steadily Beyond Stargard

London, March 6 —(CP)— Russian troops closing on Stettin have reached the Oder near Greifenhagen, 17 miles south of the port, a Moscow dispatch said today. The Germans described the Soviets had thrust to within 15 miles of Stettin Bay and 35 of the U-boat base of Swinemunde.

Red army artillery was shelling Stettin, the port of Berlin at the Oder's mouth, the dispatch said.

The new drive divides into two main channels at Greifenhagen.

The German high command said Marshal Gregory Zhukov's 1st White Russian Army was advancing westward on a 40-mile front from Stargard to Greifenberg, the latter town 14 miles from the Baltic coast and 17 northeast of captured Naugard.

It said a Zhukov spearhead had been stopped northeast of Greifenberg at a point 13 miles from Stettin Bay. Gollnow, northwest of Stargard and southwest of Naugard, both captured yesterday.

Battle of Pyrik.

The Berlin radio asserted Zhukov had massed his infantry and tank armies on the central sector for a push on Berlin.

Moscow dispatches said Zhukov's 1st White Russian Army was advancing steadily beyond Stargard 19 miles east of Stettin, and Naugard, 35 miles north of Stargard, and tightening his flank on the Baltic port in preparation for a new push on Berlin.

The Zhukov army reported new breaches by the 2nd White Russian Army pushing up the Polish Corridor from the Konitz and Gdynia and Danzig.

Zhukov already had turned the heavy guns, some recently taken from the enemy, on the eastern suburbs of Stettin.

Radio Berlin said:

Moscow) March 6 (AP)—Fastcharging Russian tanks and cavalry swept into the Oder's Greifenhagen today in 4 threat to outflank Stettin and seize that important German naval base in preparation for further development of Berlin from the north.

Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov, commander of the White Russian army, already had turned heavy guns, some only recently captured from the enemy, against the eastern suburbs of Stettin. At the same time his mobile vanguard steadily rolled up the German defenses guarding the Oder north of Stettin, which was said to be driving steadily forward from Stargard and Naugard, seized yesterday 19 and 35 miles respectively east of Stettin and Naugard 22 miles north of Stargard.

As Zhukov thus got set for a knockout blow against Stettin, capture of which would be a strategic prize, Marshal K. K. Rokossovsky's 2nd White Russian army on the northeast slashed deeper into the coastal strip of Pomerania between Danzig and Koslin.

Battle Under Way.

The battle for Stettin seemed virtually under way, although Zhukov's heavy blow at the moment apparently were directed toward Gollnow and Cammin, on the last main road and railway to the seaport.

The sprawling factories of Stettin, Berlin's port, are spread out on both sides of the Oder at the Baltic west corner of Dammscher Lake. Gollnow is located northeast at the body of water. Cammin is only 3 miles from the Baltic at the eastern arm of the Oder Lagoon.

East of Cammin the big seaboard towns of Treptow and Greifenberg lead the prospects of immediate isolation as the Russians struck swiftly ahead.

Stettin said Kolberg already was being stormed.)

Counter Blows Unimpressive

Field Marshal Keitel said German counter-attacks organized in the Stettin area were unimpressive in quantity and a smattering of veteran armored units were on an unimpressive scale.

Zhukov's troops struck out for Altdamm, 4 east bank Oder River suburb of Stettin, after capturing Stargard in a 5-feet battle that was officially declared to have cost the Germans 4,000 killed.

The Zhukov and Rokossovsky thrusts seized a total of 230 towns and villages yesterday. Gains averaged 15 miles. The city limit forcing large numbers of the enemy against the Baltic coast, Rokossovsky's drive to the west already isolated groups one by one.

Rokossovsky captured eight towns in Poland east of Pomerania on the approaches to Danzig and Gdynia, Polish ports on the Baltic. Five communities fell in East Prussia in the continuing battle for Koenigsberg.

Sharp Attack Made on C.C.F. By Solon Low

Declared There Was "No More Vicious Political Party in Canada"

By The Canadian Press

Forestry, labor relations, taxes and other highlighted attacks yesterday in five Legislatures from Ontario to British Columbia. The Quebec and Maritime Houses did not sit.

A sharp attack on the C. C. F. was heard in the Alberta House at Edmonton when Solon Low, minister without portfolio in the Social Credit government, declared there was "no more vicious political party in Canada than the C.C.F."

Speaking in the Throne Speech debate in the Alberta House, Mr. Low, who is Premier Aberhart of the Social Credit Association of Canada, said he firmly believed the C.C.F. intended to socialize the land. He challenged C.C.F. members to explain their views on various aspects of the party platform as set forth in pamphlets and books.

Elmer Roper, Alberta, leader of the C.C.F., declared that the so-called "Social Credit for Canada" remained a good, broad statement of the C.C.F. policy.

Forestry came up in the British Columbia House from Hon. E. T. Kenny, Minister of Labor, said at Victoria that the government would increase the annual $500,000 vote for forest protection by $150,000. With 126,000,000 acres of forest land, he said British Columbia had the biggest problem in fire protection in North America.

Amendment Defeated.

In the Saskatchewan Legislature at Regina, A. T. Proctor (Liberal-Prince Albert) said Industrial Labor Relations Board had greater power than the Supreme Court of Canada. The Board had no greater power than boards set up by Canada, including the National War Labor Board. He said there was no appeal from the National Board findings.

GORDON PREDICTS SUPPLY SHORTAGE WILL CONTINUE

Canadians Face The Prospects of Taking 'Few More Notches In Their Belts'

Toronto, March 6 — (CP) — Canadians face the prospect of taking in "a few more notches in their belts" to meet home front supply shortages which will not end until sometime after fighting ceases, but there is no reason for "alarm or worry," Donald Gordon, Prices Board chairman said today.

In an address prepared for delivery to the Women's Canadian Club, Mr. Gordon reviewed methods employed by the Board to distribute supplies equitably. The address was broadcast on a CBC national hook-up.

A similar address was delivered in Montreal to the Junior Board of Trade by Mr. Gordon.

Congratulated

Mr. Gordon expressed appreciation to Canadian women for their support in price control and urged them to give leadership in a "rational consciousness of the evils of hoarding and panic buying — conditions which created shortages for which rationing was no panacea.

There were those who, faced by temporary shortages, demanded increased control and rationing at once, but considering the burdens it would place on the trade and the inconveniences it would bring to the public,

"The Prices Board usually manages to steer a middle course between these two extremes," Mr. Gordon said. "We have to have as much control and rationing as the civilian economy to see that at least the essential items needed for plain, ordinary living are available in sufficient quantities to meet minimum needs. But non-the less equally important duty not to increase the profits or reputation that isn't absolutely necessary."

EAT MORE BEEF

Winnipeg, March 6 — (CP) — Agriculture Minister Gardiner in a statement here yesterday announced that a large reduction in Canadian consumption of beef and veal would necessary if Canada is to fill British Government's pledged sales and there will be no "meatless day" or "meatless week" but "there will be less pork, he said.

NAPANEE MAN DROWNED

Napanee, March 6 — (CP) — Clarence Hall, 70, was drowned yesterday when the truck he was driving went through the ice 200 yards from shore on the Bay of Quinte when enroute to Amherst Island. He was alone. Hugh Perry of Thomas Cochrane, scrambled to safety.

Concentrated Daylight Attack Made on Oil Refinery at Salzbergen

London, March 6 (CP)—R.A.F. heavy bombers staged a highly-concentrated attack in daylight today on the Salzbergen oil refinery 27 miles northwest of Muenster in a follow-up to their 2,100-bomber assault last night on Chemnitz, Berlin and three other cities.

It was the 32nd consecutive day of Allied air blows.

The night assault in which Canadian heavies participated, concentrated on chemnitz, hit during Monday by 250 United States bombers. Other formations hit synthetic oil plants at Bohlen near Leipzig, and targets at Magdeburg and Oschersleben.

Mosquitoes also struck again, bombed Berlin, Thirty-three planes were missing from this night's fleet, seven of them Canadian, but some may have landed on continental bases. Canadian pilots back from the Chemnitz operation said adverse weather and enemy fighter opposition marked the raid.

A Great Hazard.

FO. Martin Seale, a Moose Squadron navigator from Edmonton, said ice forming on the wings of the high-flying bombers formed a great hazard.

LABOR MOBILITY MAKES POSSIBLE ALL-OUT EFFORT

Assistance Provided Workers When Transferred to Other Districts

By JACK WILLIAMS
(CP Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 6 — (CP) — A war-developed technique of shifting workers to jobs on a mass scale has given Canada's labor force a new strength.

Groups of girls from the prairies have been shifted to munitions plants in Ontario and Quebec, Quebec loggers have helped to harvest Ontario sugar beet crops, men from central Canada have been transferred to shipyards jobs on both coasts and farmers of eastern and western Canada have helped each other out at times when help was most needed.

Arthur MacKinnon, director of National Selective Service, who has been in charge of the program sums up the result in a few words—it means "Such success as we have had in any line of effort has resulted from making labor mobile."

67,700 From One Zone to Another

Indicative of those who have moved or a more or less permanent basis is the report of Selective Service placements for 1944 which shows that 67,700 workers were transferred from one Selective Office zone to another. The 1943 figure was higher at 82,100.

In addition, large numbers of workers have moved temporarily when they became aware that labor was needed in other districts.

Provision is made in government regulations for the transfer of workers transferred to other districts. Currently the Labor Department is planning to move possibly 1,000 men employed Winnipeg workers to Ontario industrial centres where there are labor shortages. These workers will have their fares paid to the new job and, providing they remain on the job six months, will receive their fare home when they decide to return.

Wage Differentials Taken Into Account

Should the job to which they are directed end before the six-month period they are either placed in comparable employment in the locality or paid their fare home.

In addition, for projects in which labor needs are acute, compensation may be paid for make up wage differentials and added living costs for married men who have to live away from home. Up to $7.50 a week may be paid to make up the difference between wages paid for the new job and those paid in the area from which the worker came. A similar amount may be provided to meet added living costs.

The effect of this method of making the most efficient use of the Canadian working force has been apparent in agriculture. With 300,000 fewer workers than in 1939 Canadian farms are turning out record crops.

Germans Organizing Defences on East Bank of Rhine for Battle of River

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the 1st. Canadian Army on the Rhine, March 6 (C.P. Cable) —The Germans are organizing defences on the east bank of the Rhine and are getting bank guns into position for the battle for the Rhine, which is looming large for the shattered Siegfried line positions on the west bank of the river.

Enemy shelling along the river line was increasing today. Under cover of mist and low clouds the enemy pressed 88 mm. guns up to the Rhine area during the last 24 hours and moved them about up roads in the Canadian Army sector.

Once the artillery now supporting the German troops in the last phase of the fighting in the Reichswald forest and Goch-Weset bulge can be withdrawn, the enemy's defensive work will certainly reduce this enemy fire.

Expect Improved Weather.

Improved weather is expected to improve from now on and the Allied air forces will be able to launch a blitz attack on the enemy's rear as a prelude to the river crossings.

Elimination of the enemy bulge in the north side of the Rhine is continuing slowly and methodically. Dr. Goch lies approximately 15 miles wide, extending with its point just north of Xanten to Orsoy on the Rhine. The bulge's depth varies in depth with its maximum 10 miles.

DIPLOMATS SEE FRANCE HEADED FOR NEW ROLE

May Become Rallying Point for Smaller Countries Seeking To Amend World Plan

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(AP Staff Writer)

Washington, March 5.—(AP)—France may become a rallying point for smaller countries seeking to make major changes in the Dumbarton Oaks plan for world organization; many diplomatic authorities regard this as the most significant development likely to result from the failure of Prime Minister Charles de Gaulle's government to join with United Britain, the United States, Russia and China in the invitations to the April 25 San Francisco conference.

It already is apparent there will be considerable controversy at the conference over the powers of the small and middle-sized countries in relation to the great nations which would have a dominating position in the proposed World Security Council.

At the moment France is in a middle ground position. The de Gaulle government already has declared it is as much as one of the Big Five permanent members of the Council. Yet it specifically declined to submit itself to the Dumbarton Oaks plan by declining to sponsor invitations to the San Francisco meeting, thereby in a measure detaching itself from the Anglo-American - Soviet - Chinese lineup, Paul Boncour said.

The full story of why France did not accept the role she is sponsoring powers remains to be told officially. But information available here indicated the following sequence of events:

China and France, although not present at Yalta, were invited to subscribe to this invitation. China, taking him in on the Dumbarton Oaks talks last fall, readily agreed. France, on the other hand, asked that a reservation be written into the invitation. So this France sought to gain specific assurances she could propose any amendments at the conference.

Last week Foreign Minister Bidault was summoned suddenly to London with Foreign Secretary Eden.

Agree to Modification.

As a result the British and United States governments agreed to modification of the invitation. Whether the French then suggested another change is not clear. At any rate, the invitation as finally sent is understood to have been delayed only a few days.

Finally, Moscow vetoed the modification. Then de Gaulle announced he had elapsed the other governments ought to go ahead.

Why Russia ultimately declined to agree to the French reservations, and thus to join in the invitation, is not known. There have been some indications, however, that Russia feels that Gen. De Gaulle was seeking to exercise power beyond that the Russian leader thinks he actually possesses in terms of real force devoted to defeating the enemy.

German Defenders Forced Back To Heart of City

Three Divisions Advancing Against Light Opposition

(By JAMES M. LONG)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, March 6 — (AP)—American troops captured at least a third of Cologne by mid-morning today and forced the German defenders back into the old city's section around the heart of the devastated metropolis.

Three divisions—the 3rd Armored, 8th and 104th Infantry—reaching the Ringstrasse against surprisingly light opposition. The Germans fought in what once was the walled section of Cologne, the greatest traffic centre in western Germany.

Farther south, the United States 9th Army wiped out all but one small pocket on the Rhine south from Duesseldorf against light resistance and drove, with the 1st Canadian Army, into the West pocket farther down the Rhine.

Churchill Visits Troops.

Prime Minister Churchill told British troops on a visit to the northern front last weekend that "one strong push now will win the war".

The United States 1st Army, closing swiftly to the Middle Rhine south of Cologne, struck within six miles of the river centre of Bonn (101,000).

Beyond the Kyll River on the approaches to Coblenz, the 3rd Army declared in the German communique to have made a deep breach in enemy lines northeast of Kyllburg. Its movements were largely blacked out—similar to the secrecy prevailing during the great Ardennes breakthrough. The Americans reported resistance in Coblenz was forty-four miles.

Fall of the Rhineland city was expected hourly as U. S. tanks and infantry rolled through industrial sections in its northwest area and closed in the following sequence of events:

The form of the invitation was decided at the Yalta conference.

China and France, although not present at Yalta, were invited to subscribe to this invitation. China, taking him in on the Dumbarton Oaks talks last fall, readily agreed. France, on the other hand, asked that a reservation be written into the invitation. So this France sought to gain specific assurances she could propose any amendments at the conference.

Citations Tell of Heroic Rescue Of Chutists Near Schelde Estuary

Ottawa, March 6 (CP) — Cool courage of three Canadian sappers who guided tipsy stormboats through murky, rain-lashed Nederrijn waters Sept. 19 to aid in the rescue evacuation of heroic British airborne troops was described today when defence headquarters released the citations for awards for gallantry.

Military Medals went to sappers David John McCready, Calgary, Raymond Gerald Stiles, Kingston, cadette, Que., and Harry Decker Chicks, Kirkland Lake, Ont., and their citations tell some of the details of that historic night when the airborne men were forced to retire from their hard-won bridgehead.

The citations covered awards of two bars to the Distinguished Service Order, 11 D.S.O.'s, one Bar to Military Cross and 24 D.C.M.'s, nine Distinguished Conduct Medals and ever 38 Military Medals.

Most of the awards were for heroism in the bitter October fighting that resulted in the final liberation of the Schelde estuary and the freeing of the port of Antwerp.

Thicke cut through the area in the face of terrific enemy fire in order that the rescue craft might be launched and he was one of the last to leave the area, finishing his hazardous trip to rescue the paratroops.

Highest ranking officer in today's list was Brig. Ralph Holley Keeltes of Westmount, Que., who won the D.S.O. when, as acting commander of the 2nd Canadian division, he took over a brigade whose commander was wounded and not only directed brigade but divisional operations from his forward spot. Keeltes was described as "one of the most successful operations in which the infantry brigades of the 2nd Canadian infantry division were ever engaged."

Rhineland Bridgeless.

German demolition squads, trying desperately to guard the rich industrial Ruhr valley left the Rhine bridgeless along the twisting 70-mile stretch from Bonn to Wesel.

The Allies held the whole west bank of the Rhine from Cologne all the way north to Rheinberg; five miles south of Wesel, except for a tiny pocket in the remaining 30-odd miles south of Homberg, and a slender stretch from Bonn to three miles deep from south of Neuss to Wertzberg.

Even these were believed squeezed almost empty.

Pilots who flew over Cologne described it as a "dead city."

Nazi parachute troopers wavered and fell back under sledge-hammer blows from U. S. 8th Army, while British vanguards of the 1st Canadian Army pushing through the Hoiminghardt forest only eight miles from Wesel were meeting bitter resistance by new Reich strategists.

R.A.F. pilots said two bridges at Wesel were damaged seriously yesterday and 17 others destroyed. One span of a railway bridge was destroyed and the west end of a road bridge was blocked.

Remagen Wiped Out.

A 9th Army armored division which seized Orsoy, just south of Rheinberg, on the Rhine yesterday, wiped out the last of two fixed ferry routes across the river. The other, just south of Rees, was under close-range Canadian artillery fire.

Further south the news blackout imposed on Allied Army operations in order to screen Hs progress from the retreating enemy was still in force, but front dispatches were reporting the gains of up to 3½ miles on a 23-mile front stretching from eight miles southeast of Bonn to the Cologne northeast of Prusen.

Regular 7 Counter Blows.

Lt.-Gen. Patton's troops, repulsing seven counter-attacks in the past 24 hours, captured more than 2½ of the west bank of the Kyll River at Bleialf, 10 miles northeast of Prum bank Lieslingen, one of the towns city of Bleialf, 3 miles from the Rhine of Cologne.

Patton's infantry and armor were holding a 30-mile front from the Kyll River with the junction of the Moselle and the Kyll at the apex to a point nine miles east of Prum.

The drive to the Rhine continued south of Cologne.

American infantry reached the Rhine in another place four miles south of Cologne, capturing Rheinkassel, five miles north of Cologne, and the suburb of Langel, 1¼ miles farther south, on the southwestern outskirts of Cologne to the southern suburbs without opposition.

Son of Murdered Woman Arrested

Toronto, March 6 (CP)—Inspector of Detectives Arthur Morrison announced here late last night that a charge of murder has been laid against John Alexander Taylor, 52, who was arrested in Windsor last night by Toronto detectives.

Police had been searching a wide area for Taylor, wanted for questioning in connection with the axe-slaying of 79-year-old Mrs. Annie Mrs. Blanche Taylor, in her home in Toronto last Thursday. Announcement the murder charge had been laid was made here some hours after Taylor was taken into custody in Windsor.

Inspector Leavitt credited the Windsor police department with furnishing information which led to Taylor's arrest. The Windsor authorities, learned that Taylor had been seen in a beverage room in the Bonnet City last Friday and immediately police notified Toronto detectives left for Windsor Saturday and after a thorough search found their man last night. Taylor was arrested on the street by Det. James McLaughlin who knew the wanted man personally.

The body of Mrs. Taylor was found in the bedroom of her home in the Dovercourt District in Eastern Toronto last Thursday night by her youngest son, Gerald, 19, after a blood-blatted axe and signs that someone had attempted to clean up bloodstains in the room. The woman's head was battered.

Arrest of Taylor came two hours after the body of his mother was buried in Norway cemetery here.

Rotarians Hear Musical Program By Local Artists

Rotarian breasts, in which, perish the thought, there is no hint of savagery, were soothed well beyond the point of delight by the charms of a musical show programmed by Chairman of the Hour Rotarian Harry Moorman at the weekly luncheon on Monday.

It was a star-studded show featured with the performances of Belleville's outstanding artists and instrumentalists, and her latest additions to musical ranks, prize-winning boy artists who won their spurs under the baton of instructors and their city at the recent Kiwanis Music Festival held in Toronto which attracted 1,000 contestants.

Rotarian Harry Moorman, introduced by Acting President John Hancock the "greatest happening between Hay Bay and Consecon," took charge of the program and introduced in turn the various members of the quartette of silver-tongued trumpets, consisting of Frank Howard, Ronnie Moorman, Bob Hancock and Bob Johnson, and the program off to a tuneful start with "Evening Breeze" and "In the Gloaming."

Margaret Hoxsteen Heard.

The lovely voice of Miss Margaret Hoxsteen, pupil of Mr. Arthur Cox, was next heard in Moonlight Bay as an encore the charming singer rendered Drink to Me Only.

Displaying a well-nigh perfect mastery over his instrument, one of the city's youthful piano artists, Miss Joan Greenwood promise, Miss Stanley Hagerman, Junior, whose offering of the well-known Rachmaninoff Prelude in C Sharp Minor in solo and later in duet "A Country Garden" played with his tutor, Mrs. John Deacon, received a fine ovation from the clubmen.

Euphonium Solo.

His performance on the euphonium easily distinguishing the man who was awarded two firsts and a scholarship at the Toronto Musical Festival, Bobby Hall thrilled his listeners with the difficult Carnival of Venice, Shorty Milner in solo and later in duet "A Country Garden" played with his tutor, Mrs. John Deacon, received a fine ovation from the clubmen.

Community Concert Assoc. Expect Sold Out House In Coming Year Workers Told

The Belleville Community Concerts Association is faced with the task of selling out house this coming year," it was pointed out by Chairman Harry Moorman at the luncheon meeting held by Mr. Russell E. Hackborn, President of the Community Concerts Association, at the meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce on Monday evening. A very fine attendance enjoyed the lovely supper prepared and served by the ladies of the I.O.D.E.

Mr. Hackborn, who acted as chairman for the program following the dinner, stated that outside committees had been organized in connection with the Community Concerts Association here. He stressed the fact that it is a community organization, and that it is split carrying on with the earned profits. He introduced Miss Leona Riggs to the gathering. Miss Riggs read a letter from Mr. Ward Pyrah, Field Secretary of Columbia Concert Corporation and Community Concerts, in connection with Concert Service with headquarters in New York.

Honored guest on this occasion was Mr. Pyrah who represents the Community Concerts Association with headquarters in New York City. Mr. Pyrah, Concert Field Secretary, had the pleasure of listening to the Belleville Concert Association in a divided long program of two divisions. She spoke at some length on the Community Concert Service in this city, when representatives of the Community Concerts Association were assembled, and discussed everything pertaining to the city. "So much depends on the way the city is servicing the various cities" said Mr. Pyrah. "Belleville has a fine method of presenting concerts was brought out by Mr. Mills during the past few years ago, and the prime idea of Belleville is to organize permanent audience," Mr. Mills added that she was firmly convinced of the finest type of artist presented by this organization in New York City, and that Belleville was fortunate in having all the people of the world hear good music. Various complaints are received in Head Office, and these complaints serve to familiarize headquarters with the attitude of the musities and artists.

"We sign contracts with the artists and they with us, and contrary to what people think the artist hire us. The programs are planned by the Concert City, between the artists and Mr. Pyrah, and he also makes out a list of things he would like to see done in the city, and then and takes it to Mr. French for approval. The fact, that the program must be varied is stressed, as it is not hard to sell membership in these times," said Mr. Pyrah, "in this regard, however, that the association would not become too optimistic, and asked for early renewals in the campaign for membership. She reminded the membership that Mr. French is anxious for everyone to re-enroll, in the fact that if the cities do not support the concert association they will not go very far," she said. Success, Pyrah declares yourselves with this plan and you will continue to have concert grow," Mrs. Mills said in concluding Miss Greenwood.

Mr. Harry Moorman and Mr. W. J. Morrison were both called upon by Miss Riggs Secretary, and Mrs. W. R. Finkle, Chairman of Trio.

Mr. Morrison, in his opening remarks, conveyed to the president and the Executive Committee thanks for the success of the organization during the past year, stating that when things were not so encouraging as at present, now, he said. He urged the workers to get busy and sell memberships with enthusiasm. He also thanked Mrs. Hackborn, Mrs. Finkle and Mr. Hackborn for their splendid work in the Soundtrack.

Mrs. Finkle, in her brief address, said that for the last three years the local organization has worked splendidly in this order of membership, and that this year the objective must keep the concerts going." Mrs. Finkle said that it was a real pleasure at having Mrs. Mills here again this year. Already, she had helped the Community Concerts Association here through two campaigns, and realized the importance of the spoken word, and the help that it was to workers who worked carefully and say them sincerely, briefly, and enthusiastically. "There is magic in words and the way they are used."

Stormy Inter-Party Clashes May Be Revived in House

Profit of Nearly $20,000,000 Reported by Chairman of Liquor Control

Toronto, March 6 — (CP) — The stormy inter-party clashes that have marked the current session of the Ontario Legislature may be revived today when both Premier Drew and Liberal Leader Mitchell Hepburn speak in resumption of the Throne Speech debate.

A renewal of the Premier's offensive begun last Tuesday against opposition factions would end a week-end truce which has continued yesterday by the quietest afternoon of the session. Furthermore, it is believed Mr. Hepburn may offer an amendment to the Throne Speech, passage motion, a development that would force a move by the government, already faced with a five-point C.C.F. amendment.

Tabling reports yesterday to two bills introduced by C. C. F. members C. H. Stringer (Brantford) and William Dennison (Toronto-Broadview), Mr. Strange's proposal would amend the Mothers' Allowance Act to make it unlawful for persons to be married without first securing medical certificates of freedom from syphilis, and Dennison's bill would amend the Municipal Health Services Act, providing for Mr. Dennison's bill, would give any municipality body independence of the Provincial Health Services Board in planning and financing hospitals and other health services.

$20,000,000 Profit

A profit of nearly $20,000,000 for 1944, an increase of $2,500,000 over 1943, was shown in the annual report of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario tabled yesterday. Total liquor revenue was $68,816,512 for a $4,477,341 increase, although total purchases dropped from 46,606,236 to 41,990,774.

Commissioner William O. Webster told the House that beverage room beer quotas have been set at 1,000,000 gallons monthly six-tenths of a gallon a month for each customer. He made the figure in a question by William Riggs (CCF-Windsor-Sandwich). Nelson Ales, Independent Labor Member for East South, said a reduction in Windsor quotas had thrown out of work war veterans recently hired as beverage room employees.

The new Ontario Securities Act is designed to curb fraudulent practices in stock and mining promotion, Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell told the House yesterday on second reading of the measure. Two methods of investigation would be followed in enforcing the Act, he said. At first, any District Attorney would be empowered to take action on complaint of a citizen, without referring the matter to the government; the second type of investigation would be launched by the Commission itself if it found material or advertising field by a dealer might indicate fraud.

Elements of five German divisions have been identified in the organization but Canadian Army troops south of Kleve-Goch, five miles southwest of Xanten, which is one of the anchor points for the final defence. They have invested Xanten and have gained several miles to the south and southwest yesterday. Geldern is about 15 miles southeast of Xanten and Wessel eight miles due east.

Defences Not as Strong.

The defences of the east bank of the Rhine are nothing like those of the Siegfried line. They consist largely of hastily-dug, trench systems, with a few concrete pillboxes and artillery positions. There is also evidence that the defences and they are manned by the remnants of troops from formations units brought from Northern Holland, which now is denuded of Germans except for garrison forces.

(The anti-tank fixed line positions included dragons' teeth tank obstacles and sawtooth-built pill-boxes from which heavy calibre guns could be directed against attacking troops.)

Allied Headquarters is faced with a great problem of manpower. Time will undoubtedly be on the side of the Germans. Since the middle of January the Germans have been able to withdraw troops from the Western front for the battle in the east. The Germans launched their counter-offensive in the Ardennes on December 16th, and the Allies' first counter-blow was delivered on January 3rd. Between those two dates the Germans withdrew from the Western front to the Eastern front the equivalent of 10 divisions.

Canadian and British forces are closing in on Xanten, German machine gunners protecting flame-throwings the cornered enemy must seek to avoid being trapped on the west bank of the river between the 1st Canadian Army on the west, northwest and southwest, and the 9th Army pressing northward on the south side of the German bulge.

Kinsmen Told Of Ravages of Social Disease

The untold suffering and misery caused among the Canadian civilian population and in the armed services as result of the constantly increasing inroads of venereal disease was pictured to the members of the Kinsmen Club on Monday evening at their regular bi-monthly meeting when they were addressed by Dr. J. McKay, Medical Officer of the Belleville General Hospital.

The speaker indicated that in recent V.D. Actually the two diseases, syphilis and gonorrhoea, both exceptionally dangerous and representing the greatest single health problem in the Province. Ontario's young people face today," he said, were quoted including the spread of the disease among the civilian population, while the methods of control were also discussed. The importance of blood tests and immediate treatment by efficient medical men should the disease be contracted was emphasized.

Dr. McKay was introduced by Kin Gardiner Duff with club appreciation being expressed by Kin George O'Brien.

Appreciation of the Kinsmen Club to William Navin for his part in the production of the recently presented Kinsmen Revue was expressed by President Harry Rollins. Kin Navin, Belleville pianist and flutist from Niagara Falls, Ont., has been responsible for the latest musical arrangements by efficient conductor and was emphasized.

Kin Phil Huddleston acted as accompanist for the evening's entertainment which was led by Kin Harry Knott, Lyle Storrs acted as fine collector.

'One Strong Heave Will Win War' Churchill at Front

By NED NORDNESS
(AP War Correspondent)

With Churchill in Germany, March 6 (Delayed) (AP) — Prime Minister Churchill told front-line troops today that "one strong heave" will win the war and bring down tyranny in Europe.

Standing in a cold drizzle before Scottish troops of the famous 51st Highland Division, which has been fighting under the 1st Canadian Army in the northern Rhine offensive, Mr. Churchill declared that "soon the enemy will be driven across the Rhine, and anyone can see over there what will win the war".

On Conquered Soil of Germany

Mr. Churchill told the troops that he was "proud to meet you on German soil you have conquered". He spoke with fierce pride in his voice.

"We will soon bring down tyranny so you can go home", he promised.

"All our efforts", he continued, "will end in a broader picture of our families of decency and fair play and will spread over a larger area".

On his tour of the Canadian sector he was accompanied by Field Marshal Montgomery, Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the Imperial General Staff; and Gen. Crerar, commander of the 1st Canadian Army, in Germany.

Also included in his party was Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds, commander of the 2nd Canadian Corps; Air Marshal Sir Arthur Coningham, commander of the Allied Tactical Air Forces, had accompanied Mr. Churchill to Field Marshal Montgomery's headquarters.

It was the third day of a tour which also has taken him into the United States 8th Army sector where Lt.-Gen. William Simpson conducted him through the Siegfried Line.

Over the Rhine Next

The whirlwind drive through the sector was slowed considerably by wildly cheering troops who lined the roads shouting "how are we doing", "over the Rhine next" and promises to bring Hitler "back alive".

To all these Mr. Churchill, riding in a staff car with Field Marshal Montgomery, gave his famous "V" sign and puffed furiously on a cigar while nodding his head to acknowledge the greetings of the troops.

The tour took the party to one of the highest hills in the area from where the British leader stared long and silently across the Rhine he has secured in the mists of this gloomy, cloudy day.

Perhaps he thought of those defiant words he had uttered nearly four years ago — when he promised only blood, sweat and tears before final victory. The blood and sweat his people had had, and there across the swollen Rhine was victory.

As he turned away and re-entered the car there was a satisfied look on his face that the promise was about to be fulfilled in full.

Netherlanders Recognize Leader

Netherlands civilians arecognized him and soon hundreds lined the streets, shouting his name. German civilians trudging along muddied roads with their belongings slung over their shoulders recognized him too. You could see it in the new vim with which they gazed at the barrel-chested figure who had stood between them and victory.

Mr. Churchill told war correspondents that Field Marshal Montgomery's North Rhine campaign was in effect a second Caen, with British and Canadian troops drawing enemy power to it as the Americans slashed through for resounding gains.

"I am deeply impressed with the brave fighting of our boys, especially as I see what they fought through," he said as he gazed about him at the formidable Reichswald and the mud and water on the roads and fields. "The enemy had a tremendous defence advantage in the Reichswald."

'On Our Side Now'

Mr. Churchill was asked whether the Rhine would prove as formidable a barrier as the English channel did to Hitler. He said that depended "upon numerous and other circumstances—and the other circumstances are on our side now."

"You'll find though that no river ever proved an insurmountable barrier," he concluded.

The session with the correspondents ended when Field Marshal Montgomery took the Prime Minister by the arm and urged him to carry on with the heavy program.

"I was about to give you something real good," he joked to the newspapermen. "You'll have to blame it on Monty. I had only started to talk."

As he drove through the Reichswald Mr. Churchill and his party drew abreast a large sign which stated: "This is the Siegfried Line."

A few yards beyond was a clothesline with several pieces of wearing apparel and a sign which boasted eloquently "and this is the washing."

Churchill Fires 360-Pound Shell, Marks it Personal

By ROSS MUNRO

With the 1st Canadian Army in Germany, March 6 (Delayed) (CP Cable)—Cigar-smoking Prime Minister Church today pulled the lanyard that fired a 360-pound shell on which the Prime Minister wrote in chalk "for Hitler—personal."

The episode came during a week-end visit to the 1st Canadian Army in Germany and with a rumble like that of a freight train the shell, from a 240-mm. howitzer in charge of a British Major, headed for the Rhine ferry crossings at Xanten miles away.

Gunners loaded the shell after the grinning Prime Minister accepted a piece of chalk and wrote his message. When he fired the mammoth, Asiatican-built artillery piece a dozen brass hats, including Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, and Field Marshal Montgomery, 21st Army group commander, plugged their ears with their fingers.

"Good shot," laughed Sir Alan as Mr. Churchill turned around, smiling with satisfaction. This personal shelling of the Xanten crossings was the biggest enjoyment the Prime Minister had during his visit to the Canadian Army.

Mr. Churchill said: "I didn't aim the gun, so they can't blame me if I missed him." (Hitler).

Three hundred parents and teachers augmented by approximately one hundred students, saw demonstrations and heard explanations of the many phases of work done by students and school organizations at the second regular meeting of the Belleville Collegiate Home and School Association last night.

Popularity of the association is evidenced in the fact that in its brief existence of two months it boasts a membership of 300. Fifty new members were enrolled last night.

The Library Committee under Ann Nicholson, held a meeting on the stage before the audience and demonstrated its work of filing and repair of books.

Physical training exercises were provided on the parallel bars by G. Locke, G. Garrow and J. Campbell, while forty boys under the supervision of Mr. Homer Townsend, physical instructor of the school, offered clever performances in the art of pyramid formations. Girl students gave demonstrations of tumbling, calisthenics and physical training movements to the rhythm of music, directed by the Misses Morton and Merry.

Bill Bankier "Collegiate News" editor, spoke briefly on the work of his staff and the general coverage and publication of important school activities.

The aims, objects and spirit of the Correspondence Club was outlined by Mr. Stanley Hagerman who emphasized the work being done by the club between the club and Australian correspondents.

The important work of the students' council was explained by its president, Miss Vera Flindall, while Girl Cadet Corps commanding officer, Miss Mary Flintoff, demonstrated the work of a platoon of cadets on the stage. The girls went through the drill like veterans and gave a fine display of drill.

Mr. Newton Thompson, head of the Teen Age Committee gave a brief talk on the work of that organization and appealed for lady volunteers to assist in the supervision of the school cafeteria on Friday nights when the club held its entertainments.

The musical part of the meeting was furnished by the School Glee Club which offered two lusical numbers.

The next meeting is scheduled for April 16 which will be preceded by a father-and-son banquet timed for 6 p.m.

Juelich, Germany, March 3 — (Delayed by Censor) — (AP) — Prime Minister Churchill paid a call to Germany today in a long-awaited personal triumph.

Hitler was not on hand to receive him.

The 70-year-old Prime Minister walked into Germany through the shattered Siegfried Line, once the symbol of the might of Hitler who four years ago was promising to sit in London.

Mr. Churchill looked around the ruins of this fortress city — the most completely destroyed city since St. Lo — without visible displeasure and said grimly: — "There will not be any unemployment around here after the war."

It took considerable argument by Lt.-Gen. William Simpson of the United States 9th Army, who acted as guide, to keep the fearless British warrior from visiting the Rhine itself at Duesseldorf.

"If they are shooting you can put me in a tank and I will be all right," Mr. Churchill told Gen. Simpson, but the American Commander declined to risk the life of Britain's No. 1 statesman.

The tour included an inspection of the dragons teeth and pillboxes of the Siegfried Line near Aachen. An inspection of the jump-off spots on the Roer River for the 9th Army's present drive and a lunch in the Citadel of Juelich, the seven-century-old German stronghold which fell easily in the offensive.

With the Prime Minister were Marshal Montgomery, Sir Alan Brooke, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, Gen. Simpson and two 9th Army Corps Commanders, Maj.-Gens. Raymond S. McLain and Alvan C. Gillum, Jr.

The car, with Gen. Simpson explaining how the battle through Germany progressed, sped into Aachen, followed by a small press convoy.

Churchill Home After a Visit To West Front

London, March 6 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill has returned to London after a visit to the front where he conferred with Gen. Eisenhower and Field Marshal Montgomery.

A considerable part of the tour was in German territory.

The Prime Minister and his Chief Military Adviser, Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay, spent the weekend at the headquarters of Eisenhower and Montgomery "for the purpose of discussing with them a number of Allied commanders a wide field of military matters," said an announcement from the Prime Minister's residence today.

Mr. Churchill also visited troops of the 1st Canadian army and units of the U.S. 9th army which were taking part in the drive to the Rhine.

DIES IN HOSPITAL

Brockville, March 6 (CP)—Mrs. James Jodwayr, 26, of Prescott died in hospital here last night of burns suffered Saturday when coal oil exploded at her home. Her four-year-old daughter, Bernice, was also badly burned, but today is slightly improved.

CIVILIAN EVACUATION BEGUN

Washington, March 6 — (AP)— Evacuation of civilians from the Philippine Islands has begun, it was announced yesterday by the State and War Departments which said the removal of these people from the islands would "take place as rapidly as the military situation there permits and as space becomes available" for transport.

New Russian Tank

Russia which has produced so many surprises for the Germans from his false belief of the position of Russia which Hitler held, to the latest development, the new Russian tank, the "Perfect 34."

It was announced only at the weekend that the new Stalin weapon has been spearheading the Russian drive westward through the German homeland. Tremendous size as if emulating the vastness of the size of Russia and the swift movement so that it could advance fifty miles in a day from the Vistula are features of the new Muscovite war chariot.

It is one of the Allied weapons which are going to roll through the streets that once cheered Hitler in the great occasion-to-be when the opponents of Nazism and German tyranny will march through the streets of German cities when Germany is crushed.

Monty's Mother Predicts

Everyone will hope that Lady Montgomery who has predicted that the end of the war with Germany will be over on June 23rd and who has asked her son, the famous Field Marshal Montgomery, to see that her prophecy is fulfilled, will find her forecast correct. That leaves little time to the Germans to-day with their new Nazism and Hitlerism but soon or late they will have to give up their wild dreams of world domination.

Germany cannot win the war and the Allies aim to win it to crush the German tyranny and to lead the world into an era of secure peace. With the resistless force of the Empire and West Powers of the United Nations moving closer and closer to the heart of Germany and each step and pace of tyranny, German hopes and her fighting are futile; they but cause greater suffering to Germany, . . .

While this is the last round as the British Field Marshal has said, all the United Nations forces are to be employed with their superlative power to end the war at the earliest possible date in order to save lives. On the other hand Hitler would, if he could, continue the war endlessly at every cost even though he knows it cannot be won by Germany. Everything that the Allies have in power will be thrown into the war against the Huns until the end which will be when Hun legion collapses.

Germany developed the greatest threat that was ever hurled against civilization and it has taken now five and a half years to wear down the enemy so that his end is near. Japan is more complicated. The timetable of the struggle for a time but now she too is on the retreat.

What the Hitlerites are seeing today is a unified front and a sweep of victories which are being won on German ground through the forces which are speeded to one goal, Berlin and destruction of Nazi tyranny.

Some believe the end of Germany cannot be far away. But whatever strength is needed to knock the Hun out in battle will be thrown at Germany when the major lesson to Nazidom is that the most renegade power of the world along with Japan will be given before the world. Never again will the Germans be able to claim or say that they were not defeated.

No one knows exactly when the end of the struggle will be. The great point, of course, is that the great day of Allied triumph is approaching which is the most important thing and that Hitler's war machine will be broken irreparably. The world is looking for it and will fight on until it comes with undiminished striking power.

One may be certain that Field Marshal Montgomery, a soldier of approved merit, whose name will be numbered with the great of all time, is fighting to bring the war to its close as only he and his associates can fight at the earliest date. If the date should be March 23rd., it will come to a grateful world and on a grateful day. If it takes longer Allied power will go on perseveringly with one hundred per cent. striking blows to bring it to pass in the soonest possible time.

Normandy Air Strategy Repeated

The present great air offensive against Germany's lines of communication is following the same pattern as the attacks on the French railways before the Germans cracked in Normandy. The plan was highly successful last summer and turned a defeat into a rout. Clearly the supreme command are trying it again.

In the Battle of France air power succeeded in isolating the German Army in the pocket of land between the Seine and the Loire. This was done by bombing and strafing every road junction, bridge and railway right back to the German border for a hundred miles to the south. The enemy was unable to get up supplies and reinforcements and, once he had been beaten, he was forced to leave his equipment behind because there was no means of getting it back to Germany along those blitzed roads and railways. There was no position where he could stand and fight until he reached the frontiers, for every line that might have been defended was bereft of communications and therefore useless.

The same thing is in the process of happening again. This time the Germans are being isolated with their backs to the Rhine and behind that the combined air forces of British, Canada and America are systematically laying waste every means of communication the Germans possess as they did in the Battle of Magdeburg, Leipzig and Nurnburg. This is a much greater task than was accomplished in France. The German rail and road system in the west is more complex than the French. The mass of railways in the Ruhr alone presents many scores of targets. Furthermore, the Battle of Normandy took place in the summer, while the Battle of the Rhine is being fought in one of the foulest winters in memory.

The air offensive can be divided broadly into three stages. First of all the big railway yards and marshalling centres are attacked. Then the lines are smashed in as many places at once as possible. Finally when transport has been driven to use secondary roads and one track railways these are similarly attacked, too. Instead of going out and plastering one or two targets with thousands of tons of bombs, as they did in stage one, the 'heavies' are now carrying Germany in small formations attacking three or four targets in a day. In addition, the R.A.F. Second Tactical Air Force and the American Tactical Forces are adding to the chaos with low level attacks on locomotives, bridges, signal boxes and sidings. In one day last week the R.A.F. fighters cut the lines between Germany and Holland in seventy-five places and, in addition, destroyed sixty-seven locomotives, 195 rail trucks, 138 road trucks, and 41 barges. On the same day a formation of R.A.F. Tempests discovered a camouflaged oil siffage depot near Hanover and destroyed 127 trains loaded with oil, ten storage tanks and thirty-four M. T. Tankers.

The air assault on Germany is even more of a thunder bolt Nazis effort than the land attack for, in addition to the U.S.A.A.F. forces involved there are within the R.A.F. airmen of nearly every Dominion and country that is at war with Germany. The Royal Canadian Air Force, besides having its own fighter squadrons has a complete group of heavy bombers operating from Yorkshire. The Australians have their own bomber squadrons taking part in the raids and also fighter squadrons in the Second Tactical Air Force. There are complete units of New Zealanders, Norwegians, Poles, Dutch, Belgians, French and Czechs all working within the R.A.F. in the present operations which the Germans are beaten on the banks of the Rhine they all will have shared in the victory.

EXCITEMENT IN A FACTORY

"I want you to know," said a workman glad,
"I think I've discovered a likely lad.
They hired him this morning and sent him in,
All eyes and ears and a happy grin."

"Good," said the foreman standing by,
"On that bright little fellow I'll keep an eye.
In time, if he proves to be all you say,
I'll put him in line for a raise in pay."

So the word went round: "There's a good boy here!"
And it got to the superintendent's ear,
Who rose from his desk and went out to see
If as smart as they said that boy could be.

Now the manager knows and the president, too,
For there's nothing that men are so pleased to do
As discover a boy who is worth his pay
And to help him along on his upward way.

Crudely-Built Officer's Home Looks Pretty Grand to Pyle

(By ERNIE PYLE)

In the Marianas Islands, (Delayed)—The B-29 squadron that my nephew is with is commanded by Lieut.-Col. John H. Griffith, of Plymouth, Pa.

He walked into our Quonset hut the first night I was here and grinned sort of knowing-like as we were introduced. He knew the colonel had crossed somewhere in the dim past, but I couldn't recall it.

Finally he said: "Remember the Rangitiki?"

"Oh, for God's sake, of course," I said. The Rangitiki was the ship that took us from England to Africa in the fall of 1942. Colonel Griffith was in a nearby cabin on that trip and we became well acquainted. But the war is big and time flies, and you do forget.

Colonel Griffith flew combat missions both out of England and Africa. And now on this side of the world he has made 11 missions to Japan. But from now on, during my executive, he is restricted to four missions a month.

On one mission Colonel Griffith's bombardier got sick and blacked almost off. As Col. Griffith was dragging him back into the pilot's compartment, he thoughtlessly turned off his oxygen mask. In a moment he passed out, and Col. Griffith says he frankly fell with his face right in the mask, and it revived him.

Although still young, Colonel Griffith has been in the Army eight years, and will stay in after the war. His wife and two children are waiting for him at Lagrange Park, Ill.

Until recently Colonel Griffith lived with the pilots in the same Quonset hut I'm in. But a few days ago they finished his new house. You should see it.

It's a skeleton framework of two-by-fours about 30 feet square roofed with canvas and walled only with screen wire, tropical fashion. The roof overlaps about six feet all around to keep out the almost horizontal rain.

Inside, they've gotten it the same balance of a many-roomed house by putting up Army blanket partitions of brown burlap. This makes it seem that you have a living room, bedroom, kitchen and open porch, although it's actually just one room.

The place is wonderfully comfortable. It has floor decks, two cots and ten chairs, and yet there's still room left over for a big clothes closet, and a washbowl and shower. The water coming from two 50-gallon tanks on the roof.

It has an icebox, a radio and a field telephone. Incidentally, Colonel Griffith still has the same radio with which he used to listen when he went to England nearly two years ago.

If you had this house in America, you'd probably pay a month rent, yet the whole thing was built of packing boxes and metal bomb crates, and Army lettuce.

The wooden floor is painted battleship gray. Colonel Griffith likes to keep his floor clean. Consequently he has a big sign on the screen door saying "Please Remove Shoes Before Entering."

He isn't joking either. He even makes his own commanding officer take off his shoes when he comes to visit. He furnishes his guests extra socks in case their feet get cold, which of course they don't.

The house is built on stilts, and the soldier lumber and other green shrubbery, wildly native, only 50 feet from the sea. You come down the steps to it over a path cut out of the laurel, and once in the house you feel miles away from everything.

Right now is only the curve of the lagoon, and the pounding of the surf outside. You can't see a hundred yards out, and the islands in the far blue sky, several times a day sudden tropical showers drench and cool the place.

It's on Colonel Griffith's porch that I'm writing these columns. My only excuse for them not being better columns is that I can't seem to keep away from that, low deck chair at the far end of the porch. I sink into it, looking up the path to see if Bombardier Griffith isn't strolling down with her unshaven.

Do Nazis Face Sea Assault?

(By Admiral W. V. Pratt, U.S.N., Ret., in "Newsweek")

From the naval point of view, a very interesting statement that Germany still faced the threat of a seaborne invasion, was made last week by Admiral Sir Harold Burrough, newly appointed naval commander-in-chief under General of the Army Eisenhower. He said that the coast line of Germany, and remainder of Western Europe still occupied by the enemy offer an approximate 2,000 miles of open water such as the assault on Wilhelmshaven (off the Netherlands coast) which turned the key to the port of Antwerp.

What gives the statement force is the fact that though the Germans have been numerous amphibious landings in the Mediterranean and the great one on the coast of France on D-Day, the influence of amphibious strategy has by no means been overdrawn by that of purely land strategy. Even today, when the Germans are on the south of Europe, whose warfare spoken of as an important theatre, and the Pacific its importance has been recognized.

Before a major amphibious operation in the North Sea can be contemplated, however, certain conditions must be fulfilled. The preliminaries, organization, and so on were thoroughly studied on D-Day. Sea and air power and small landing craft are essential, and adequate military strength is indispensable. The one factor beyond human control is weather.

Preliminary landings in areas reasonably close to the objective, subject to the sweep of wind and sea. On the coast of Holland, Belgium and Denmark, which include great harbors bordering on the Skagerrak and Kattegat, the danger is likely to be free from storms starts in March, but the "stormy season" does not practically includes the important German, Dutch, Belgian, Danish ports, and Hamburg, continuous operation now can only be assessed in its relation to the whole European campaign, and to its prospects. Such operations are necessary part, once the operation is projected, but they are, and today, extraneous supporting operations which once might have been in order after the Germans have eliminates any landing in Norway. The capture of Bergen would only destroy a Nazi submarine nest, and the submarine, however great a menace, is now only incidental to the main issue, which is a drive at the heart of Germany.

The transfer of German troops between Norway and Germany can only be done under the cover of the fighter and its submarines. Further, the Nazis have been forced to make the objective of a major amphibious operation. The relief of an occupied country. Hence the attempt to occupy the Jutland Peninsula and the Danish islands comprising Denmark could have only two objectives—the Kiel Canal and most important would be to break through into the Western Baltic, as the Soviets have done in the east, and get at the real underbelly of Germany from the Western Baltic Sea. This operation requires a long combination of favorable circumstances. Forcing the entrance to the Baltic from the North Sea, through Kiel or when he was First Sea Lord in the British Admiralty in the early days of the last war.

The second objective would be to get to the Kiel Canal through Heligoland which has been reported as harboring scores of submarines, large and small and well-protected sea area, undoubtedly covered by a mine field.

There then remain three other sea areas for consideration. The first runs from Walcheren to the Zuider Zee, which is in close association with Britain. This area has been heavily mined and the amphibious operation as the Allies already have established a bridgehead of coast extending from Den Helder to the Ems River and covered by the British fleet. The second, further east to Borkum would hardly seem to be worth a major effort unless it doesn't lead directly to Germany. But that part of the coast is comparatively open, stretching from the Ems river with its ports of Emden, the Weser with its port of Bremen and the Elbe with its great port of Hamburg, and the Kiel Canal opposite Cuxhaven—all within a radius of 275 miles from the British fleet and air base at Orkney.

This portion of the coast is covered by the R.A.F. Coastal Command and is open to approach from the sea by the British Home Fleet. It is guarded by several islands large and small, the largest by Heligoland, which in a sweep of 30 miles covers the Elbe, Jade and Weser rivers. This island forms the most potential invasion threat for Britain, and would be the first objective of Heligoland over to Germany.

In the last war the main obstacles stood in the way of the penetration of the Baltic Sea by the British fleet—the German fleet, the mine fields obstructing passage, and coastal defence guns. Today air power has changed this picture. The devastating effect of air bombardment can at least so neutralize the power of heavy shore artillery that the fleet can pass the defences with greater immunity than formerly. The Germans have their defences older and could be pressed at Skagerrak.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

PARDON MY SNORT

Here is a clipping apparently from a newspaper, but I do not know whether it is from the Vancouver Clarion or from Quip. Here is how the item's credited, read it:

Cold Logic

Start of the "cold" season this week brought these anti-sniffle tips from Dr. Frederick C. Smith, director of the department of preventive Medical Division.

1. If you get wet feet, don't sit around all day in the same shoes.

2. Use two pairs of rubbers, one kept at the office and one at home.—J. Brady, would inspect here that if you have no office then the hell with it. You'll have to hire a small boy to carry your spares or they'll be always there if it should rain. damn.)

3. Keep an extra pair of stockings and an old pair of sheep in the desk drawer. (For people who carry mail or shuck oysters for a living) smart shoe store fashion the duckiest chenille knapsack in charming pink and blue with drawer compartments for old shoes, stockings etc.)

4. If a cold creeps up on you, eat lightly for a few days . . largely fruit juices, clear broths, milk, vegetables.

5. A hot bath, a hot drink and early to bed, warmly covered, fresh air in the room, should do for home treatment.

A month ago I had what Dr. Frederick C. Smith has diagnosed by thousand of his colleagues would be a cold. I only call it a cold. I was reckless enough to consult any of them. I ate lightly as ever for a few days, including my fruit juices and soups, milk and vegetables I could get. I ate a hot meal daily, took a bath, early to bed etc., there is no doubt about it, you get any enjoyment from such fussing—but if you suppose I applied anything like that to me you give him a fair shot. When I became obviously feverish I did not call in a clinical thermometer unless my physician finds it necessary) and maybe a bit more irritational than I am ordinarily, I summoned my family doctor, who sized up the situation in a few well chosen words you could print on editorial page. Unfortunately, not by guesswork, he found I had acute sinusitis—pus in the superficed careful use of one of the sulfa drugs, made no fatal allusion to the weather or anything like that, and promised to send me to the hospital if I was not improved by tomorrow.

I had trouble with those confounded sinuses in my youth. Sunday and the profusion of similar suggestions offered by the family each year by publicity-hungry doctors and health officers is that you never can tell where prevention ends and treatment begins—and the Authorities who hand out the cordial rules know they are said in sounding off to the public as long as your subscribers lasts.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Ambulant Treatment for Piles

I am 48 years old and do not relish the idea of entering the hospital for an operation. Can you recommend a doctor here who is skilled in the ambulant treatment for piles? I believe you advocate that method in preference to the operation.

(Mrs. A. G. P.)

Answer—So many correspondents fail to inclose stamped addressed envelope when they ask for such information that I print physicians' names. I do not advise the ambulant treatment for piles in any time. I warn you to beware of "Doctor" Dr. Dandy's canvass the public for customers, by claiming the use this method, whether for piles, varicose veins or hernia.

Gum Chewing

Is habitual gum chewing hard on the eyes? (Miss O. J.)

Answer—By no means. Gum doesn't affect the eyes of those who have to watch you chewing. If you must chew, I recommend chewing a handful of plain wheat every day.

Ingrowing Toenail

Is twilight sleep harmful to mothers? (Mrs. F. D.) Don't why don't doctors use the method?

(Mrs. R. T.)

Answer—The dangerous can't control effect on mother or child since the hypodermic of morphine and scopolamine hyoscine has been administered. Therefore, mothers should read "Childbirth" without fear" by Dr. Grantly Dick Read (Harper). And for a stamped addressed envelope and ten cents (coin) he'll send you "Sex Hygiene." If you want also "The Baby Book" by Dr. Brady for twenty cents, for both booklets.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Most of the Indians with whom Daniel Boone fought could speak English almost as well as he could himself.

There have been only two short periods since Confederation when there went there was not at least one former President living. There is now living ex-President Hoover, having the last twenty months of Franklin Roosevelt's life and the last eight months of Theodore Roosevelt's administration.

"One's taste for Roquefort cheese can be permanently destroyed by a microscope," remarked President Hoover in a Gridiron speech in 1929. In the same speech President Hoover said: "My share of taciturnity is one of the unmerited divisions of time"somewhat comparable with that accused man of half horse and half rabbit by whom he ate a rabbit and one horse."

Herbert Hoover is a firm, lonely and self-satisfied air we say he is "jaunty." This word is of French origin. It goes back to Latin gentilis, meaning "of the same race." In Latin "gentilis" signified "of the same race or class." In French it became "gentil." The English, trying to give the word a distinctive meaning, spelled it "jaunty." Originally it meant gentlemanly, noble, of high birth or good family. Then it acquired the meaning "stylish," "smart" or "showy."

In 1797 John Jay resigned as Governor of New York to become Chief Justice of the United States. Jay was appointed Minister to England by President John Quincy Adams.

John C. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, was the youngest Vice President of the United States when he was elected at the age of 36.

"Mildew" is derived from two Teutonic words meaning "honey" and "dew," as honey dew originally signified "honey dew."

New Labor Branch To Place Experts

London, March 5 (CP)—A new "Higher Appointments Branch" of the British labor ministry, to handle placements calling for "administrative, supervisory, managerial, professional or technical qualifications or capacity" is being set up in London to interview experts who has worked in Ottawa.

He is Alexander Gunn, 56, loaned in 1942 to the Canadian government to help organize national selective service.

The new branch, expected to cost perhaps $500,000, would be spelled in a year, will help men and women whose careers have been retarded by war service to enter big jobs in industry, commerce and the professions. It will work separate from, but in conjunction with, the labor exchanges and employment offices administered by the ministry. The branch will begin its function on a large scale as soon as Germany is defeated and partial demobilization is possible.

FIGHTING CANUCKS WANT THEIR SHOWS IN RAIN OR SHINE

Troupe of 21 Entertainers Home After Three Months in France, Belgium and Holland

By R. W. CLARKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto — (CP)— Home after 14 months overseas with a Canadian "Army Show" unit, Pte. Vera Carlwright of Toronto says that Canadian troops on the Western Front were "so hungry for entertainment" they even enjoyed outdoor performances staged despite rain.

One of five girls in the unit cast of 37, the pretty, 20-year-old dancer said that the first time it began to rain during an open-air performance, the members of the show figured that the performance would be halted. "But none of the soldiers gave any indication of leaving," she added, "so we just went on with the show.

"Sometimes we'd feel more like mermaids than dancers when we'd get caught on the stage in the rain. Our hair would be all over the place and our costumes would be a mess, but it made no difference to the boys—they seemed to enjoy it all.

The troupe spent three months on the Western Front, staging shows in France, Belgium and Holland. Sometimes it would be three shows a day; other days it would be one or two. "We landed in France a month after D-Day and followed the Canadians from Caen on," said Pte. Cartwright. "We played one show at Eindhoven, Holland, only a mile and a half from the enemy lines."

Generally speaking, the unit played from makeshift stages but at Eindhoven it had the pleasure of performing in a theatre with seating capacity for close to 1,000 persons. The theatre was a project connected with one of the plants in the town, and some civilians attended the various performances.

Became Expert Traders.

The girls became expert traders during their three months on the continent, exchanging their entire rations for such things as eggs, bread and fruit. Because they were able to add to their food rations in this manner, the Toronto dancer admits, that she gained 20 pounds—20 pounds that she lost after leaving the continent.

Mostly, the members of the troupe put up in private homes. On one occasion, in Belgium, the girls were billeted in a convent occupied by a baron and baroness. "Once I was in my shirtsleeves, doing my washing outside the chateau when the baron called that we'd be having tea," said Pte. Cartwright. "Imagine having tea with a baron and baroness in your shirtsleeves!"

In another Belgian town, the woman at whose home they stayed always locked the door at 11 p.m. on the dot. "If we girls came home one minute after that we'd have to stand outside and pound on the door for what seemed like an hour before she'd let us in. She had two sons, and she was always afraid that the Germans might enter the house and force her son to go to Germany as slave labor." One experience she remembers vividly occurred in France when the girls slept in a tent after performing before a Canadian unit. German planes were busy that night, and the entire camp was on the alert. Late in the evening, Pte. Cartwright and another girl decided they'd take a look around.

"We were only out a couple of minutes and were just about to go back in the tent as the sentry heard us. He yelled and we were paralyzed; we just couldn't speak and we thought he was going to shoot. Finally, I managed to say: 'It's only the girls!' The things that sentry called us."

The War Today—
Allied Crossing of Rhine River To Be Major Amphibious Operation

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

It would be difficult to find a better summary of Germany's desperate straits than is given by Dr. Rudolf Semmler, Nazi propagandist, who declared darkly:

"Never in our history have we been in such a grave situation. Never have we stood so totally alone.

The fresh success of the Allies on both the western and eastern fronts places them in position for the final surge which will carry them into the heart of Germany, in the west they are up against the last great natural barrier—the Rhine itself. In the east the powerful Russian thrust almost to the gates of Berlin, port of Stettin safeguards the Red northern flank and paves the way for the offensive to end all offensives.

Germany Is About to Collect.

Germany is about to collect the full wages of sin—and Dr. Semmler shows that he knows full well what that is.

For the Decisive Battle.

This doesn't mean that the Allies haven't tough fighting ahead of them. On the contrary, the indications are that they have. Semmler says—and, I believe, correctly—that the "German command is preserving the highest possible number of troops for the decisive battle."

Field Marshal von Rundstedt appears to have succeeded in getting a large number of his first-class troops out of Belgium, across the Rhine to the east side of the Rhine. Many of the men he left to fight a rearguard action have been distinctly third-class, although he brought up first-rate forces to the defence of the strategic bridgeheads, Operation Sees.

This means that he may be able to put up a stiff fight when Gen. Eisenhower puts his forces over the Rhine for the drive to meet the Russians in Berlin. And don't let anyone tell you that the crossing won't be tough, for its bids fair to be one of the major amphibious operations of the war—carried in part by naval units. This wide and deep river, with its cross-currents, is a formidable obstacle, especially with strong enemy forces guarding the east bank. However, we shall get across. We may be sure that the plans for this great adventure long have been completed and that much of the equipment already is close at hand.

The Germans won't know—and certainly we stay-at-homes won't know—when or where the crossings are to be attempted until Hitler's power suddenly rushes his equipment and troops to the chosen spot and makes whirlwind preparations for the assault. It's a fair guess, however, that he make crossing in several places. While he might stop this new drive soon, the signs are that he will make a considerable pause to get fully set.

Colonge Battle Some About Closed.

Headquarters announces that the Allies are making "good progress" in knocking out enemy bridgeheads west of the Rhine. The battle for the great Prussian city of Cologne—arrogant symbol of German militarism—seems to be about finished through lack of German resistance.

This is a pleasant surprise, for the Germans had been expected to put up a stiff fight to hold this prize, both for its moral effect and to protect the huge bridgeheads and railroad bridges across the Rhine. Sundered, Cologne would have made a strong stand there if he had so elected, for I know from having wandered many a time through the narrow and crooked streets of the old city that infantry could put up a good defence there. However, it's reported that only about 1,000 German troops have been left in the city. The main body has slown the Hohenzollern bridges, indicating that the big portion of Cologne on the west bank isn't going to be defended in struggle.

Loss of such bridges, by the way, won't prevent the Allies from getting across. They will depend on pontoons and those railroad bridges which are equally at home on land or in water.

"SALADA" TEA

This story is based on an actual case...

"Give me the tools and I'll get back to my Job..."

After three years' ground-crew service with the R.C.A.F., Harvey Baxter was returning to civil life, to his wife and three youngsters. In peacetime an electrician, he was anxious to get back to his ...de, but he had neither the tools nor the wherewithal to buy them.

Harvey Baxter was discharged before the new government provisions came into effect, enabling veterans to obtain such assistance as he needed. That is why he came to see us.

He had a modest asset in a little farm he owned, but was short of cash. Could we lend him $150 to buy the tools he needed to resume his trade?

Indeed we could—and we did . . . his proposition was sound and we were impressed by his determination to succeed.

Harvey Baxter set to . . . bought his tools, got out printed notices advertising the fact that he was a qualified electrician, and, within a few weeks, he had more work than he could handle.

This new B of M customer is well on his way with his own rehabilitation plan. His determination and self-reliance, coupled with a bank loan, have put him on his feet again. . .

Do You Know . . .

that Canada's programme for the rehabilitation of her servicemen and women upon demobilization is one of the most forward-looking social schemes ever devised. This programme provides veterans with opportunities for training, completion of education, land settlement and protection against illness and unemployment. Through war service gratuities, re-establishment credits, servicemen may carry out many of the plans they have been making while in uniform.

Upon discharge . . .

servicemen everywhere who are in need of special assistance in working out their civilian plans are turning to the Bank of Montreal. We are experienced in the art of working with these men who have given of themselves so freely for their country, and we are determined to aid them in their return to civil life in every way we can.

For these men our managers are providing sound counsel on money matters and about financial details to avoid, and, through banking services, are giving assistance — as far as they can — in the many other ways open to them that provided by the Government's programmes.

Call on the manager or accountant of our branch in your district. He will be interested in your plans and problems, whatever their extent may be. You will appreciate his helpful approach and sound counsel.

Clincher Blow For Iwo Jima Soon To Be Made

Guam, March 6 — (AP) — The clincher blow in the savage 16-day-old battle for little Iwo, where more than 2,000 United States Marines have died while killing more than 13,000 Japanese, was poised today—grown in power by supplies pouring ashore on the east and west coasts.

There were no appreciable changes in the lines yesterday as the Americans, holding more than two-thirds of the eight-square-mile island, built up their positions for a great, scale assault on the rocky, defence-studded north end.

In Washington yesterday, Navy Secretary Forrestal disclosed on his return from a visit to two that 2,056 Marines have been killed, adding the loss was not out of proportion to the importance of taking the island. It is needed to put American fighter planes and heavy bombers within range of Japan.

Both Mr. Forrestal and Admiral Nimitz have given the incomplete count of Japanese dead found inside Allied lines as more than 13,500. Other enemy dead are known to be buried under smashed pillboxes.

Mr. Forrestal's account of 2,056 Marines killed made two from the standpoint the bloodiest battleship of the war in the Pacific.

PICTON

Salvation Army Citadel Damaged By Basement Fire

Picton, March 6 — Fire which broke out in the Salvation Army Citadel early Sunday afternoon did damage amounting to more than two thousand dollars. The outbreak was confined to the basement but extensive damage was done to furnishings and the interior upstairs.

The fire was discovered by the officer in charge, Adjutant D. E. Strachan, who, an hour earlier, had been in the Citadel and had checked the furnace. Firemen are of the opinion that combustion in the furnace may have forced open the door, along with live coals. The basement, used for Sunday School classes, was gutted.

There are no windows in the basement and firemen chopped holes in the hardwood floors to get at the flames which destroyed most of the damage. The Picton fire brigade was assisted by the R.C.A.F. fire department.

A piano in the Citadel was ruined as was a quantity of Bibles and hymn books, as well as many chairs.

Sunday night service was held in the Presbyterian Church. An offer of the Canadian Legion to use their hall was accepted and several other local churches also offered accommodation.

Fortunately, none of the Sunday School scholars were present when the outbreak was discovered.

The loss is partly covered by insurance.

RESCUED BY FIREMEN

Londion, Ont., March 6 —(CP)— Two young girls were trapped on an island north of the Dundas Street bridge yesterday by a sudden rise in the Thames river, and were rescued by city firemen. One of the girls, June Holden, was rescued with her family from a burning home two weeks ago.

Salvation Army Red Shield Report

The R.S.W.A. has got away to a good start in its work for 1941. There is still a great demand for articles suitable for overseas, as well as for women's and children's clothing to be distributed among the bomb-sufferers in England and other lands as soon as opportunity for distribution arises. The local Red Shield Group known as the Home League has also given its attention to the making of women's and children's clothing, bandages, etc., and Mrs. Fred Wardle has collected scraps necessary for this work which is going ahead rapidly, encouraged by the efforts of other groups in and around the district.

During 1944, four hundred pairs of sox, mitts, socks and seventy sweaters, besides numerous other articles of clothing and bedding were dispatched to our supplying centre in Toronto. Some very encouraging letters have come from recipients of much needed comforts.

Cash contributions for 1944 amounted to $464 donated by the following branches: Belleville Ladies' Auxiliary; Belleville Agricultural Society; South Hastings Y.P.U.; Women's Conservative Club; Stirling Women's Institute; Thurlow Neighbors' Aid; Knit-Wit Club; Rosemore War Workers; Rivers Valley War Workers; Quinte Women's Institute; Melrose Women's Institute; Gilead War Workers; Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E.; Highland Ave. Group; Salvation Army Div. H.Q. Montreal; Bethlehem White Shrine; Mrs. J. Donaldson Avondale Neighbors' Aid; Belleville Salvage Committee; Order of the Eastern Star.

Contributions in work and goods were received from The Salvation Army Home League; College Hill Group; Holloway St., Church War Workers; Melrose Women's Institute; St. Thomas' Guild; Stirling Women's Institute; St. John Refugee Club, Christian Missionary Alliance War Workers; Quinte Rebekah Lodge, King George Home and School Association, Knit-Wit Club, Lonsdale Women's Association, Highland Ave., Group, Plainfield Women's Institute; Canadian Legion, Rosemore War Workers, S.S. No. 20 Thurlow, Shannonville, Thurlow Neighbors' Aid, Order of the Eastern Star, Elzevir War Workers, Mrs. Hopping, Mrs. Saylor, Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Robert Mitchell, Thurlow.

There is a great need for knitters. The boys at the Front are still asking for socks, and there is a great opportunity right here to bring comfort to the boys who cannot give up fighting, even when they are very tired, although some people at times get tired of knitting.

FASHION FLASHES

NEW HIGHS are reached in this season's hats, with high crowns and high-placed trimmings sharing interest. Milan straw in black is used for a neat little sailor given height by closely arranged sprays of white, yellow and black dahlias caught by bright blue moire-taffeta bows.

It must be that tiny toddlers like their housecoats too, because some manufacturers are putting out housecoats in sizes 2 to 6. One detestable model is of sheer spun rayon with pink polka dots, with buttoned bodice and self sash tied with sash ends. Eyelet embroidered insertion trims the square neck and puff sleeves.

Miss going for a suit is the combination of a tailored jacket and one of brown shirt, bodice, in soft woollen. The jacket has beautifully draped shoulders, easy sleeves and a nipped-in waist. Skirt is pencil-slim.

Big time ahead for the silk coat. A charming model is in gray, black and wine surah silk, collarless with tiny revers and set-in self belt with brilliant-set square buckle. Cut on flared tunic lines, it has set-in sleeves and turn-back cuffs. Pockets have stripes in horizontal formation.

(A Mistake in Printing)

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

When we received Jane's wedding invitations were delivered from the printers, we discovered that there is a mistake in the printing. The first line reads that Jane is the only child and the first word of the next line is "requested". We are in a quandry as to whether to send out the invitations or not. Do you think it would be too much of the social error if we sent them out with the notes? My daughter is a college graduate and I would hate to have her as a reflection on her if they are sent out. Jane's.

I agree, most emphatically, with your daughter. A formal wedding invitation is a most important social item, and should be perfect in every detail. Sending invitations with such a flagrant grammatical error would certainly be a social error.

If the invitations are engraved, it is possible for the engraver to change that line on the plate and then print them over again. Customarily an engraver or printer submits a proof of the invitation, for the approval of the customer.) If the invitations are printed, there is of course no alternative but the word can be re-set.

If time and additional expense are an item with you, I suggest that rather than send out the incorrect invitations (which would, I should thing, cause raised eyebrows!), send written notes of invitation.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Arab Women Discard Veils and Demand Rights

Much straight, hard thinking has been done on the back of that Arabian veiled sisterhood according to accounts from Cairo, Egypt. The former veil-wearing ladies don't peep at life through one-way veils any more. They have quietly have been keeping up with the world. They've been holding a counsel and taking matters into their own hands.

The amazing thing to women of the Occident is that the veiled, two-way veils (views from within and without) are to be worn no more. Also, the custom which the custom of harem life, and plurality of wives is being discussed in the Arab Women's Congress.

They're opposing polygamy on the part of their husbands not for themselves, but because other wives mean hardship unless the husband is rich "beyond the dreams of avarice".

They point out that when one men marry as many wives as the law will allow, (about four) it leads to grief, not only for them but for the wives themselves but for the children.

Inferior education results from these patriarchial families. How can a poor man afford to educate forty or fifty children when he is so head in the house? The feelings of the Arabian women in having to divide the affection of a fractional husband does not seem to enter into the argument at all. The protest is strictly economical —not enough food for the growing-up, not enough education for the children.

Nor does the erstwhile veiled sisterhood stop with their objections to harem life, polygamy, lack of education for the young. No! they object to the Arab system of divorce. A man has the right to divorce his wife after he says, three times: "I divorce you". The current practice in divorce cases is to give the custody of the children to the father, the Woman's Congress insists that children be left in the mother's care.

Hear! Hear! The Congress contends "The Arab male has up to the present time been only a weak imitator of his Western brother in economic, social and political life". The hundred or more women attending the conference have discarded veils and flowing costumes and made their demands in well-cut, tailored gowns. Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt will receive minutes of the conference.

Members of the Evening Branch of the W.A. of Christ Church met in the Parish Hall, Monday evening for the monthly business meeting and entertainment, when plans were discussed for a tea, to be held on Saturday, April 5, as well as a rummage sale. Devotional study was conducted by Mrs. R. J. Pitt, the subject being "Lenten Duties". BRIDGE STREET CHURCH, W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Bridge Street United Church, was held in the Ladies' Parlors, on Friday, with Mrs. R. J. D. F. Davidson in the chair.

A letter was read reporting for the Christian Citizenship and Temperance Committee, said it was very evident that a strong and determined liquor industry was interested in increasing the output and consumption of liquor, and that it intended in the current endeavor of the churches to do everything in their power to cause a decrease in the use of liquor and that the presidents of Home and School clubs "be aware of the need to help with this cause.

Mrs. Baker also suggested that steps be taken to try and have beer parlors and liquor stores closed on Victory Day.

Miss Leona Riggs played the accompaniment for a solo on the American Folk song, "I Wonder as I Wander".

Mrs. Finkle's group was in charge of the lunch at the afternoon.

Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Donaldson had charge of the Devotional Service and were assisted in the study by Mrs. Hibbard, Mrs. Holmes, Mrs. Boyd, Miss Anderson and Mrs. Lee.

Mrs. Finkle introduced the subject of the afternoon, "A Study of the Malayan Peninsula and The Netherlands East Indies", taken from the Study Book, "West of the Dateline".

Mrs. Hibbard continued with an account of the size of these islands, the population and the peoples. Mrs. Holmes spoke of religions in the islands and conditions of health and climate.

Miss Anderson told the story of the first missionaries to go there.

Mrs. Cole gave a description of Singapore and told of its importance in that part of the world and the story of its founding.

The Marry Go Round

Tabloid Philosophy

"Mein Kampf", Hitler's perfect plan was like an invention for perpetual motion which, my professor of Physics once demonstrated, "It was complete, except it was not working!"

Wastesets

Wastesets for women are more popular than ever this Spring; yet I cannot see it as a logical clue to the reason for such a fad.

A man wears a waist coat to hid his suspenders, of course! Sometimes may be more beautiful than they show were, but they still suggest corset' bed and cabbage.

Most of a man's clothes are thoughtless. The waistcoat was an "after-thought" to the suspenders; and suspenders were an "after-thought" to trousers. Now that women are wearing trous—I mean slacks—their clothes may soon be as illogical and uncomfortable as a man's!

Psychology of the Wolf

"A pramitrope", says Walter Winchell's Girl Friday "is a man who imagines himself a wolf." Well, what other kind of man do you know? Even the most domesticated husband believes that he could be a Casanova if it were not for his love for his wife.

It's only the genuine "wolf" who never THINKS of himself as a "wolf" but as a Romeo, or a Prince Charming.

The Weeds Of It.

"Would a woman rather love or BE loved?" is a question we asked on a quiz program. Here's the answer.

The big need of a normal woman's life is to LOVE; and when a man loves her enough to let her deluge him with her emotions, she is happy.

If a woman hasn't a man or a child on whom to lavish her affections, she will harbish them on a pet dog or a cat.

In short, a man wants to live first, and love after. But a woman wants to LOVE first, last and all the time.

Odds and Ends

When a man begins by saying, "I never flatter a girl", hold onto your heart and head around the corner of his conversation. He line is apt to be the kind that will make you dizzy.

The average man's idea of Hell and future punishment would probably be an eternal spring housecleaning with 12 moving days a year.

One thing that a woman never can understand is that there are times when a man MUST break loose and make a fool of himself. Usually in spring!

Are you wearing your neighbor's corset?

You may wear the same make and model, but that doesn't mean you're wearing "hers". You may be wearing the same shape, the same size, but unless you're wearing the proper foundation for the latter proportion, A Graduate Corset Counselor takes ALL your measurements ...prescribes your corset from as many as 77 models in a single factory. Old and New Worlds Linked by Waterway

Washington, March 6 (CP)— A poem depicting the St. Lawrence Waterway as a great highway linking the farmlands and factories of Ontario and Western Canada and the Middle Western States with the countries of the Old World, was recently placed in the United States Congressional Record by Chas. P. Wasielewski, Democratic Congressman from Wisconsin.

The 12-stanza poem by Fred R. Blair, entitled Northeast Passage, was also published by the Milwaukee Journal.—

Looking out over Lake Huron, from Bayfield in Huron County
Ontario, the poet pictures the waters of the Great Lakes pouring their overflow "into the river that leaps and smiles down through the emerald Thousand Isles, for hundreds of old blazers into the great gulf below"

And I dreamed of a new bright thing

When all this great domain,
Landlocked and languishing, would be Opened to the world, and free

To load the highways of the sea
With its iron, coal and grain."

Blair goes on to, describe the growth of new cities and hundreds of thousands of workers engaged in constructing the waterway.

The poem continues:

"I saw the Northeast Passage
Carved out to these inland ports,
And ships of every nation stand
In harbors of a once closed land,
And new winds blow on every hand

New life and fresh emotion

"I saw the minds once lulled
In isolationist sleep,
Through contact with the world
awake

To wide horizons; and the brake
Of narrow judgment, fall and shake

Under the salt wind's sweep.

"I saw the inland cities
Opened to all the earth;
Chicago and London proudly stood

Arm in arm in the brotherhood
Of great world ports, and found it good,
And learned each other's worth."

POST-WAR ERA UP TO YOUTH

Nottingham, England, March 6— (CP)— A warning to men and women in the armed forces that they must not look for the "better world" they say all desire as soon as they get out of uniform has been given by Rev. Leon R. Fitzpatrick, national chairman of the British Legion.

He told the Midland area annual conference that the Legion must do its best to see that ex-servicemen and women did not suffer unduly in comparison with other people, but it would be for the younger generation itself to build the new world. Patience would be needed, and it would be the "worst possible leadership" to hold out hopes that could lead only to disappointment.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Mar. 6 —(CP)— Five Typhoons up in the starlit sky over Germany a cat-eyed fellow from the Little town of Bassano, Alta., first his scream and engraved himself in Canadian air force annals.

From behind the gun-sights of his Mosquito, Flt. Lt. Ben Plumer, D.F.C., watched an enemy fighter plane disintegrate from a few huge explosive shells, plummet to the ground and blow up. It was an Me 410, first such plane to fall to a Canadian night fighter and 50th enemy aircraft to be destroyed since D-Day by the City of Saint John Cougar Squadron.

There was a bit of a celebration when Plumer and his English observer returned to their continental base. The kill pushed the Cougars further ahead as the leading Allied night fighter unit, with two more planes destroyed than the second place Canadian Thunderbirds squadron.

The Heinkel, one of the latest types used by the Luftwaffe as a night fighter, was circling near Aachen, searching for stragglers from an Allied bombing raid, when Plumer jumped it from above and astern. Only 27 shells from the four cannon were expended in the destruction. Then as Plumer destroyed his kill, a JU 188, several months ago.

His second kill, for which he received the D.F.C., was scored without a shot being fired when the 28-year-old pilot, flying his disabled Mosquito on one engine, chased an ME 110 into the ground.

One 500-pound bomb, dropped by Flt. Lt. Hank Leriaux (132 Hampton Ave.) Toronto, and Flt. Lt. Bill Sewell of (377 Picadilly St.) London, Ont., pilot and navigator respectively, said the bomb dropped "smack dab" in the centre of the factory, a huge building with three smoke stacks. A rush of flame followed and when the aircraft left the area the entire building was ablaze.

"We must have hit something vital," said Leriaux, who went to Canada from Holland with his parents as a child of 11, "It was just as if the bomb had exploded in an oil tank."

Air Marshal Robert Leckie, chief of the R.C.A.F. air staff, completed a tour of the Canadian Bomber Group and a banquet in his honor that "there is a quiet, restrained feeling of tremendous pride in Canada for the achievements of the Canadian Bomber Group." The message was tendered by the Group's senior officers.

During the tour the air marshal presented Bristol Airplane Trophy to Wing Cmdr. A. C. Blackburn of Ottawa, N. S., commanding officer of the Bluenose Squadron which, during 1944, made the greatest number of recorded bombing accuracy. He presented the Handley-Page Trophy to Wing Cmdr. Jack Ferguson of Sarnia, Ont., commanding officer of the Moose Squadron which flies Canadian-built Lancasters. The trophy is awarded monthly to the Canadian squadron having the lowest accident rate.

Officer's "Mike" Makes Jaywalkers Keep to the Mark

Vancouver Traffic Cop Makes Pedestrians Obey Stop Signal by Dint of Public Embarrassment

By KATHLEEN REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Vancouver, March 6 (CP)—When Jaywalker Jane hears 'The Voice say 'Lady, lady—get back on that sidewalk where you belong...' She doesn't stay to swoon. She turns stop-signal red and destins to wait until the traffic light opposite her gives the "Go" sign.

'You are the lady' Enoug, it—isn't Frankie gangling over that vitriolic phone at Granville and Hastings Streets, Vancouver's busiest intersection. It's Freddie. And he's not to be trifled with. He's Traffic Constable Fred Dougherty, the Cop of the Stop Sign.

For a year now Constable Dougherty has ruled the downtown corner with his three-face traffic light and public address system. With its special pedestrian signal, only one of its kind in Canada, the light was installed a year ago at a cost of $2,500. It was sth result of long years of traffic study by city planners and scratched bumpers at the corner.

Now the pedestrian, like the motorist, has his own signal which he must obey. On one corner stands Fred Dougherty, mike in hand. And when he catches someone trying to beat the light he tells him all about it, and the hundred or so shoppers up in the next block.

After a years training period Constable Dougherty thinks at last he has Vancouver educated. "I don't have to use this mike much at all these days except to hustle along a slow-poke now and again," he said.

Other Centres Inquire.

Seattle, Portland, Ore., Toronto and Montreal traffic officials have inquired about the new system. At first members thought it wouldn't work—figured the average person would object to a bawling out in public.

"Not many of them really get sore," said the Cmar of the Corner. "If officers their ago ben thayre only temporarily ruffled. I always take pains never to insult them—just ridicule a little. And oh, how deflating it is to be made fun of with the rest of the world looking on."

But plenty of humor spices Constable Dougherty's job.

"I'll never forget a certain plump dowager," he reminisced. "She would insist on crossing against the light...Finally I had to tick her off. 'Ah, ah, ah—trot along back and wait for the green light, that's a good girl.'

"Later she came over to where I stood: 'Young man you're making fun of me? What do you mean by telling me to be a good girl!'

"'Why lady,' I said, 'From across the street you didn't look a day over 18'.

"Humph,' she stamped off. '... You Irish rogue!'

"See what I mean?" the Cmar concluded, "you've got to flatter them."

"I have the greatest confidence in mustard," Mrs. E. M. Bishop of Calgary, Alberta, insists. "I know full well how much it helped our son, Donald," Mrs. Klimp continues.

"Donald had a serious chest congestion at the age of three. I got busy with mustard poultices, which I made by beating up the white of an egg and adding flour and mustard. After the poultice came off I covered the chest with flannel, to protect against further colds. This treatment is so good I know it helped bring Donald back to good health."

"When my boy was little, he often got croup, and we had to guard him against cold feet and chills. I used the mustard treatment to help with that, too."

Mustard Relieves Rheumatism, Too

People everywhere in Canada tell us about the help they get from mustard in baths or poultices, in combating colds and chest congestions and in relieving the chronic pains of rheumatism. It also helps ease the discomfort of arthritis, neuritis and neuralgia.

When treating with mustard poultices, remove each poultice within twenty minutes. If symptoms are serious, it is wise to consult your doctor.

A giant of a man in his athletic prime, Hagen is a rugged, hard-broad-jumper and hurdler. Though he weighed about 190 pounds all of the century in 9.8 seconds, covered 220 yards in less than 22 seconds and was able to leap 22 feet in the broad jump.

Probably one of Montreal's greatest track men, his duels with Bobby Kerr of Hamilton were classics of the Canadian cinders in the era prior to the First Great War.

SYD HOWE EQUALS RECORD AMASSED BY NELS STEWART

Has 514-Point Total for Fifteen Years of Play in National League

Montreal, March 4 — (CP) — The weekly National Hockey League scoring statistics had a neat "sy" in the points column for Syd Howe of the Detroit Red Wings tonight as the veteran forward has equalled the 514-point total amassed by Nels Stewart in 15 seasons of play, Howe moved into the record-equalling position during the weekend.

Stewart had 332 goals and 182 assists when he left the N.H.L. in 1940. Howe is still well behind in goals, but ahead in assists, with his 182 tallies and 332 assists being tied for the total to the point record.

After 15 years of play, Howe is right up among the present N.H.L. leaders. His 20 points on 11 goals and 34 assists puts him in fifth spot in the scoring parade, behind Toronto Maple Leafs' Billy Thyre—Maurice Richard, Elmer Lach, Montreal Canadiens and Bill Cowley of Boston.

Cowley is leading the parade with 70 points and 49 assists, two points to equal the record compiled by Richard last season. Like Howe, Richard is in second spot with 68 points, scoring 30 goals and 38 assists each, and a point ahead of Blake with 67 on 30 and 37.

Cowley, incidentally now has 313 assists in N.H.L. play, the first man in league history to crack the 300-mark in assists. Frank Boucher, the only other player to accomplish the feat, is 13 points behind.

Syl Apps of Toronto still holds the penalty leadership with 66 minutes in majors and minors, 11 minutes more than New York's Bob Dill.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

Danny Webb of Montreal, contended as the best amateur boxing title, outpunched Jim Brady of Toronto, Canadian amateur welterweight champion, last night at Montreal, England, and the referee hailed the scheduled 10-round battle in the seventh round because of the punishment the Montrealer was absorbing. Brady went down several times under the Negro's wallops in the early rounds.

Bob Wallon of Pittsburgh Pirates still was holding first place in the Ontario Baseball Association Hockey League last night but his margin was cut to two points by Bob Gracie of the same team while Burlington, Trudel and Cunningham, all of Cleveland were bunched up. Wallon's aggregate stood at 66 points.

The four-man nominating committee of the Major Leagues held a meeting at the Hotel Pennsylvania yesterday but had no announcement to make regarding the successor to the late Kenesaw M. Landis as baseball commissionership.

Don Webster of Hershey Bears was reported in critical condition in a Buffalo hospital last night after the piercing of his groin by a broken stick during a game with Buffalo Bisons in the American Hockey League here last night.

Gunder Haegg, Swedish miler, announced at New York yesterday that he would go to the post in a special indoor race there next Saturday night despite his poor showing last week-end when he finished fifth in a five-man field. His visit to the U. S. may be extended, as he has a date later in other parts of the country including the Penn relays April 27-26.

The racing season at Polo Park will consist of spring and fall meetings, with no summer scheduled card, it was announced at Winnipeg yesterday. Fall meets being scheduled for June 16-July 5 and Aug. 11-Sept. 13, with the $6,000 Canadian Derby scheduled for July 2. The Prairie season opens at Calgary May 24.

Russ Speed Skaters Strong For Records

Moscow, March 4 — (CP) — Russian speed skaters, both men and women, will make a strong bid this season to break national and world records.

Speed skating, one of Russia's oldest and most popular winter sports, will be on almost as high a plane as in pre-war days with various city, district and trade union championships deciding entries for the U.S.S.R. cities. In addition, the Labor Reserves Sport Society will hold its own titular meet for juvenile speedsters.

When Soviet power was established, speed skating always was well developed. Like all other games, it was recognized as a mass sport and before the war more than 115,000 competed in official races, one-quarter of them women.

In pre-revolutionary years Russia had many outstanding ice speedsters and the first races were held in 1864 by the St. Petersburg Speed Skaters Club. From that beginning the country produced speed and figure skaters who won European honors.

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

Two friends were having a drink. Presently a stranger entered his sombre path.

"I say, old man," said one, "I believe that's the Bishop of—"

"I bet you half-a-crown, you're wrong."

"All right; I'll go 'and ask him."

He went up to the soberly-dressed man and asked: "Excuse me, sir, but aren't you the Bishop of—? It would settle an argument if you would tell me."

The stranger eyed him balefully and growled:—

"Mind your own so-and-so business!"

The other retreated hastily and returned to his friend.

"He won't tell me," he said sadly; "so now we shall never know."

News of Honey Tompkins.

Forgetting that Honey Tompkins was a principal cog in the wheel that brought Belleville O.H.A. championship back in 1927, Peterboro's Fred Craig delves into the records for some interesting data on the former Essexonto-born star. Says Fred: "Honey Tompkins has played so much hockey for Peterborough that he's been prominent in sport circles here for years. But that it almost seems as if he had always been in that city. Yes, years ago tonight however the clever right-winger was in there battling against the young Petes in a junior O.H.A. fracas. Tompkins' mates was the star of the Newmarket Gibbards, managed by Walter Arrow and worked on a line with the two Jackson brothers who later starred for Belleville against the Petes, Burton, Ned Vitarelli and Russ Kingdon, afterwards to be teammates of Tompkins in many O.H.A. arguments. handed the Peterboro team their first beating of the season that night, winning 8 to 1 Tompkins, incidentally scored the only Napanee goal, late in the third period. Afterward when he came to Peterborough and played against Belleville it is a matter of history that he had marry a battle with the Jackson brothers who had been his teammates in the Gibbard days."

Remember When.

The mile record held by Torchy Peden of Victoria, B.C., was bettered at Los Angeles ten years ago today by Frank Barte, bewhiskered Czechoslovakian, . . . skimmed around a track at the astounding speed of 60.5th miles an hour four miles an hour better than the redheaded Canadian's mark.

Most Unhappy.

Hockey puck fans who attended the Kingston at Belleville junior O.H.A. game were most disappointed. The wife of Referee Mike Rodden, so-much-so protests have been forwarded to O.H.A. executive members. The local club executives are all aware of the fact the Kingston club is a much better team throughout, but they did take exception to Mr. Rodden's continuous arguing with fans and players alike, to say Fred Reid, vice president of the Bears. Matters became so bad Saturday night that Billy Mahoney, generally a cool, collected player, took a swing at the official for which he was rightly given a misconduct penalty, but it just shows how an official can aggravate a team. Of course it was a typical Kingston-Belleville series with no love lost by either side.

This and That.

Sports Roundup

(Associating From Sport Writer)

New York, March 4 —(AP)— Track fans, who have been asking for weeks when Gunder Haegg and Swift Swede failed to appear, still were asking the same question after Sunday's indoor debut last Saturday . . . The various explanations that were offered at yesterday's gathering of the track writers only served to emphasize the difference between outdoor and indoor running. Haegg, who said he "felt like sleep in the legs and thighs" before the race, readily admitting that he had a lot to learn about board-track racing but said he liked what he had seen of it . . . and Emil Von Elling, New York University coach who specializes in timing up milers, pointed out that Gunder had only one workout after his arrival while Fred Wilt, Indiana was an intercollegiate success Indoors, used to get enough practice at different kinds of fairly drills for a long stretch before he actually raced . . . Haegg plans to take a few more lessons on how to hit the curves.

CHICAGO HAWKS HAVE CHANCE TO MAKE PLAYOFFS

Five More Games to Play and One With Rangers Will Really Count

By The Canadian Press

With less than two weeks left in the regular National Hockey League schedule, rivalry seems just about at an end for the first three positions in the N.H.L. standings. The big question now is who will finally take over fourth place?

Colling-wood Chicago Black Hawks surprised all Sunday night when they overcame Montreal Canadiens, 3-2. Windy City team's sudden upsurge actually upset all calculations as to who were the most likely to get up in that fourth playoff berth.

The "sure thing" last week for fourth place looked to be Boston Bruins and a loss to New York Rangers were given a chance by observers. That's why Tobin's team looks good as a play-off prospect.

Hawks have five more games to play, three of which are against New York Rangers. The way Toronto Maple Leafs have been going Sunday night, Chicago fans should be happy if only three team plays as is did against Canadiens.

Calisthenics Seen As Aid to Athletes

New York, March 6 — (CP) — Major leagues could improve professional baseball greatly about 30 per cent this season if club owners take a hint from Army and have players got in good physical shape, declares Eddie McCormack.

McCormack, who put in 16 years of physical directing, would put the diamond athletes through 30-minute drills consisting of calisthenics, mat work, running and hike riding.

"Physical conditioning helped the Brooklyn Dodgers win the National League pennant in 1941," says Eddie.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 823
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

With partner playing in a 3-9, the game is not much fun. What happens? Absolutely to a dog. At least, that's been the case. He usually snafu's a trick, draws trump at my great chagrin, he says: "Where you play bridge with me, I never seem to win."

See what could happen in this deal:

NORTH
♠A 8 2
♥J 9 3
♦A Q 7 5
♣K 9 4

WEST — EAST
♠A 6 — ♠10 7 2
♥K Q 7 5 — ♥10 3
♦9 8 3 — ♦K 10 4
♣9 8 5 — ♣7 10 7 3 2

SOUTH
♠K Q J 5 4
♥A 6 4 2
♦J 6 2
♣Q J

South was declarer at a bid of four spades. The opening lead from west was the heart king. Winning that with the south ace, declarer saw that trumps was taken at once and there went the old ball game.

When the diamond finesse failed, opponents took two heart tricks. Then and their trump ace took the four tricks that made a wreck out of many contract.

That's the way so many makable bids are flung into the ashcan. And never does that sorry feeling come to my great chagrin, he says: "Where you play bridge with me, I never seem to win."

See what could happen in this deal:

When south wins the first trick with heart ace, the club ace should be cashed. A diamond lead should be won with dummy ace and the king and queen of clubs led to draw trump.

On these, south shuffs two hearts and his worries are over. He will now lose no more than one heart trick. So, he can afford to lose a diamond and the trump trick.

In nearly every contract, some sort of ducking technique is necessary. And there is hardly a hand where you will not find more than one plan of attack.

To plan ahead will likely save you portion; from an early grave.

BARBARA SCOTT, OTTAWA, WINS SKATING TITLE

16-Year-Old Girl Has Eye On Olympic Title If Games Revived

New York, March 6 (CP)—On an alley-way bench beyond the brilliant lights where she had just given the display that won her the North American senior ladies' figure skating championship at Madison Square Garden last night, 16-year-old Barbara Scott of Ottawa revealed almost mischievously that she has her pretty eye socked on an Olympic title—"if ever the games are revived."

Both Barbara Ann and Otto Goldie, her quiet-spoken Czechoslovakian coach, realize there is a lot of work ahead, but both are satisfied with the progress the Minto Skating Club star has made since she began skating at "about seven."

At 16 she was in what Otto calls "gold medal class," and for the last two years has held the Canadian senior championship.

Judges awarded the 5-ft. fifth Canadian four firsts and two second places, which gave her the title over the United States' champion, blond Gretchen Merrill of Boston, who received two firsts and four seconds. Third place went to Jannette Ahrens of St. Louis.

Barbara Ann won the heart of the crowd with her free skating when she held a graceful "sit" spin waiting for the music to reach the required tempo. Her margin for victory was gained in one night in which she showed that she had Barbara Ann to the North American title. Her performance of the year she trains on the ice for seven hours a day, 5 1-2 days a week.

Meeting in the African Jungle

Just before darkness fell, we reached the village of Repuia where we were to spend the night. As we approached, the carriers began their bellowed musical announcement: "Big white man coming!" It's an exciting event in the villages' live. The whole town is way out to meet us: men, women, children, dogs and goats. The chief in civilized trousers and sensational yellow cane topper shook hands.

John, with his sense of the ridiculously appropriate, added the finishing touch by firing a salute with his rifle. We made our triumphant entry!

Native boys had been sent ahead a day's journey to prepare a lodging place for us. They had chosen a square mud hut with three rooms and a porch under its thatched roof. The veranda had been decorated with palm branches, camp cots had been set up in each of the rooms, and bath water was heating over an open fire in the town "kitchen" next door.

Boyuah and I set about preparing supper. "Chop boxes" were opened, and out came dishes, silverware, cooking utensils, and food. As Boyuah and I worked, I counted thirty-five spectators around the two open sides of the little veranda. Patiently they watched our every gesture. When I moved to the right, a cloud of heads swayed in that direction. If I moved something, thirty-five necks stretched simultaneously to see what it was.

We ate at a table on the porch, lighted by a lantern in each side. Seventy eyes rolled with every bite we took; no one left until we had finished the last crumb.

On our return trip we stopped again in Repuia. The town was distant, and off our road, were large cocoa plantations under the direction of the Polish Colonial and Maritime League. We had heard there was a Mr. Armin there, so we sent a note ahead, to ask if we might not visit the plantation. His reply urged us to come for lunch.

A tall, blond man, in his early thirties, he bowed and graciously greeted us on the slope of the hill where he had built his concrete bungalow. He invited us in, and immediately ordered tea.

When I told him that my maiden name Dearmin, was the anglicized form of the French D'Armin he said, "Then, you remain!" He bowed low, kissed my hand, and revealed what he knew of the family, its origin in what is now Germany

Teen-Age Indians Nonchalant About 1,000-Mile Jaunt

Militia Rangers from Widely Separated Areas of British Columbia to Attend Christmas Training Course

By KATHLEEN REY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Chilliwack, B.C., March 3 (CP)—They were a couple of teen age Indian fishermen, both members of the Pacific Coast Militia Rangers, and they couldn't understand why any newspaper person was interested in a trip from Alaska, 1,000 miles north of the Nass River, which they ha made to attend a two-week rangers' course here.

After all they didn't see what was so extraordinary about coming by canoe, snowshoe and on foot through the frozen bushland to take courses in map-reading and bush fighting along with 20 other rangers from other parts of British Columbia.

The only food they took along with them for the 60-mile hike between Aiyansh and Prince Rupert was some of the fish and dry berry cakes for a camp five miles from there," he said.

"Yeah, I was walking down the river with him," his friend Kenneth Cecil took up the conversation. "There was a plop—I looked around and there he was in the water—just happened to be a soft spot in the ice. That's all."

Shy About Publicity

Herbert and Kenneth were shy of interviews. They sat on each of the wooden benches in the "schoolroom" part of the Pacific Coast Militia Rangers hut, tearing through their scribblers and waiting for the map-reading classes to begin.

They said they hoped the P.C.M.R. would not be disbanded after the war. Up in Aiyansh, when they were not fishing, they hunt the ice-pack, guides, trappers and fishermen throughout this province who for the last three years have been volunteer and unpaid members of the P.C.M.R.

Youngest ranger in the group visiting here is a seventeen-year-old Anderson, a fisherman from the Queen Charlotte Islands. Stanley's pals look on him as the "crack shot sergeant" in his P.C.M.R. detachment. Earl Peters, another fisherman from the Queen Charlotte Islands, said he hoped the rangers they would continue after the war because P.C.M.R. men more than once has saved airmen who had been forced to crash somewhere in the wilds of British Columbia. Stanley said he felt the P.C.M.R. job of spotting aircraft in distress had become almost as important as the job for which the unit had originally been intended—keeping Japanese saboteurs from landing in this province.

Leader of the group now attending the P.C.M.R. training school is Capt. A. E. Nelson, a fisherman from the tiny settlement of Metlakatla at the mouth of the Nass River.

"It's when the fishing season closes that I get the most time for ranger duties," he explained. He said: "We rangers have had three years training... we're ready for anything...and just let any Jap come this way and you'll see how well take care of them."

Nelson, with his sense of the ridiculously appropriate, added the finishing touch by firing a salute with his rifle. We made our triumphant entry!

New Vessel Conquers Lake's Thickest Ice

Wartime ingenuity, which has conquered nature in remote corners of the globe in the last three years, has added another to the conquests—won by opening the Great Lakes, formerly blockaded for four months every winter, to year-round shipping, Frank Steele writes in The New York Herald Tribune.

The instrument which has made this possible is the United States' Coast Guard's new 5,000-ton ice-breaker Mackinaw, described by Vice-Admiral Russell R. Waesche, Coast Guard commandant, as "the most powerful and best constructed and designed" ship of her type in the world.

The Mackinaw in her first two years of operation made two mid-winter trips through the "Soo," the St. Mary's River and the Straits of Mackinac, former bottlenecks to winter traffic on the lakes, to break paths for four new ocean-going cargo ships and also freed a new navy transport from the ice-bound harbor at Bay City, Michigan.

Praised, All-Year Service.

These unprecedented voyages have convinced the Coast Guard that the Great Lakes, the world's most important inland waterway, need not be closed from December until April because of ice conditions.

Although year-round cargo traffic on the lakes is not immediately contemplated, the use of the Mackinaw is expected to lengthen the regular shipping season at least six weeks beginning this spring and to make midwinter emergency trips such as those just completed commonplace.

The extension of the shipping season, by opening the lanes about three weeks earlier in the spring and keeping them open longer in the fall, will eliminate the annual danger that stock piles of iron ore from the mines of Minnesota's ranges accumulated by steel mills during the summer will be depleted before the ice breaks in the spring, Lake Superior Open.

The lakes, themselves, although fresh water, do not freeze over except in very harbors and a few up to five to 10 miles around the shore in bays. But with channels to other bodies of water, the ice breaks in the spring and fills rivers, straits and canals connecting the lakes which freeze to a depth of several feet.

The Coast Guard believes that the Mackinaw's wartime operations have established regard for the post-war prospect of lengthening the Great Lakes shipping season, amply justify her cost, unofficially placed at more than $10,000,000.

"The ice-breaks; approximates in size a small cruiser, being 290 feet long with a beam of 74½ feet and carries 12 officers and 164 enlisted men. She is insulated throughout with cork to keep the crew comfortable in temperatures of 30 degrees below zero.

Engines Are Powerful.

In addition to 1½-inch plates, reinforced on the lakes, and six Diesel and two electrical engines developing a total of 10,000 horsepower, the Mackinaw has two icebreaking devices.

One is a bow propeller designed to suck the water from under the ice directly ahead of the ship. This makes it easier for the cut-away bow to break heavy ice into small chunks.

The second is four-internconnected tanks which water may be shifted to "trim" the ship from bow to stern, or from port to starboard to free it from the ice. Powerful pumps will shift 14,000 gallons of water from one tank to another in a minute, rocking the ship like a baby's cradle.

Eight Feet of Ice.

Since the first operation of the Mackinaw on its initial runs has been completed, Lt.-Cmdr. Torlief Berg, Norwegian-born Coast Guard officer, who has had 30 years' experience in lake shipping with the car fleet of the United States Steel Corporation, that she can break through eight feet of ice—the thickest the lakes have to offer.

She plowed through 30 inches of solid blue ice as though it were soft butter on her first trial and also negotiated without difficulty windrows of drifted ice as much as 10 feet high.

London, March 6 — (CP) — A strike of London dock workers which began six days ago assumed even more serious proportions today as a port official announced that approximately 10,000 men now are idle. Seamen had been reported out up to yesterday.

Union representatives meeting last weekend refused the men to go back to work today, but the port official declared:

"There is no prospect of the men coming in today."

The only situation the government last night assigned hundreds of additional soldiers to the task of carrying cargo, making up 2,000 the number so engaged.

The main grievance of the strikers concerns the system of hiring the men and the treatment of absentees.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER 10

"I am," Cherry was relieved to have Amy assume brief details of history of her hopeless passion for the young Haitian who had given her lessons on the violin at school. It was very sweet, Amy understood, when Cherry could not help laughing. She had smuggled letters to him and he had promised to send a word of honor to get a divorce and Emma said her grandmother and Uncle Jud if he could manage it.

"Can't divorce! You mean he was married?" Cherry was so honestly shocked that Amy was more pleased than ever.

"Certainly he was, but he didn't love his wife. All the nice men are married."

"You oughtn't to talk that way!" Cherry protested, and Amy was happier still and went on into ramifications and embroideries innumerable. "You, with your position and your wealth and your family and everything, to fall for a married violin teacher!" Cherry said severely more than once.

"As if those things mattered!" Amy answered airily. "They don't matter at all when you have them!"

"That's the only time they do matter, isn't it," Cherry thought. "You've the ones that value them!" But she said nothing aloud, and the evening proved to be very pleasant. And she was driven home in state by Rousseau.

There was a light in Emma's room when she quietly climbed the stairs. Cherry went in, sat down near the bed and poured out the story of the day.

Emma listened in the convalescent mood of weary contentment until Cherry came to the telephone from Fran that Cherry on the return let-some, first to the Marshbanks house.

"Why on earth didn't she drop you here if you were dripping wet!"

"Well, it weren't quite dripping. We'd sort of dried out over at Mr. Coates' place. But she was worried for fear Judge Marshbanks would be mad at her."

"For asking to have lunch with Mr. Coates!"

"They've got an awful crush on each other, Emma."

The title slipped out, Cherry's face turning red as she heard her voice saying it, and Emma's slow flush learning in her thin cheeks in answer.

"I can't help it; I think of you as Aunt Emma, Cherry said, laughing, but a little frightened.

"You can call me anything you like," Emma conceded briefly. "So Mrs. Marshbanks thinks she's in love with this painter?" she asked.

"She's certainly in love with her," Cherry answered.

"I've never met Judge Marshbanks' second wife," Emma said reflectively, "but I've seen her, and she looks like one of the women who live for that sort of thing. They're always the ones with good husbands too."

"He didn't seem very angry. He came into Amy's room and he was awfully nice. Amy'd had fin, and since we'd had it here, there didn't seem to be much chance of our bringing it back, and so I had to support him, but he didn't care a straw, and it was lots of fun!"

"I thought you didn't like Amy," Emma said, quietly watching.

"Eddie!" Cherry had a swift moment of surprise that Emma knew it. "She was extremely snobbish when we had the dance here for Dorothy," she said; "but she was lovely tonight. Oh, and Aunt Emma! Her grandmother is back; she got back today. She wouldn't come into Amy's room because of the flu...but she brought her all sorts of things—you're sick enough!"

"Not just a little faint. I don't believe I'll ever get my strength back again," Emma whispered. "The doctor—" she battled on, said it would be like this, but it's the worst part of the flu, I think."

"I'll go, Cherry said quickly. "Let me get you some hot milk, Aunt Emma!"

"No; stay a minute Cherry, I'm all right now. So—so she old lady is home, is she?" she asked after. "I thought she was going to divide her time between there and her Palm Beach place. How long is she going to stay?"

"Amy wants to stay here and her grandmother wants to be with Amy. They had an apartment in New York when Amy was at school, and went abroad every summer. Oh, Amy says she likes San Francisco, that it's home. She didn't like her own grandmother will stay; I think maybe Amy does, she's a cross sort of person, isn't she, Aunt Emma?"

"What makes you think so?" asked Emma with an air of casualness.

"Nothing much. But when Mrs. Marshbanks and I were upstairs and I was standing at Amy's door looking in to Amy, she was scolding away about something. One of the servants, I guess. She wouldn't have her in the house, she said, and she knew all about her and Amy wasn't to be bothered!"

"She's usually like that," Emma said, with completely colorless tone. She looked so suddenly pallid and exhausted that Cherry blamed herself for letting her with her chatter. Before leaving the room she bent over the bed to say good night to her aunt, and following a sudden impulse stooped to put a light swift kiss upon the lifeless, tight braids of irongray hair.

Emma did not acknowledge this in any way but lay motionless with closed eyes, Cherry stepped quietly away to her room.

She was all ready for bed when a sudden suspicion smote her. "Of course I know now who she is!" cried Mrs. Marshbanks had said angrily, "I won't have her in this house! I won't have Amy know her!"

Could she have been—could she possibly been speaking of—Cherry's seemed fantastic, and yet it wasn't quite impossible that she would connect the name of Amy and one of the maids in that fashion?

"But no," Cherry said half reased, getting into bed. "It was some one of the girls she knows, some debutante Fran happened to mention. That was it!"

In the morning, old Mrs. Porter had a serious setback and was dangerously ill.

A few strange days—a week went by; doctors came and went; lawyers came and went. Judge Marshbanks had a long talk with Emma, "the telephone and the doorbell, both ineffectual, were constantly in action. The world wanted to know how old Dovey Porter was faring.

Just, too, when the long rainy day when Cherry and Fran had planned to motor from Tryoton, the old lady quietly passed away.

The Judge and Amy and Fran came to the house in the rather funeral with hundreds of other blackclad folks. Cherry and Emma with the entire domestic staff were modestly placed at the side of the church.

Emma was going to the cemetery; Cherry was going back to the empty house. She came out of the big church with the other mourners, and found herself close to the Marshbanks, who were waiting for Rousseau to bring up their car. Old Mrs. Marshbanks was in lowvoiced conversation in a group of elderly men and women, but presently got into a friend's big limousine. Fran looked pale and nervous, Cherry thought, and kept saying impatiently, "Oh, where is he! We'll have to stand here and talk to half the city at this rate!" The Judge, announcing that he was going to walk down from an hour's work at his office, stood for a moment with the others and joined in chatting with Cherry.

He had not known left her, than Cherry say what she instantly considered was the reason for Fran's uneasiness, standing in the street, looking quite still, was Kelly Coates. Cherry smiled at him—and he crossed the street and joined her and they walked a few steps together.

"There was something I wanted to talk to you about," Kelly Coates said, cherry turned upon him eagerly, pricked eyes.

"You weren't waiting to see me?" "Why wasn't I?" he asked moodily after an obliging glance.

Because I supposed you were waiting to see her," Cherry said.

To this the man made no direct answer, muttering after a moment, "I'm sorry about your aunt."

"I thought she looked rather tired this morning," Cherry observed somewhat timidly.

Kelly made no reply as they walked along. Then he asked a few perfunctory questions as to the change Mrs. Porter's death might make in Cherry's situation. The girl answered cheerfully that she and Emma had discussed that, and inasmuch as there would be a great deal of work in the sorting of the old lady's possessions and the settling of her affairs, Emma proposed to keep Cherry where she was at least until that was accomplished.

Her companion, she was aware, was listening in spite of this, and after another pause broke out gloomily, "She might very well look tired, being dragged through a lot of nonsense like this showy funeral!"

"They did come!" Cherry told him, "Amy's mother was Mrs. Porter's niece, or some relative anyway. Amy's mother was a Wellington, and her husband was Mrs. Porter's uncle; something like that."

"Well, why couldn't Amy come with her uncle? No, Fran had to be at that vault of a house with Amy and be dragged through this today and—ten-thirty service and all the rest! He expects her to like everything he likes."

"Who, the judge?" Cherry asked, and, "No, Mahatma Gandhi," Kelly answered darkly. The girl laughed gaily.

"He's extremely kind to her," she presently said sedately. "He thinks nothing's too good for her."

"He's kind to her, of course, in a way," Kelly conceded impatiently. "He gives her things she doesn't want, and surrounds her with dear intimate friends she realizes! A young girl like that! A woman like that!"

He walked for a moment in silence, thin burst forth again.

"Oh, don't fool yourself! I'm not saying I could make her happy! I'm not saying anyone could! She keeps herself that she's twenty women—she's all women. But she's—she's so damned unhappy," he added in a lower tone, shaking his head and looking side to side, and turning to Cherry a smile that came from suddenly brimming eyes.

"She called me day, every day, Cherry, I've not seen her since—"

"Leave it to me!" he said that I don't see her!" he interrupted himself angrily after another brief interval. "She promised—she made me so herself—that she and I would act to each other; not often anyway. What right has he, or has any man to say that a woman shan't see her friends!"

In all her twenty years Cherry had never been made the confidant of a man before nor witnessed his visible agony. It was a hopeless love. She was thrilled to the inarticulate of her young being and touched at the same time with sorrow that life should deal with him so harshly, and with herself almost as severely. She put one of the words and rocks he so longed to hear upon Fran, what would she not have given!

But his safety valve, having won his trust, was something anyway. While he talk to her she was not entirely out of his life. She grieved for the attitude that would hold him apart with almost a maternal sympathy and gentleness.

"But—she's married."

"Of course she's married! But there's Reno, isn't there? One hour by plane!"

"But — but you wouldn't want her to leave her husband, especially when he's kind to her and they have their home—why, I was wondering the other day," Cherry went on innocently, encouraged by his silence, although she did not look at her as he continued to look moodily beside her, "I was wondering why they didn't have a baby! Oh!" the man muttered under his breath. "He met her at Reno," he added bitterly, stressing the pronouns.

"Is she divorced?" Her eyes, meeting his, were rounded into amazement.

"Certainly she is. She was up there and he went up on some community property smart—a couple of days, and they were divorced and each married someone else and then they divorced again and remarried, and it was a dozen years before anyone of 'em had inherited forty million dollars. That's romance like that! Marshbanks went to see what he could do, and he met Fran—she was in the nicest group there, of course, and a wonderful people!—and a few weeks later they were married. She was fit; she was down at the golf; she was the first divorce they ever had in their family, but it was the family decor himself who told her she'd lose her mind if she went on living with a crazy man. There's no ill will, I'll say she hopes her first husband will have all the luck in the world. But there it is! Under any circumstances she wouldn't have looked at Jud Marshbanks!"

"Yes, indeed," Cherry submitted "if any man could keep her happy."

"I don't know! Here she is in your house and I've talked to death. I don't know, Cherry. But I know he can't. She's afraid of him."

"Afraid of the judge?"

"Terrified." Kelly crossed his arms defiantly, looked handsome and stubborn and gloomy as he faced them.

"I don't see why she should be," Cherry put an impulsive hand upon his arm. "I'm sorry, I'm horribly sorry, Kelly," she said, her eyes fixed on his.

"Somebody ought to paint you as Brunhild," he said absently. "I ought to paint you as Brunhild—or where as brunhild. When do I see you here?" he turned suddenly. "I hang around her house; maybe she comes out and jumps into her car and goes off somewhere; that's all I get! I haven't painted anything for a month. I can't work. I keep waiting for the telephone to ring, hoping it is Fran, asking me me if I can come over. Well," he interrupted himself finally in a lower, apologetic tone, "I'm sorry. Thanks for letting me blow off steam, but I'm so damned — so damned unhappy! Good bye, Cherry; see you soon!"

"Good-bye!" She wanted to add "Kelly," but she did not quite dare. She went up the steps with her heart singing in satisfaction and confidence. If everything in life was not right, it did not take much to make her feel that it will come right on a heavenly spring day of hot sunshine and blue skies.

The gloom of the Porter mansion, the scent of flowers still lingering in the dark halls, the silences, reminded her that the day had its solemn significance too. A afternoon was moving about, glancing at books and doorways and silver drawers. Cherry felt strangely idle, for she will was not to be read until some day as yet unspoiled, and until it will read she dared not even take a book from the library shelves.

Emma came back tired at three o'clock, and had a late luncheon in bed. Cherry dressed to go to downtown, joined her there.

"You're quite cute," Emma asked, mincing roast beef for the gray cat. "There, if you must steal my lunch!" she said to Cherry in an undertone.

Cherry thought I'd walk downtown and see a movie," cherry answered, dropping into a chair.

"Well, do that," Emma approved "You've got money? And then maybe if you feel like it you might bring your cards in here before dinner, and we'll listen to the radio.

She could have supper up here." Cherry spoke quietly. But she awkward little overture touched her deeply.

She walked down the street a few minutes later and passed the Marshbanks house just as the judge ascended to the street.

"Hello, Cherry," he said. "Walking? Thy little car is right here in the garage if I could take you somewhere. I came back from the office to get a bite of lunch but I've nothing to do now."

"No, I—I'm going to walk today. I've scarcely stirred out of the house for a week, and I feel so free today. The sun is shining and my feet on the ground."

"You did!" he said with his friendly smile. "Here's Amy!"

Amy came flying down the steps to join them. "Where you going, Cherry?"

Cherry ashamed to say," Cherry answered laughing, "that I'm going to a movie in the afternoon! I've been shut up for days, and there's been so much talk about treatments and oxygen and all the rest of it that I sort of want to distract myself."

"I'm going with you," said Amy. "Tuesday's my day to borrow. Wait for me; I'll get my coat!"

She dashed upstairs again just as the big Marshbanks car drove up and Fran got out. She looked wearied and very pale in her fresh black, but she was smiling as she put her hand in her husband's arm.

"She's seen Kelly; they've had lunch together!" Cherry thought instantly.

"Where've you been, my dear?" the judge asked casually.

"I suppose it was scandalous not to go to the cemetery and see the whole dreadful funeral through," Fran said, avoiding a direct answer. "But there were things I had to do, and I just ran out on it!"

"Fran's a perfect crasher about her than she is about lunch," Amy said when Amy brought the subject to a close. "Fran's a day or two later.

Technicolor Couple Earn $9,000,000 a Year From Cameras They Developed

A surprising story of the development of a new kind of motion picture camera and how it brings in nine million dollars a year to Herbert Kalmus, the inventor, and his wife, is told by Michael Sheridan in "Magazine Digest" here is the story:

Herbert Kalmus and his redheaded wife Natalie—get a scant herd of mechanical stuff and a scene shown a con: $9,000,000 a year. They are the gifty young people who nurtured the technicolor camera from obscure birth, through a very lusty childhood, to present fabulously profitable maturity.

They own all the technicolor cameras in this country, plus four in England, and movie producers of doubtful integrity have to be very good to make a picture in color—or else. Technicolor Inc. and Kalmus's "a toll." Sorry, they are not hard of mechanical stuff and a scene shown a con: $9,000,000 a year. They are the gifty young people who nurtured the technicolor camera from obscure birth, through a very lusty childhood, to present fabulously profitable maturity.

They own all the technicolor cameras in this country, plus four in England, and movie producers of doubtful integrity have to be very good to make a picture in color—or else. Technicolor Inc. and Kalmus's "a toll." Sorry, they are not $20,000 a picture." The producer takes it or leaves it.

Present acceptance and demand for technicolor is largely due to Natalie Kalmus. For, even after all the early technical struggles with coloring, has been overcome, the perfected technicolor camera appeared, for a time, in grave danger of dying of its own great assets—

Or rather, too much color. Movie directors, freed of the limitations of black and white, went on a "color spree." Vivid lines, both in and out of pictures, leaped from the screen.

"Why, the movie makers seemed to think themselves, "use any pastel tones at all in a color picture. We have color; so let's use it."

They did—almost to the point of making audiences stay away. Pictures became portrayals of nightmare or drama. People began to regard them as a startling novelty; rather then hard on the eyes.

"It was heart-breaking," says Natalie Kalmus, "it seemed as if all our 27 years of up-and-down experimenting and technical disappointments were done for a final letdown.

To protect the Kalmus property, Natalie became a firm, if tactful, technical adviser on movie sets where technicolor films were being shot. Whenever a studio rented a camera she became a sort of "color production officer." She called conferences to discuss each bit of "color headache," and conferred with scenic designers on photographic values to secure color harmony in walls, furniture, draperies, and costumes. She discussed, with wardrobe departments, colors of clothes to be worn by the players, and worked with make-up experts on the special requirements of technicolor photography. Soon she was reading scripts even before the stars were chosen for a picture.

Natalie's work was exacting. Almost overnight color pictures ceased to be novelties and became a deeper, and more exciting, medium. Before long, Mrs. Kalmus found that her "one-woman" colors advisory department wasn't big enough to handle the demand. So she created an important department of "Style" wood Technicolor Plant is the most square-foot color research division, staffed by expert colorists in every field—interior decorating, painting theatre design, lighting, commercial art, and fashion design.

Mrs. Kalmus is not concerned only with "toning down the fancy colors" of the first overenthusiastic movie makers. Sometimes she has to take the opposite stand. She showed one producer why it was wrong to play a tempermental, almost violent, love scene against a background of pastel shades.

"Pink," she said, "is the color of passion. You can't use too much of it. And that girl, in her dressed right; pale blues and white fit natural for the dialogue, nor the emotion. Put the black dress on the man looks foolish and unmanly. Bring in a plaid dressing gown. He must wear a rich, dark, velvety one. And, for heaven's sake, some candlelight—not that glaring chandelier."

Mrs. Kalmus suffered one blow that brilliant scene did not know what to do. A carbon copy Natalie Kalmus had created, "in the color of passion."

In contrast to his wife, Dr. Kalmus is a scientist. He studied at Massachusetts Institute of Technology technicolor was made to his alma mater, he studied electro-chemistry. He was doing postgraduate work when he met Miss Dunning, who had come to Boston from Norfolk, Va., to study at the same college.

After a whirlwind courtship, the couple settled down to work art, later to prove exactly the right mixture for perfect photographic success in a fight which combined both—the made permanent. Soon after the wedding, Dr. Kalmus, Ralph Dunning and a San Francisco high school, and later Leonard St. Clair, all University, Kingston, Ont., and at MIT. During the last year, he worked for the Canadian Government as director of the research laboratory of electro-chemistry and metallurgy, and shortly afterward became president of the Kodak Company at Thorold, Ont.

On the side, Dr. Kalmus had continued a research engineering firm. Back in Boston a client brought him a strange-looking device he called a vanoscope. It was, he explained, for making pictures in color. The Kalmus and their associates in the research firm were Messrs. Comstock and Westcott—were slated. The only flaw was that the vanoscope did not work.

But the Kalmuses did not lose their enthusiasm. Dr. Kalmus kept working in odd moments at the idea. It was five years before he convinced himself that it was even theoretically possible to project colored motion pictures.

Then he built the original technicolor camera. Demonstrated in New York to a group of scientists and movie magnates, it failed to convince them that colored movies were in the offing.

The Kalmuses left the projection room in deep dejection—and promptly set to work again. In three more years the firm of Kalmus, Comstock and Westcott—later to become the Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation, had another camera ready. This time there was no disappointment. The movie magnates of Hollywood were "sold," and showed their acceptance in the most convincing way—with cash.

One reason, apart from the inherent advantage of color, why technicolor movies have been outstanding is that they are expensive. It has not been profitable to make a mediocre picture in color when it costs $100,000 more than the same picture filmed in black and white.

In addition to the $30,000 rental fee for the camera, color prints for release to movie houses—and hundreds of these must be made—cost .05 cents a foot, compared with .018 cents a foot for black and white. For release prints alone, average cost for each picture is $101,000 more. Then there are added expenses for lighting and color effects not needed with non-color movie sets.

Despite these limiting factors, the footage of film shot in technicolor has increased from five million to 126 million feet in ten years. Dr. Kalmus looks to the day when all films will be made in color, as a matter of course, in the same way talking pictures have completely eliminated the "silent."

Technicolor took a big forward stride with Walt Disney's cartoons Flowers and Trees, Three Little Pigs, the first films to use the three-color process. That was in 1932, more than a decade after the first commercially-released technicolor movie, The Toll of the Sea.

Today, Dr. Kalmus has almost ready for general use, a technicolor camera which will record the entire gamut of color on one film instead of three. Then, the Kalmuses are confident, there will be 300 cameras for rent instead of 30. And the Kalmus' income will have soared to a figure much more in the realm of astronomy than of art.

Only "Blackie" Knows

(By E. L. Van Dyke, In Our Dumb Animals)

Blackie (Blackie), the property of 6 Dog. Lost in a mixup of crates whose name he, of course, cannot read; handling-fee $5. A fortune of intermingling scents and distracted by motor vehicles and other creatures not always his friends, his brute mind, nevertheless, has an uncanny power to lead him to the master he loves.

Take "Blackie" for instance. Blackie is a cross-bred spaniel possessed of the name of York; the Spencer, of 406 Charlesmont Road, Elmira, N. Y., and the inseparable mate of the Spencers' two-year-old son, Ray, Jr.

The Spencers were calling the dog at night, taking Blackie along. Returning, they put Blackie back into their car. Perhaps he slipped out unobserved while the Spencers were getting in. At any rate, when they got home, Blackie was missing.

For three days the Spencers hunted him and low for the little black dog, but to no avail.

Then came Monday, and Mr. Spencer left for his job as a tool designer in one of Elmira's biggest war plants—a huge factory more than five miles from the Spencer home, and on the other side of a river that Blackie had never traversed. Before starting, Mr. Spencer looked about the yard and in the car, but saw no trace of his pet.

Three hours later, Mr. Spencer, working at his bench inside the factory, in which, of course, no dogs were allowed, looked up to see Blackie trotting towards him past a row of machines.

Mr. Spencer thus describes the reunion.

"He raced toward me and jumped all over me, wagging his tail and licking my hands. I've never seen such a happy dog in my life."

One of the guards at an outer gate earlier that morning, but that had seen a black dog outside the gate earlier that morning but that the animal had disappeared. It seemed evident that Blackie had ducked inside the gate while other workers were entering, had unerringly found his way among the maze of corridors and assembly lines to his master's bench, ignoring the thousands of other employees and the bedlam of noise and confusion.

How did a six-month-old puppy find his way along miles of streets he had never travelled before to go today interior of a factory? Only Blackie knows—and Blackie cannot voice his explanations.

U.S. People of German Extraction

(By Orson Wells in The New York Post)

Americans like Wendell Willkie have played a great role in our history since the days when the founding fathers were trying to decide whether English or German would be the official language of the new United States.

Countless soldiers whose people came from Germany are dying for freedom under our flag. In command of all our troops invading Germany is Gen. Eisenhower, of German origin, and fighting toward Japan is Gen. Krueger, who was born in Germany.

But these Americans are betrayed and belittled by some of their fellow citizens and the editors and publishers of most of the German language newspapers in the United States.

A small minority of these like the Texas Pete Frame, are controlled by strong, time-tested anti-Nazis who serve their country well, but unluckily these papers aren't typical of the majority. Most were outspoken pro-Nazi before Hitler declarked war on us, and even today they defend and serve our enemy. Such journals as the Milwaukee Deutsche Zeitung and the St. Paul Der Wanderer are hinting that we should go easy on Germany because she may one day be our ally in war against Russia.

In the last few days these German language papers have been guilty of:

Defending Ireland for refusing to deny asylum to Nazi leaders;

Attacking and violent, and for the wrong things—Britain, Russia, China, France, and all our other important allies;

Praising Mussolini;

Praising Franco;

Printing anti-Semitic material;

Bemoaning the election defeats of Stephen A. Day, Ham Fish and Gerald P. Nye;

Declaring that democracy in Europe means either chaos or complete domination by Moscow.

In many ways the most sinister editorial line is the new drive against compulsory military training. The Chicago Abendpost, a regular defender of the inventors of the concentration camp, now flatly asserts that "nobody has the right to make people spend a year of their life in a military camp in peacetime."

Good Americans of German extraction should take an interest in these German-language newspapers —and so should the Department of Justice.

STILL GREAT GOLFER

Atlanta, March 6 — (AP)—Bobby Jones doesn't play in the tournaments any more, but that doesn't keep the one-time "grand slam" winner from shooting tournament-grand golf. The other day he toured the Capital City course here in a blistering 66.

SENATE DEFEATS BILL

Little Rock, Ark., March 6—(AP) —The Arkansas Senate, by a vote of 22-2, defeated a bill to legalize horse race bookmaking and set up a state board. The bill would have permitted cities to issue licences and charge a state registration fee of $1,000.

THE CANADIAN WAY OF LIFE...

A Chance to Go Fishin'...!

YES, and the right to go fishin'...the right to enjoy the simple, pleasant things of life! Picnics by the river—week-end trips in the old family jalopy—these are some of the things that your boy is fighting for today! And he won't be able to enjoy those things—unless we make sure when he gets back his dollar will be worth a dollar.

To protect his dollar, we must realize NOW the dangers of careless, unnecessary buying! We must buy only what we need—never buy two where one will do! We must not evade rationing or price control, or deal with black markets. If we break the rules, our country—the country he's fighting for—will start on that spiral of prices known as inflation!

Remember! Every time ONE of us breaks ONE of these rules, we're lowering the value of our soldier's dollar. We're helping to shoot prices sky-high . . . and sky-high prices mean inflation. The value of every dollar in Canada goes down, and when the men overseas come back their dollar might buy only a quarter's worth of goods!

We can prevent inflation! We can give our fighting man his "right to go fishin'", if we make sure his dollar will be worth a dollar, when he comes home. We can't give back to him his lost years, or his lost youth. But if we keep up the fight against inflation, he can look forward to pleasant, satisfying living—the Canadian way of life!

Make this Pledge Today!

I pledge myself to do my part in fighting inflation:

By observing, rationing and avoiding black markets in any shape or form.

By respecting price controls and other anti-inflation measures, and refraining from careless and unnecessary buying. I will not buy two where one will do, nor will I buy a "new" where an "old" will do.

By buying Victory Bonds and War Savings Stamps, supporting taxation, and abiding by all such measures which will lower the cost of living and help keep prices at a normal level.

REDS OPEN BATTLE FOR BERLIN, GERMAN REPORT U.S. 1ST ARMY WITHIN 3 MILES OF BONN

Over 1,000,000 Prisoners Taken Since June 6

Germans North of Fallen Cologne Fighting Bitterly

Paris, March 7 — (CP) — Fast-moving tank columns of the U. S. 3rd Army drove the Germans back today to within 15 miles of the middle Rhine while the U. S. 1st Army fought to within three miles of Bonn, 19 miles south of fallen Cologne.

German forces drawn up in a semi-circle about their West pocket on the west bank of the Rhine to some 30 miles north of the capture Rhineland capital still fought bitterly against compressing units of the 1st Canadian Army.

Late field reports estimated the size of the diminishing pocket in which about 10,000 enemy troops remained at eight miles by five. After incessant R.A.F. attack yesterday, West's two bridges are believed impassable.

Prisoner Toll Rises

On the fateful anniversary of Hitler's militarization of the now-overrun Rhineland, the prisoner-toll for all Allied armies on the western front since D-day had risen to passed the 1,000,000 mark and rose above 1,100,000 for the current offensive which started Jan. 30.

The 1st Canadian Army has seized more 20,000 prisoners since it jolted off east of Nijmegen in the Netherlands Feb. 8.

A graveyard of German cities stretched from Cologne 30 miles back to the German frontier, Soon after that fourth city of Germany fell late yesterday, the U. S. 1st and 9th Armies cleared the whole west bank of the Rhine from Rheinberg south to Cologne save for a fractional pocket at Xanten, first south of Duesseldorf. The distance was airline miles but nearer 70 as the Rhine flows.

Flee Toward Bonn,

Nazi troopers who survived the debacle of Cologne fled south along the Rhine, Ruhr and Sieg, a city of 101,000 and the birthplace of Beethoven. The U.S. 1st army's 9th division fought all dawn in the village of Alfter, three miles from Bonn.

Like Cologne, Bonn lies almost defenceless on the east bank of the ancient Rhine.

The U.S. 3rd army's 4th armored division approached the middle Rhine at Boppard, a city of 7,000 miles away alone early Monday. Tanks and infantry captured vast stores of ammunition and fuel along the road—and captured the commanding officer of a German corps.

The exact spot where 12-Gen. Patton was nearest the middle Rhine was not immediately announced. Censorship prevented naming the towns he overran in his five-mile-a-hour advance from only a point 20 miles from Coblenz.

The 3rd army drive toward the Rhine outflanked the Saar industrial district from the north as well as the U.S. army outflanked it from the south.

Prisoners were taken by the thousands. The whole German line in the rugged Eifels was smashed. Third army losses were extremely light, front reports said.

The 4th armored division was plunging toward the Rhine in a narrow corridor—sometimes only the width of a road—extending like a crooked finger from the Eifels from the Kyll bridgehead east of Bitburg. Others followed this armory in vehicles of all descriptions.

"All they can do is run."

The captured 12-Gen. Rothkirch of the 62nd Corps was the commander who besieged Bastogne in Belgium and who got the famous reply "Nuts" from Gen. McAuliffe (now Maj.-Gen.) Anthony C. McAuliffe in the Christmas encirclement of the 101st Airborne Division. The 4th Armored Division had captured the general and his staff was the same which had besieged Bastogne sleep.

"How can you expect to wage war when you have no gasoline and no horses?" the Nazi general asked. "It will all be over within four months—five months at the most."

As the 4th raced toward the Rhine, the 5th Infantry Division widened the corridor behind it. Scores of towns were taken. Most of their names were withheld until

STRONGEST DRIVE MADE ON ITALIAN FRONT IN WEEKS

U. S. Mountain Troops Gain Five Miles Southwest of Bologna

Rome, March 7 — (AP)—United States mountain troops have gained five miles in the rugged Apennines southwest of Bologna in the strongest advance on the Allied 5th Army front in weeks, Allied Headquarters announced today.

The action was officially described as "a most successful limited objective attack."

Striking northeastward west of the Pistoia highway three days ago, the Americans have captured a number of dominating peaks and the town of Castel D'Aiano, 20 miles from Bologna. More than 1,300 prisoners have been taken.

The attack began at 7 a. m. Mar. 3 under a heavy artillery barrage and with air assistance. Rear-guarters permitted disclosure of the assault only today.

Striking troops, advancing simultaneously with the U. S. 10th Mountaineer Division, seized the town of Castel d'Aiano, three miles southeast of Castel D'Aiano and a mile west of Highway 64, running between Pistoia and Bologna.

Castel D'Aiano is the closest reported approach to Bologna by the 5th Army west of that highway. The U. S. 34th Red Bull Army forces reached the hamlet of Sisopra, 12 miles from Bologna, two days ago.

The objective of the drive presumably was to gain control of the Pistoia-Bologna highway which the Germans have dominated far to the north for months through coming of a number of peaks.

der the continuing 3rd Army blackout.

Cologne and its vast ruins was the largest German city to fall either in this war or the last, though shattered by repeated bombings, it still is the greatest traffic centre in Western Germany and was the site of vast and varied industries. Most Germans appeared friendly as columns of tanks and foot troops moved through its streets.

Cologne was British occupation headquarters from mid-January to Jan. 31, 1926. It was one of the cities into which Hitler sent his goosestepping Wehrmacht, March 7, 1936, scrapping the Treaty of Versailles. The 2nd armies across the 1,200 to 1,700 foot Rhine have been wrecked.

British Pacific Fleet Ready For Action Anywhere, Anytime

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(CP Staff Writer)

Washington, March 7 — (CP) — The British Pacific Fleet is "willing, able and ready" to operate with Allied Pacific naval forces in the war against Japan, a United States admiralty official whose name cannot be quoted, told The Canadian Press today.

He said that such operations will depend upon the situation as it develops in the Pacific and upon the British fleet's preparedness for action, although certain problems had to be overcome before the fleet was ready for full-scale actions over a wide area of the Pacific.

Recent operations in the South Pacific, he informant said, had proved that the reorganized fleet of Admiral Fraser's command now is high speed, long range attack operations, could operate on a par with the American naval forces.

The fleet has been trained here the participation of British naval units in joint operations with the Americans in both training exercises and how it is ordered by Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations between the two countries.

The fleet has been trained in certain quarters here that the United States High Command was reluctant to give the British naval forces in the Pacific any prominent place in their operations directed at Japanese-held islands and ultimately at Japan proper. But British officers have been quoted once on this point but have not shown any inclination to treat it seriously.

Seven-Pronged Attack Made in Day Sweep On Oil Plants in Dortmund Area

London, March 7 — (CP)—More than 900 United States heavy bombers struck in a seven-pronged attack today at oil plants in the Dortmund area, a large railway viaduct at Bielefeld, and railroad yards at Soest and Siegen after steady RAF night assaults on German troops massed at Wesel on the Rhine.

The United States heavy bombers, escorted by fighters flying in this 22rd straight day of aerial blows closely co-ordinated with the ground attack.

Only Loss

The attack included three bennit plants and a large refinery on Dortmund's outskirts. Bielefeld, Soest and Siegen all are on main rail and highway routes from central and eastern Germany to the western front.

Smashing of the Bielefeld viaduct would stop the main flow of traffic from the big inland bases of Brunswick and Hannover to the Ruhr battlefield.

Only One Phase

The R.A.F. blow at Wesel, longest-axis attack ever made on a German city, was the only phase of the widespread night operations.

Striking right from the pumpering 1,000 bombers hammered two enemy evacuation points on the west and eastern fronts, pounding Wesel on the Rhine and striking hard at the resort town of Sassnitz on the Baltic island of Rugen. Sassnitz has been a terrific day for evacuation and supply of East Prussia.

Sassnitz was crowded with German shipping when the heavy bombers arrived. The main force attacked Berlin with 1,000 tons, and others went for shipping off Stettin and Swinemunde.

The R.A.F. lost three bombers

Again Attack Berlin

At the same time R.A.F. Mosquito attacked Berlin with two-to-the blockbusters for the 15th straight night. Some of the crews said that there were fires still burning from guns firing along the Russian front.

The blasting aerial bombardment was continuing today all along the western front, the United States heavy bombers thundered over Germany in a 150-mile-long procession on the 22nd day of the present offensive.

PREDICTS BOOM IN FISHING

Toronto, March 7 — (CP) — Lt.-Comdr. Jack Sage of New York, well-known sportsfisherman in the Tower to Angling and Hunting Association here last night, at packed house to thousands of men in the armed services in Britain, Britain and the United States and "don't you think there will not be the greatest fishing boom in world history after we have seen when the war is over."

The Red Cross

On March 1st the Canadian Red Cross opened its drive for $10,000,000 with which to carry on its blessed work through the ordeal of 1945. This city has been allotted a quota of $25,000. Its call is not an appeal to charity, rather it is a simple notification to us of our opportunity to do, in the only way possible, what we would gladly do in person for our own men in battle. To give quickly and unsparingly to the fund is the surest way in which we can help those who offer their lives for our safety and the saving of all that we hold dear.

The war moves toward its furious climax. The casualty lists lengthen relentlessly. There can be no turning back now for the millions of the world's civilized youth engulfed in the conflict. Nor can we at home allow any weakening of our determination to do everything humanly possible for them in their supreme hour of sacrifice. The Red Cross is at their side, for us whom they left behind. We must enable it to stand by them to the end, to go the last mile with them to victory.

The Red Cross is no vague impersonal institution imposed upon us by decree or by government. It is all of us; it is a voluntary thing born of the spirit of brotherly love in our hearts. In time of catastrophe it springs up in every community in the land, numbering its volunteer workers by the thousands. In this war it goes wherever the R.C.A.F. carries the flags of Allied nations fly. It is found on every battlefront around the globe; in every rest area; in every military hospital. Its blood donor service has saved thousands of lives. Its canteens and clubs following close behind our troops wherever they go caused men of countless men. For war prisoners in many lands it is a link with home, their last, perhaps for years. And here at home it stands by the war-broken families of our fighting men. It will continue to, stand by them when the guns are stilled and the difficult days of postwar adjustment have come.

Carrying compassion even to the fields of carnage, the Red Cross is the agent of Belleville and the nation recognized as such and relied upon for its vital services by the Navy, Army and Air Force. It is centered in its mission of mercy as Basil Cecil Capell, 3rd put idea forward in the emotion and the consciousness of all the people. That idea is the dignity of man and the responsibility of all society towards its individual members.

In its life-saving soul-saving task it must have the faithful support of every one of us during the months ahead. Every one of us in Belleville can lend a hand and be a partner in a humane undertaking unequalled in our History.

Infantry Units Overseas Are Fully Reinforced Says Gen. McNaughton

Ottawa, March 7—(CP)—Defence Minister McNaughton said in a statement today that throughout 1944 reinforcements for the Canadian Army overseas were "generous in total numbers," although they were not always where they were wanted most, and that at present infantry units are "fully reinforced" with substantial fully-trained and fit reserves ready for battle as required.

In a statement replying to charges by John Bracken, Progressive Conservative National Leader, that reinforcements were being thrown their rifles overboard and that reinforcements overseas were inadequate, Gen. McNaughton made these points:—

1. One man boarding a troopship Jan. 2 threw his rifle and kit from the gangway into the Manhattan hope that his action would keep him in Canada, even if he embarked with his unit. It did not. He was returned to Canada, even if he embarked with his unit. It did not. He was returned to Canada, even if he embarked with his unit. It did not. He was returned to

Canadians Do Bit of Foraging On West Front

Now they are in Germany Canadians, troops fighting on the Western Front are, doing a bit of foraging on their own, according to Pte. Clinton Ryan in a recent letter to his mother, Mrs. P. Ryan, Dunbar Street.

He writes that he is again back in the line after feeling fine after being wounded during the summer. He says he has picked up a German Luger pistol and carries it in his pocket as "a little extra protection" beside the rifle. He hopes to bring it back to Canada with him.

The foraging mentioned amounts to a surprise attack on a German chicken pen. "Pretty good eating even for a German chicken," he admits.

Pte. Ryan has been overseas for almost five years. He was enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment back in June, 1940. Since going overseas he has been transferred to the Calgary Highlanders, with which unit he is now fighting. His wife and children live on South Front Street.

Plea for Support of Red Cross Appeal of $25,000 in Belleville More Deserving Than Ever

The Canadian people through their Red Cross have achieved a reputation for succor to the suffering humanity since the outbreak of war that has become the envy of the world. Its precious blood has been poured out on battlefields in the Allied Nations here its supplies, its medicines and necessities and patients have restored to health, its gifts of relief to while the men at the front have given the extra that meant a touch of home.

Belleville has been asked to raise $26,000 of the ten millions of dollars needed by the Dominion's Red Cross Society.

Organization here was completed some time ago and already a large number of interested citizens are at work in their local offices and sales in the raising of this amount. Canvassers are already on the march and the call is out to the residents of the city.

Mrs. Frank Bryan is campaign chairman.

Red Cross headquarters here has been established in the Biggs Garage premises on Pinnacle Street. From this hub of Red Cross activities, extend the channels of communication that it is expected will bring to the city the $26,000 that is the city's quota in the country-wide campaign. The campaign will go on until the end of the present month.

The need for Red Cross work has never been greater than at the present time. The cost of supplies is great. Casualty lists are and sad to be heard. Everything possible should and will be done for those who suffer under the ravages of war. Belleville is proud of its tradition, will not let the Red Cross or the boys overseas down. Officials here are confident of the success of the campaign. It is up to the people of this city to support that confidence.

Campaign officials are: Campaign chairman, C. A. Freeman; special gifts committee, Mrs. Frank Bryan; committee, Mrs. C. A. Cameron; publicity, Dr. Bert Stewart, T. G. Wrightmeyer, A. R. Holway; secretary, Miss Irene Keeler.

Former Prince of Wales School Student Sends Letter of Thanks

The goodwill gesture on the part of some 200 students of Wales School in forwarding Christmas parcels to former students now serving in the forces overseas is really appreciated and one such letter, that is received, has been shown.

Lest autumn Betty Belch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Belch, Thurlow township, forwarded a Christmas parcel to Pte. Eric Law, former Prince of Wales pupil now serving in Holland. Recently she received a letter of appreciation from Cpl. Law and included was a Dutch guilder coin as a souvenir.

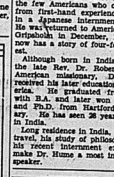
In his letter to Betty, Cpl. Law recalls names of teachers familiar to him and who are still teaching at the school while he is awarded a young friend that Principal Kenneth Bird "is as well as ever." Continuing he tells a bit about himself, of his eight days and of his service with the Canadian forces in France, Belgium and Holland. "The next stop will be Germany," he wrote.

Costumes which children was described to have changed from traditional garb of the Canadian Canadians in pictures and in his place of work, toques and mitres were worn when now it on the ground. But there are still plenty of wooden shoes and the children skate on the canals with wooden skates with lateral runners which are designed on like roller skates. Nearly all children still wear wooden shoes, in "clicking Cpl. Law said the Christmas parcel was received in his good condition and "Again, thanks a million for writing."

Former Prisoner Internment Camp To Visit City

Regional secretary for Y.M.C.A. in North India and for 21 months a prisoner in a Japanese internment camp, Lt. Col. Harold Dr. William M. Hume will tell of his experiences and will tell of the basic factors that lie behind India's present problems, when he addresses three Belleville audiences on Monday.

Dr. Hume will speak to the Collegiate student assembly at 10.30 in the morning, will address the members of the local Rotary Club at noon and will speak to the Women's Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. during the afternoon.



En route back to India following a furlough in America Dr. Hume was caught in Manila during the Japanese advance down the Malayan peninsula and as result is one of the few Americans who can speak from first-hand experience of life in a Japanese internment camp. He was returned to America on the Gripsholm in a prisoner exchange, now has a story of four-fold interest.

Although born in India, son of the late Rev. Dr. Robert Hume, American missionary, Dr. Hume received his later education in America. He graduated from Yale with B.A. and later won his M.A. and Ph.D. from Hartford Seminary. He has spent 28 years service in India.

Long residence in India, extensive travel, his study of philosophy and his wide missionary experience make Dr. Hume a most interesting speaker.

Family Allowances Discussed By Speaker at Kiwanis Club

Dr. F. W. Stapleford Voices His Approval of Plans as Measure to Bolster Up Country's Failing Birth Rate

FAMILY

Family allowances as proposed by the Dominion government is coming into effect in this country as a companionship to social security measures, Dr. F. W. Stapleford, Provincial Health officer, told the Belleville Kiwanis Club at their luncheon meeting in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday, Mr. Stapleford, a keenly interested student of social problems, visited England, which viewed the scheme as the first step in a measure to bolster this country's failing birth rate.

At first doubting the wisdom of the family allowances bit when first introduced, Dr. Stapleford informed that with it being devoided of political taint he had since reviewed the plan would be a good thing for the country. He liked to think of it as an economic and social measure rather than a political one, he said.

As basis for his assertion that family allowances would be a good thing for Canada, Dr. Stapleford pointed to the question of financial responsibility of Canadians in bringing up the nation's children. 44% Unmarried.

In illustration he referred to the 1941 census figures which showed that 46 per cent of the gainfully employed in this country were unmarried and therefore without responsibility in the upbringing of children. Twenty one per cent were married but childless, leaving only 12 per cent of the married had but one child.

The final picture was that 18 per cent of the wage earners in Canada supported 82 per cent dependents, 64 per cent of the children. "This," he stated, "means that the financial burden on 18 per cent of the people is too great."

The Canadian economic system being such that wages and salaries are based on individual needs rather than upon the responsibilities of the family, Dr. Stapleford spoke on the fair that households in which there were children should receive financial assistance.

Not New Thing in World.

Family allowances, he stated, the principle of family allowances or bonuses is not a new thing in the world, according to the speaker, for all there are are different countries in which family allowances or bonuses of some sort are paid, principally as a measure to bring about an increase in the birthrate, the various countries which are in force in European countries and in New Zealand and Australia were noted by the speaker.

The question of whether through the system will affect the birth rate in July in Canada will actually be known for a few years, Dr. Stapleford was viewed by the speaker as not the important one, the consideration given to the problem. Indirectly stated as having greater faith, in human nature than the government, parents would squander their family allowances, Dr. Stapleford pointed to findings resulting from grants instead of the dependence of servicemen's dependent's allowances. Here it was found that only three per cent of the Statistical than facilities had been made available. Dr. Stapleford urged suggestions to see that this money was spent wisely.

Stand to Benefit.

Pointing to that census figures the Prairie provinces and the Maritimes would stand to benefit most from family allowances, he stated that British Columbia through adoption of family allowances would benefit, have shown that Quebec would receive approximately 32 percent of monies paid out in allowances and in turn this province contributed a greater percentage than this to the national income. Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia being naturally wealthier provinces contribute a greater percentage of the national income than the other provinces.

Ontario Has Greatest Birthrate

With Ontario's present birthrate of 18.2 per thousand, as compared to Quebec's birthrate of 30 per thousand, this province had a better chance of depressing here benefit through allowances as the lower birthrate would be more rapidly increased.

The speaker introduced Rev. Archie Harris with club appreciation being expressed by F. W. Rick, President Lorne McDougall was in the chair, while "Viv" White acted as song leader and Bill Hardy as accompanist.

Special guest of the luncheon was Flt.-Lieut. Hooper, Dentists of the U.S. Army who is spending furlough in the city with relatives.

Obliteration of Weasel

Obliteration of Weasel, 30 miles north of Duesseldorf, slashed late Saturday afternoon by Mosquito planes found the city packed with German armor and transport fleeing in front of the 1st Canadian Army.

Weasel was the brief Interval Weasel was bombed continually from 4.30 p.m. to last night until 9:30 this morning. Three hours later the Canadian radio said it was under attack again.

Low overcast hampered close-support operations by the army, in response to a call from ground forces but the German artillery and fortified positions were holding them up Typhoon pilots volunteered for dive-bombing missions under a 500-foot ceiling.

Fleeing What They Wanted

They went after six fortified villages, including Hommersum, 13 flak positions and a fortified factory building.

"They got what we wanted, thanks," the ground controller radioed. "You got it. Well done."

A force of 100 U. S. 9th Air Force fighter-bombers attacked the factory marshalling yards 16 miles from Cologne, where reconnaissance photographs showed 1,000 railway cars believed to be filled with supplies for defences in the Cologne area.

UNKNOWN DEATH

by workers on a nearby scow. Other workmen slid down ropes and helped the man ashore after he had swum.

The explosions blew out a large section of the pier and firemen fought the fire from both land and ship firms simultaneously. Another Panstemship vessel, the Bowman Park was damaged in the accident, and followed away from the scene shortly after the explosions.

Fire Spread Rapidly

The fire in the Greenhill Park No. 2 hold spread rapidly, and before it was under control had spread into No. 3 and No. 4 holds. About 100 men in the engineroom, next to No. 2 hold, escaped unhurt. Frank Wescott of Edmonton, one of the dockyard workers, said they all headed up the step to the deck, and then down the other way down the lines over the side.

Canadian Red Cross workers set up a First Aid station on the dock and a few minutes after the explosion received First Aid to the slightly injured.

INFANTRY UNITS

There is nothing to indicate that there was any other incident of the kind described during these movements of troops in the United Kingdom.

In his speech at Ottawa, Mr. Bracken added: "Why did they abandon their overseas without rifles? The Canadian Corps Journal, in an article on the common knowledge of every soldier who has come back from the front on a troopship, and so it would have been available for Mr. Bracken and his colleagues who may have been infatuated.

"Certain reinforcements began to go overseas several years ago, many have been disembarked in the British Isles without rifles, and this because they threw them into the sea, not because they were lost, but good soldiers. At the outset, it was because they turned their rifles in before they left Canada and reported at once to the quarters with the original rifles of the 1907 pattern — went back for use by our Home Guard and by the Militia."

Rifles of Latest Mark

More recently their rifles, now of the latest mark, have travelled with them, but many commanding officers have arranged that these arms be boxed and stored in the ship's magazine for the return voyage, other equipment not necessary on the voyage, the rifles are then issued at the port of disembarkation or at a depot in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Bracken's statement has been denied by the military establishment, authorized for the sake of convenience, will be unloaded at any port who has crossed in 4 crowded troopship deck space is at a premium, I am sure that there are those among Mr. Bracken's advisers who could have informed him of the facts and, perhaps, still another blackening of Canada's good name might have been avoided.

Some Could Have Corrected Him.

There must have been many others to him, too, who could have corrected him on the matter. Never at any time or at any occasion have I made use of censorship to seek to hide any fact from the people. In every statement I have made I have had the headquarters information. I have been counselled was safe and that what I said would be kept from the enemy. I subject myself to censorship and I feel I am better more for less than they advise.

What I have said, and every statement I have made is based on accurate information given me by responsible officers. I say to you that the reinforcement crisis has now passed. The army stands today fully supplied with reinforcements and all else that is needed. Our men go forward to triumph after triumph, and they have complete assurance that their ranks will be kept filled as needed.

Hepburn Puts Liberal Party Against Administration In Address on Throne Speech

Former Premier States Party Will Accept Another Wartime Election If Necessary

Toronto, March 7 (CP)—Former Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn yesterday dispelled any lingering doubts that Ontario's outnumbered Progressive Conservative government may receive support from the 16-member Liberal group in the legislature and emphatically put his party on record against the administration.

Warning that his party would accept another wartime election if it felt public interest demanded such a course, the fiery Liberal House leader assailed government policies of immigration and religious education and accused Premier Drew of creating national disunity.

On the other hand, Premier Drew said his 36-man government group would follow constitutional procedure and seek dissolution if it did not receive the support of the 90-member House. If there was "any concerted move to disrupt the orderly dispatch of business", the government would be forced to take "appropriate action."

Mr. Hepburn gave tangible expression of opposition to government policy on religious instruction in the schools and post-war immigration plans by moving an amendment to the five-point C.C.F. amendment to the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

Support Definitely Ended

Support of the government by the Liberal group is definitely ended, Mr. Hepburn told the House, and "when the time comes to challenge the Premier, I won't hesitate for a moment. The interest of the province is paramount."

He was almost as critical in his references to the C.C.F., whose 32-member strength must be included in any vote to defeat the government. Trade unionists and working people generally were withdrawing their support of that party. "The Socialists aren't fooling anyone anymore."

The Liberal government regretted "that the government has frowned our traditional policy of non-sectarian public schools by introducing a program of religious education which has caused disunity among a large section of our people, and has thereby violated the cherished democratic right of each to worship according to his conception, free from interference by the state;

"That the government, without any mandate from the Legislature, has given ill-considered encouragement to large-scale immigration before providing adequate safeguards to ensure full employment for our own veterans and present war workers."

Urges National Unity.

Stressing the importance of national unity, Mr. Hepburn declared raising of issues that would "divide and set race against race and creed against creed."

"We have everything we need in Canada but we must have national unity and the only thing that can provide it is that great body of reform opinion you won't find in the reactionary Tory mind."

"I hope an election will be obviated, but at the same time my party will not become a nonentity in this House."

Premier Drew, speaking before the Liberal leader in the Throne Speech debate, said immigration was one of the urgent subjects to be taken up at a Dominion-Provincial conference and repeated his demand for such a meeting. The British North America Act gave Provincial and Dominion governments "concurrent power" to deal with immigration, but the Ontario government intended to effect an immigration plan until re-employment of veterans and war workers was assured.

The Ontario government shows no lack of co-operation in its relations with the Federal government, as charged by C.C.F. Opposition Leader Joliffe.

Answers Mr. Joliffe.

Dealing with Mr. Joliffe's criticism of government action on the first anniversary of the election program, concerning strengthening of British institutions, the Premier said:

"Recognizing British institutions we will accept the decision of the majority of this legislature as to whether or not it is their wish that we continue to govern."

However, he added, we believe that nothing which can possibly be avoided should direct public attention from the conduct of the war. We believe that it is not the wish of the people of Ontario to have an election when the main concern of every thoughtful person is the welfare of our fighting men and women, and the hope of an early victory which will bring them back to us."

The Premier claimed that the government's assumption of 50 per cent of the cost of education would bring more than $7,000,000 reductions in municipal tax burdens, as stated by Mr. Joliffe. This, he calculated grant to the city of Toronto alone would amount to more than $2,000,000 while Kenora would receive the equivalent of a 4.5 mill reduction in taxes.

Made Sweeping Changes.

Newcastle would have a possible school tax reduction of 8.5 mills, Timmins 8.2 and Kenora 6.5.

"But changes in our educational system have gone far beyond adjustment of taxes. We have made sweeping reorganization of the administration of the Department of Education, which has a profound effect upon our whole educational program throughout the province. Great advances have already been made toward the objective of real equality of educational opportunity."

A persistent critic of the government, Labor-Progressive Chief A. A. MacLeod is next scheduled speaker in the Throne Speech debate.

Bills to amend the veneral disease prevention act and the hours of work and vacations with pay act were given first reading. Among provisions of the first measure, brought in by C. A. Grange (CCF-Brantford) is one which would require every pregnant woman to be examined for veneral disease. A. A. Williams (CCF-Ontario) introduced the labor bill, which would extend annual vacations with pay to two weeks and provide pay and a half for overtime in designated 48-hour-week industries.

RISING WATERS TAKE 8 LIVES, MANY HOMELESS

Staggering Blow to the Making of Munitions in Ohio River Valley

Cincinnati, March 7 (AP)—Rising flood waters of rivers and tributaries along a 1,000 miles of midwestern lowlands today had made thousands homeless, taken at least eight lives and dealt a staggering blow to the making of munitions.

The Ohio River—from its headwaters at Pittsburgh all the way to the Mississippi—rose toward crest as reached only twice before in history.

The Mississippi ran into low-lying residential districts, forcing hundreds of families out. Water of the White River in Arkansas threatened wrest further south and military forces were pressed into duty to reinforce the levees.

Louisville, Ky., expected to evacuate hundreds of families as the Ohio rolled toward a 55-foot flood stage. At Cincinnati, the Ohio was expected to pass the 75-foot mark, 18 feet above flood stage.

Officials hoped, hoping that colder weather would halt the runoff from the melting ground of the Ohio Valley's 202,000 square miles, still withheld definite predictions of crests. However, they watched the progress or a new bulge coming down from Pittsburgh, where continued rains had pushed the Allegheny 20 feet above the 25-foot flood stage.

Relief agencies in the Cincinnati area were tasked heavily and the Red Cross in Ohio was prepared to 6,000 families evacuated from their homes on both sides of the river.

Blankets and supplies were rushed here from Army headquarters at Columbus, O., and the coast guard ordered 50 motor boats, helicopters and trucks to aid stricken communities. Martial law was declared ordered for the Ohio State guard.

Marietta, O., looked for a 42-foot stage and prepared for the evacuation of an additional six feet before the rise ceased.

At Bellaire, O., seven coal mines remained closed for the week-end because they were in accessible. Many highways were reported blocked by a rain-loosened landslide between Bellaire and Bridgeport.

Pittsburgh, March 7 —(AP)— Tributaries of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers rose in the hours of rain, swelling into multi-faceted threats of destruction today, leaving in their wake many homeless, a death toll of at least two and a great loss to industrial plant operations.

Ahead of the worst flood since 1913 faced western Pennsylvania as the Allegheny rose to 20-foot level, three feet above flood stage, early today.

U. S. Meteorologist W. S. Brotzman predicted a crest of at least 23 feet late today at "the point" here, where the two rivers join to form the Ohio.

Rivermen, meanwhile, believed the crest would be closer to 25 feet, highest since the 36 stage recorded Dec. 21, 1942.

Rescue crews of coast guardmen, police, firemen and disaster relief groups labored to remove marooned persons from their homes in inundated communities.

War plants along the river shores together with the three major railroads in Pittsburgh, prepared to meet the flood threat by removing valuable machinery and banking furnaces.

The Red Cross here said it is ready to feed and shelter about 500 homeless families—or 1,500 persons—in churches, libraries, police stations and schools.

Lorna Gray, 22-year-old movie actress, who with Ruel P. Taylor, movie stunt man, was arrested in connection with an investigation now underway by Los Angeles police and state narcotics officers into the widespread use of marijuana. Taylor and Miss Gray were booked into custody when officers raided an apartment where a quantity of marijuana was confiscated. Taylor said the narcotic was all his and that Miss Gray knew nothing about it and had never smoked the weed.

Twelve suggestions were received in February, three of which were allotted an award. The star went to the Stellite Department. A. G. Dyer gave the report of the Publicity Committee after which E. M. Regan reported for the Inspection Committee. Cecil Holland was appointed floating member for March. J. E. Rice handled the report of the Health and Investigation Committee and the chairman presented the monthly awards of the Benevolent Relief Funds. Prior to the business of the meeting the chairman presented Ontario Safety Medals to car and truck drivers of the company as follows: 7 years, Wilbert Mumby; 2 years, James Hegadoren; 5 years, George Fox; 2 Years, Cliff Goodchild.

BRITAIN STEADILY MASSING NAVAL FORCES IN PACIFIC

First Lord of Admiralty Tells House Fleet is Ready for Action

London, March 7. (CP)—A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons today that Britain has determined to range her navy in the Pacific alongside United States naval forces and to play "a full and worthy part in the speedy overthrow of Japanese Empire."

Mr. Alexander said "we have been steadily massing forces for the Far East, with a great fleet train of supply, accommodation, repair and amenity ships which they will require to sustain them".

He said the fleet now included, "in addition to vessels of the battleships Queen Elizabeth and Valiant, the battle cruiser Renown, the "fine French battleship Richelieu, several British cruisers and British destroyers.

"Operations already conducted are but the beginning of the tasks of the British Pacific fleet and the United States fleet which will continue to be reinforced and supplied so that they may play an ever-growing part in the defeat of Japan," Mr. Alexander said.

The declaration came as London naval spokesmen denounced as "fantastic" a report from the Pacific theatre, suggesting that it might be six months—perhaps even before Allied rather than American forces blast Japan's inner defences from the sea.

Match U.S. Warships.

Naval spokesmen here said the Royal Navy ha both battleships and carriers in the Pacific waters capable of matching American warships in speed.

"The whole business of the use of the British fleet i nthe Pacific will be worked out between here and Washington," one said. "Neither Washington nor London is prepared to persons trying to breathe dissension between United States and Britain are likely to change the naval strategy."

The spokesman reviewed the naval contribuhin to D-Day in Europe, declaring: "The contribution of the floating Japan will fall upon the fleet of the Royal and Merchant Navies."

In his speech introducing the Naval estimates, Mr. Lord said the mastery that the Allies achieved in D-Day was a great one and has been maintained. The speech will give the House an opportunity to discuss all matters coming under the jurisdiction of his department.

Sinkings Reduced

The sinkings of the first nine months of 1944 from the main U-boat effort was in the North Atlantic," he continued. "Here the U-boats were so harassed that they sank very little and suffered heavy losse."

Transferred to Norway.

He said that during the year the U-boats transferred their bases to Norway, where they utilized the biggest concerted effort against British Russian convoys. Results "inconsiderable in proportion to the forces employed."

"In spite of appalling weather and the heavy convoys, heavy casualties have been inflicted on the Germans. The number of U-boats sunk continues to increase satisfactorily.

"Despite these continued and encouraging successes it must certainly not be assumed that the war against the U-boat is over. The Germans are using new equipment and new types of U-boat may be used at any time. With this new equipment we must be sure that they will develop new tactics".

The First Lord disclosed that U-boats had recently appeared in British coastal waters but that they had not had much success. It was significant that the Germans still continued to devote a large part of their resources to the U-boat campaign".

Still Best Hope for Nazis.

Britain shows that they still consider it the best hope of averting defeat", he said.

Mr. Alexander also disclosed that a total of more than 4,000,000 tons of supplies hid been delivered in convoys to the Soviet Union through North Russian ports, of which more than half had arrived since the beginning of last year.

Reviewing navy operations in support of the D-Day landings in France, Mr. Alexander said the sweeping of 10 approach channels was the "largest single mine-sweeping operation ever undertaken in war".

"Three hundred and nine British, 16 Canadian and 22 United States minesweepers participated", he said.

Mr. Alexander ended his speech with a reference to his own political future, saying that in the course of the coming year he might no longer be First Lord of the Admiralty in the present type of British government.

JAPS BUILD WOODEN SHIPS

Washington, March 7. (AP)—The Japanese have turned to construction of "a lot of small wooden ships" because of their shipping losses, a United States Navy spokesman said Tuesday. The enemy has found it impossible, the spokesman said, to keep up steel ship construction at the rate of losses.

All-Out Drive On Iwo Jima Now Under Way

Guam, March 7 (AP)—An all-out push against the 6,000 or so Japanese still entrenched on the rocky northern end of two Jima was under way today, with tremendous artillery support and army fighters operating off the southern airfield for the first time—based within fly-ing range of Tokyo.

The ground drive, breaking a two-day comparative lull in this fiercest battle of the Pacific war, achieved small gains yesterday in the centre and on the left flank of the United States Marine line squeezing the bitterly-resisting enemy against the northern cliffs.

But the Japanese fought back so strongly that by nightfall the Marines were still some 600 yards from the northeast shorefine opposite a bulge which, if reached, would cut the remaining Japanese garrison in two.

By 6 p.m. Monday 14,456 Japanese dead had been counted out of original force estimated at 20,000. The last figure for American dead was 2,005, announced Monday by Navy Secretary Forrestal.

Luzon Campaign Entering Its 'Final Phase'

Manila, March 7 —(AP)— The 58-day-old campaign for Luzon—it took the Japanese more than five months to conquer it—already is entering its "final phase," an Allied communique said today.

With Manila liberated, Bataan and Corregidor retaken and the central Luzon plain overrun, the more than 10 United States divisions committed to the operation from the U. S. 6th and 8th armies are regrouping to get scattered enemy troops in the mountains.

On rocky Corregidor, at the entrance of reopened Manila Bay, the 503rd Parachute Regiment sealed the last enemy cave in a pocket-man discloses today. In those underground places, the few survivors of 6,000 Japanese which had formed the fortress garrison are doomed to die after refusing to surrender.

Aided by Filipino guerrillas, American troops on Luzon are preparing death traps for the four Japanese divisions Lt.-Gen. Yamashita has left of an original 16—an enemy loss to date on Luzon of more than 90,000 men.

Churchill Stands on German Soil

Prime Minister Churchill is a maker of news in the truest sense and of history. He has just returned home from a visit to the Allied Supreme Command in the West, which means he has been on German soil. He declared that "one strong heave will win the war." He fired a huge shell marked "For Hitler—Personal." He walked across from the boundary of a land which Hitler's troops had occupied and stepped into Germany with no Hun in sight to dispute his entry. He walked through the boasted Siegfried Line now reduced to uselessness. He stood where Adolf Hitler, the enemy of freedom, could have stood some time ago and seen the bounds of Hun aggression extended far into the west—actually to the Bay of Biscay. And Churchill this week even wanted to go into places of danger and was only restrained after considerable argument by General Simpson of the U. S. 9th Army. Churchill saying that if the Germans were shooting "you can put me in a tank and I will be all right."

Mr. Churchill carries cheer with him and good humour and wit too. He had a happy time with the troops on the front line. "Anyone can see that one strong heave can win the war," he said. He looked at Juelich city ruins and grimly noted that there would be much unemployment in this German city after the war. The soldiers responded to his pleasantries and predictions of triumph, asking him "how are we doing?" and saying "over the Rhine next," and "we'll bring Hitler back alive."

The great British leader was in counsel with the Allied generals. He saw the advances which Allied troops had made and how they were standing on German soil, the soil which Hitler had said would never be trodden by any nation. He saw the evidences of the crumbling of Hitlerite tyranny and the proofs of the coming Allied victory. He must have thought of all the sacrifices the peoples of freedom had made to bring about the situation today which is leading up to the climax in triumph over the aggressor. He has given every gift he, one of the greatest leaders any land or empire and its Allies ever had, possesses. By his own magnificent courage and leadership he had done supremely well, so well that the ages to be will rate their tribute to his service as the great leader with a just cause and a following of heroic peoples.

In what he saw on the German front and what he visioned of the days to be there was the assurance of history being made by democracy and freedom for generations yet unborn. The German Fuehrer at one time during the visit said that Germany was going to mould the course of history for a thousand years. Germany cannot do what Hitler meant, but the German dictator has failed and set the world of democracy expanding over more millions than Hitler the aggressor could think of. Prime Minister Churchill can glory in his cause because he has been for all mankind. The British leader can look now upon his noblest work being made permanent. To achieve greatly as he has achieved unselfishly along with other leaders is something for which the world's praise must go to him.

In the story of his visit to the Western Front, the Briton has again shown his breadth and interest in the men of the services, his tireless enthusiasm for every activity of human beings, his knowledge of warfare and of statecraft and his clear vision of the responsibilities of his office and of nations and his clear reading of the course of history of which he is not only a student but one of the greatest of makers of all time.

Concert Association

Belleville Concert Association is making this week its annual drive for membership. It is not long since this organization was created through the zeal of music-lovers of Belleville and district but already it has achieved wonders in stimulating the desire to hear the noblest music of all kinds interpreted by some of the greatest artists of the world today.

The Concert Association is one of the largest associations of citizens, an organization of which Belleville may be proud.

It is no exaggeration to say that in this modern age music can serve perhaps as it never before has been able to serve mankind because people need music in their homes.

One of the happiest auguries of this great music is occupying so much attention in home, in school and in public. So the people of Belleville who are looking forward next fall to the opening of a great season for the association can surely go everywhere in their canvass for membership realizing that they are conferring a benefit on those whom they solicit to become by membership a part of the organization that is building up the musical status of Belleville and Quinte district.

Selection Board Cosmopolis

Candidates for commissions in the British Army have to face examination by a selection board, which decides whether they are suitable for transfer to an Officer Cadet Training Unit.

The process takes about three days and, since the boards pass on officers from all parts of the Empire, some of their establishments have become very cosmopolitan places. Besides United Kingdom candidates—both from the Army and the A.T.S. —there are, to name only a few, Palestinians, Cypriots, Ceylonese, Arabs and Rhodesians.

All the candidates with the exception of the Indians (who, because they require a special diet, are quartered with a neighboring Indian Unit) live together.

The examination is conducted well. Some of the written tests have had to be modified for the Empire candidates, but as they all must speak tolerable English to be eligible, the changes are superficial. The outdoor tests are scarcely modified at all.

During the three days of testing, candidates and members of the selection board live together; this allows them to meet in a friendly way. It also gives the candidates a chance to ask the many questions about an officer's life that concern them.

An Arabic-speaking psychiatrist sits on the board when Arab candidates appear, a senior Indian Army officer when there are Indians and representatives from other parts of the Empire join the selecting officers at various times when their countrymen are interviewed.

All candidates are judged by the same standards, that is to say, they must show evidence of possessing those talents that are summed up in the phrase "officer quality."

Not all boards are held in England. To save as many as possible from travelling long distances a mobile selection board has gone as far afield as Pretoria and Nairobi/ Malta, Baghdad and Mosul. In fact, the experiment of mixing up candidates from the various nations of the Empire was first tried in the Middle East.

Cossack and Siberian horses riding ahead of tanks and infantry in General Rokossovsky's advance along the highway from Neustettin to Belgard and Allied bomber fleets striking against Cologne and Dresden ahead of the approaching Americans and Russian armies respectively might not have been expected to be seen in the present struggle. The plane might be thought to have brought an age in which the horse would be outdated but even now with tanks doing a great deal of the advancing in the Russian struggle, the Russian horsemen are serving effectively even ahead of the tanks. Russia has found a place for her daring and intrepid riders and their horses and has added them to her army of weapons to smash militaristic Germany.

THE BETTER WORLD

In that better world to be
Still the rising sun they'll see,
And its setting.
There will be three meals a day,
Which the women folks, some way,
Must be getting.
Still with hoe and rake and spade
Little gardens will be made,

Birth will be a time for cheers,
Death a cause of sighs and tears
All are dreading.
And two families will rejoice
And endorse the happy choice
At a wedding.
What men now admire in men
They'll admire and honor then.

In that better world they plan
Work will be the lot of man.
Strong and clever.
Able, clumsy, witty, wise,
By some useful task to rise,
Will endeavor.
Unto fortune, come what may,
There will be no easy way.

Grief and sorrow will remain.
There will still be loss and gain,
Peace and fury.
And for those who would evade
All the regulations made,
Judge and jury.
Better world! 'Twill happen when
There's a better race of men.

Start of 'Forts' on Tokyo Mission Like That of Indianapolis Auto Race

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Marianas Islands (Delayed) — They hung fab the great 500-mile auto race at Indianapolis to be the most interesting event in terms of human suspense — that I've ever known. The start of a B-29 mission to Tokyo, from the spectator's standpoint, is almost a replica of the Indianapolis race.

On mission day people are out early to see the start. Soldiers in groups of two or three climb high spots around the field—on tops of control huts, on tops of bulldozers along the runway, on hillsides. They get a better view—and given a few bold souls stand at the very end of the runway to snap amateur pictures as the thundering planes pass just over their heads.

As the planes taxi out, it is just like cars at Indianapolis. You see their pits to line up for the start. You wave farewell to your personal friends, and then get as fast as you can to your own favorite spot to watch the spectacle.

My nephew, Lieut. Jack Sales, wasn't on this mission, so I went in a jeep to the far end of the runway, and parked with a raised place alongside it, at a point where the planes were to be in the air by that time—or else.

"If a plane starts wheeling off the runway," Jack said, "we got to run like hell."

Most of the planes would be in the air long before they reached us. But a few either had trouble getting off, or else their pilots were holding them down, for they had barely raised in the last few feet of runway, and the amateur photographers down there had to hit the dirt so hard we had to laugh.

The planes were staggering just a little as they took off. The spacing between them was perfect. There was never a blank spot, never a delay. When you saw from seeing one safely off the ground, here would be the next one coming down the runway.

These Marianas islands are small little specks in the middle of its out over the water within a few minutes. It is a goose-flesh sensation to see the first plane take off huff by a mere few feet, and then not a sight for several minutes. This is because the pilots nose down right after the more flying speed. Pretty soon you can see them coming up into sight again.

They circle the islands at the start of our mission, but not all missions. Often the crews are cancelled on the ground before starting. Two men halfway down the runway at Kwajalein, when the runway at Kwajalein, when the plane turned completely around and headed back to the hardstand. Its mission was cancelled on the ground before starting. Two men halfway down

CHECKS OFF TWO—MISSION COMPLETED

Second Lieut. Victor G. Beebe, of Baltimore, Md., last P-38 pilot to land after the final lightening mission over Two Jima before the invasion of the Volcano Island, crosses off Two, from the mission completed ledger of his 7th A.A.F. fighter group. No Goldfish in Home of Goldfish King

(From an Article by Gordon Sinclair in Maclean's Magazine)

If you've seen a goldfish anywhere in the British Empire during the past six years, the chances are three out of five of the fish were bred and sold by George Aston, Stouffville, Ont.

If you saw your goldfish anywhere in Canada during any of the past 10 years, the chances are 999 in each 1,000 that Aston bred, fed, sold, and shipped that goldfish.

George Aston, Canada's goldfish king, produces more goldfish than all other breeders in the British Empire combined, and his personal "post-war plan is to double the capacity from its present 13 million fish a year. He says selling the fish will be a breeze.

Aston's 53 terraced ponds cover 15 acres and average a million goldfish a month for export and a million each year for the home trade. Many ponds are 100 yards in length, 100 feet wide and eight feet deep.

He can sell and deliver a million fish at an hour's notice and once sold 12½ million in a single order. Each of his 18 girl helpers can easily count 20,000 fish an hour, by hand.

By way of proving his versatility, the goldfish king turned bird breeder as well and once sold 10,000 canaries in a single day—every bird in Toronto.

In turtles, he sold 100,000 in an hour, and next morning took orders for an equal amount.

In pre-war days when parakeets were the love birds, could be imported, Aston's routine sales ran to 1,000 a week, but sometimes he sold 5,000 in a day. His price was 60 cents a pair.

He has also sold frogs, newts and tropical fish by the tens of thousands.

Now, during the long Canadian Winter, Aston's menus of goldfish hibernate, without food or motion, deep in the icy water. Then on a single warm day in March, he turns a switch, runs to center, like the spokes of a wheel, neither hearing nor feeling the snowstorms and blizzards.

About the first week of April, when pond ice has crumbled and honeycombed, the long Winter sleep will end, and the enfeebled and emaciated fish will swim toward shore, begging food.

Few will have died during the five-month slumber, but all will be weary and listless. Then, as the warming sun penetrates the pools, the making urge will assert itself, and each goldfish will get a spark in its eye.

In its wild state—oh, yes, there are wild goldfish—a female goldfish will shed, each year, 100 eggs ration and lay her eggs among mud-fly larvae, but George Aston provides his breeders with hygienic nests made of horsehair and wire in a frame 24 by 18 inches and four inches deep.

About the middle of May the females, now well-fed and frisky, will start laying eggs, and when each has deposited about 25,000, a male will take charge.

Four to seven days later, depending on the water temperature, the fish will hatch into black pinpricks of life which can neither swim nor eat. So they are then baby goldfish that you can put 1,000 into an ordinary tumbler of water and never see them. Two thousand in a glass might look like an indistinct smudge.

Some years ago Aston was doing a neat turnover in little swamp lizards called yellow-bellied newts. In five frogs for bait, and in baby turtles. These baby turtles were gathered by colored children from the swamps and bayous of Louisiana and Aston bought them in lots of 1,000, or occasionally 10,000.

Expecting a demand for such turtles in Britain, he wired Louisiana an order for a direct shipment of 10,000. Buyers in the swamplands of that region with an extra sero at the end and sent the hunters a-galloping into the swamp and swale, hell bent for turtles.

So they gathered up 100,000 and shipped them by seagoing express.

Confronted with such an overwhelming shipment, Aston figured on a publicity campaign to help him sell. He put 500 turtles in a box, had a cabby drive him to the heart of London and before the cabby had time to argue Aston stepped into the Strand and dropped his box of 500 turtles. They started walking with all the majestic dignity of a Cheltenham—that's their family name—in all directions and a delighted crowd gathered.

Traffic was snarled, horns blared, cops arrived and the turtles confined to crawl briskly and shriek.

Aston made sure that for every turtle he recaptured a pair appeared. Soon boys began to pocket a few, the bewildered bobby was thinking of sending for the riot squad, and reporters from nearby newspapers pounced on this human interest copy. When he had given what seemed a sufficiently lively story the goldfish king retrieved his publicity turtles and departed.

At the sixpenny shops next day buyers were waiting for him with enormous orders. The turtle farm had his every front page in London. Aston sold most of his 100,000 turtles at a profit of three cents per turtle, then doubled the profit on another 100,000 and came home to Canada with a gleam in his eye.

One claim the piscatorial professors advance is that the leisurely observation of little fish is a neat tonsorial tonic to strained nerves and that's why you'll find so many in hospitals, medical consulting rooms and dentists' chambers.

It's a shame, therefore, to tell you that the goldfishbone is "furnished to Aston's brother of Forest Hill hasn't a single goldfish from cellar to garret, and his wife has long since way it never will have.

British Paper "Calls '1st Canadian Army' Title Misleading

London, March 7 — (CP Cable)— In a plea for greater publicity for the part played by British troops in the present Allied west front offensive, the countess of Limerick in a paragraph today implied the name of the 1st Canadian Army should be changed because "it has become a misleading title."

An editorial in the Telegraph complained that United Kingdom troops were suffering from "misunderstanding not far short of a total blackout" as far as publicity in the offensive on the Rhineland is concerned, and "from daily dispatches it might be supposed that the only troops engaged in the campaign were Canadians and Americans."

86 Per Cent British

It added: "Admission is due in full measure for the exploits of the Canadians and Americans but 1st Canadian Army has become a misleading title. This army is composed of 86 per cent British troops and only 30 per cent Canadian troops but no official cognizance has been taken of this fact. The world at large, a phrase like '1st Canadian Army Front' naturally conveys the impression it is composed exclusively of Canadians."

The newspaper admitted that sometimes the name of a particular British unit is released but said this information usually is days late and does little to remove "a false impression."

The editorial contrasted the "studied obscurantism" of British authorities with the United States reaction of frequently identifying divisions engaged in particular operations.

In another column the Telegraph military correspondent listed the strength and achievements of British forces on every battlefront in the world and said of the 1st Canadian Army: "It is Canadian in name because its commander and staff are Canadian."

It was recalled here that shortly after the present Canadian Army offensive opened Feb. 8, Allied Supreme Headquarters officials in Paris released news that British troops participating in the drive outnumbered the Canadians, but both official reticence in naming British regiments and need for compression in London's wartime postage-stamp-size newspapers seem to have led most writers to refer to Gen. Crerar's forces as "The Canadians."

When it was made the headquarters announcement was prominently displayed in all British newspapers.

OUR SCHOOL LIFE!

Chapter 5—Grade XIII.

We all can heave heavy sighs now as it is our last year of school (Yes, yes hope!! Just think, just a few weeks more and we'll be free and now it is all over but the cheering. Not a, of course, if we get through this year. My, how we have advanced.

You are on the highest pedestal possible. It is all now (other than that of teacher) or are you're making plans for university and thinking about getting a steady job.

For most of you your time table shows many more spares than before.

This is your last year of rugby, basketball, hockey and other school affairs. By this time you here most of your subjects well in hand. You're not blowing up the lab. or confusing your language. Those circles and triangles have straightened themselves out in your mind. If they haven't, all you can do is hope for the best before June and if they haven't by then you can always dig ditches or something and pray they don't assign you a triangular ditch to dig!)

For those planning entrance into university you should get that case of superiority and chest because even though you are looked up to here you are just a "Freshman" to them. So you see as long as you go to school, just when you think you are on top someone changes your position and usually in a very disheartening way. For example, you leave public school and think you are getting high school and what happens? As soon as you get into high school you are a little ninth grader. Then you finally finish high school, then what? You enter university and are a freshman. Well finally you finish university but it is still the same. You start working at your profession and you are a beginner again.

But don't feel badly, just think when you become seventy you are at last considered an old veteran. (That is of course if you're not accused of second childhood.)

First Canadians Are Decorated On German Soil

By DOUGLAS AMABON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the Canadian Army in Germany, March 7. (CP Cable) — Seven Canadians received their decorations and completed their stubborn fight to the Rhine when they were presented with the ribbons of the Military Medal and Bar in an investiture at Canadian Corps headquarters.

The investiture was the first following a tour of Canadian formations by Gen. Crerar's Army Commander.

Bailey Built a Bridge

(By Richard F. Gallagher in the New York Times)

Colonel Bailey built his bridges during a summer's sunburn on the sand dunes of Normandy, and from that modest proving ground the "Bailey Bridge" was born. The idea of this young British civil engineer, who was assigned to superintendence of the Military of Supply Experimental Establishment at Christchurch, in Hampshire, was to provide a type of bridge that could be erected by any American and British engineer force from bridge through Italy and in turn push through France.

The best testimony on the worth of this new type span has come from Field Marshal Montgomery himself:

"Bailey never quite enough Bailey bridges," Montg said. "It's quite the best thing in that line we've ever had. We use everything we want."

Actually Bailey's idea is a prefabricated sectional bridge which is put together from interchangeable parts rather like the structural toy which one may buy for a child — many small boys who are now pre- of engineering. The parts can be extented, strengthened or added to at will. Like lattice-work panels They are of electrically welded steel (metal set) and can be put together by steel pins fitted into holes.

The simplicity of the bridging is its most striking feature. There are no right or left hand parts, no special tools or noise of hammering required. Simple a couple of stacks and wrenches the parts can be put in place as rigid and as wrecked as solidly to surprise the enemy. With a week's training building crews of about 40 men can put the parts for either on the bank of a stream, the bridge is erected and rolled across. Then to launch an entering nose to the opposite shore, finally, up with the parts—and jeeps, tanks and ammo trucks go clattering.

When the British Royal Engineers saw Bailey's bridge work they called it their "dream bridge." Five-and Bailey received the Order of the British Empire for the work. But because of its military importance, its existence was kept strictly secret and Italy had to be a secret.

Old army men say that throwing troops need "beans, bullets and bridges." In no war in history have so many bridges been needed — structures which had taken days of planning and construction. Over great rivers and narrow canyons swept the Bailey bridge by night. Advance air forces smashed selected bridges to prevent both retreat and counter attack. Along the Seine, the Rhine, the Po, Danube and other great streams the story was the same: "Bridge destroyed by enemy aircraft" or "bridge destroyed by retreating enemy forces."

Simple, swiftly-constructed spans met an absolute necessity. Bailey met the challenge. The Allied Air Force not only met, it bet the bridges their engineers could devise, using three constructions, called for hammering concentration of engineers and the use of as many as 26 different tools and nuts for parts. And when the

VITAL FACTOR in CANADIAN HEALTH

The need for a sound knowledge of Home Nursing is greater now than ever before. War has made deep inroads into the ranks of the medical profession—the demand placed on doctors and nurses today is onerous.

Wives and mothers who have taken the St. John Ambulance Association course in Home Nursing are able to make a definite contribution to health on the home front. With a sound knowledge of the elementary principles and practice of Home Nursing and of hygiene and sanitation, these women are in a position to care for the sick in their own homes and play an important part in building up the health and strength of Canadians.

Instruction in Home Nursing and First Aid is readily available at the nearest branch of the St. John Ambulance Association. Why not secure full details from your local Branch today—or write to St. John House, 321 Chapel Street, Ottawa, Ontario.

Ted Kennedy Paces Toronto Maple Leafs to 5-2 Victory Over Boston by Scoring 2 Goals

Bruins Needed Game Badly to be Sure of Fourth Place Spot

By EDDIE LEE
(CP Staff Writer)

If Chicago Black Hawks seek their customary friendly ice in the National Hockey League they need look no further than the Toronto Maple Leafs.

For today, perhaps a week after N.H.L. observers had all but given up the Hawks as lost, for at least now a poor bet to squeeze into the league play-offs, the unpredictable Hawks are still around, and with much too full of life to satisfy Boston Bruins.

And one of the principal reasons is Toronto Maple Leafs who last night blasted Bruins 5-2 at Boston, two nights after they had clipped New York Rangers 6-3 at New York.

A week ago Boston held a firm grip on fourth place and only three games were conceded an outside chance to upstage them. But the scene has changed.

Only Point Lead

Boston holds only a point lead over New York and are two points ahead of Hawks. Hawks and Rangers clash tonight at Chicago and the best the Bruins can hope for is a partner in the coveted playoff berth.

A win for Rangers would put them ahead of the Bruins while victory for Hawks would create a Hawk-Bruin tie. A draw would leave Boston and New York even.

Young Ted Kennedy paced Leafs to their third win in as many starts last night with a pair of unassisted goals. Bob Davidson opened scoring for Leafs in the first period on a passing play with Reg Hamilton. Kennedy's first goal came at the five minute mark of the second before Herb Cain notched one for Boston. Nick Metz scored for Leafs before the period ended.

Bill Jennings put Bruins back in the game as the third session opened and Gus Bodnar scored for Leafs before Kennedy netted his second of the night.

Goaltender Pat Stasiuk of Boston served 16 minutes in penalties, three minors and a 10-minute misconduct.

HERSHEY BEARS TIGHTEN HOLD ON SECOND PLACE

Defeat Cleveland for the Barons' First Home Beating in Fifteen Starts

(By The Canadian Press)
Thursday's hockey bills: Second game in the Eastern Division semi-finals at Cleveland — Eagles, Hershey Bears by their 6-3 victory over high-scoring Cleveland Barons last night moved one game ahead of their playoff berth. It was the first home defeat for the Barons in their last 15 starts.

Jack Stewart of the two last-place clubs, Providence Reds of the Eastern Division, was over at Louis Pyrers of the Western Division Flyers the loss was the eighth successive one for the Flyers.

By scoring one goal for Cleveland, Lloyd Cridland collected his 36th goal of the season. He is now one goal ahead of his teammate Earl Bartholomew.

The Flyers now seem to have abandoned all hopes of ever making the play-offs. Playing one of their poorest games of the season last night, they let the Reds score almost at will. Their only goal in the final stanza was credited to Art Chrour.

They'll be gunning for Slammin' Sam Snead, who has retired from the Navy has won six tournaments — three in a row.

The Washington Senators open spring training today at College Park, Maryland, and Clark Griffith, veteran owner of the club, says "We're going to play even if we have to use nine old men. There will be no hesitancy about going ahead." In other quarters however there are doubts about baseball's ability to weather the lightening wartime restrictions.

LESSON NO. 824
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Where methods straight and true are found, the experts must go hand and hand. They seem to survive on tricky rule that complicates the game for us.

Some system inventors use a different set of rules for nearly every new deal. Anyway, it looks that way even though they may call it by brilliant tactics that most of us are unable to copy.

In this game, we admit that our method is simple and direct. We make no bones about the fact that we are guided by inferences or deductions. What we do with any hand applies to all.

We select our bids from the center of choice in N-A-N; takeout, assist, no trump. An opener has a basis of five tricks; responder two. Much value in the last partnership contract shows another trick.

Take this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠A Q 10 5	♠ 9 8 2
♥ 9 8	♥ A K 7 6
♦A K 7 3	♦ 9 5 4
♣Q 9	♣ K J 10 3

South has six tricks; five high cards and a short card in the heart suit. North has four tricks; three high cards and a short card in the diamond suit.

These players should reach a contract that involves the taking of ten tricks. While telling each other how many tricks they have, they also decide what suit they like best for trumps.

Both opens with one spades showing only his haste of five tricks. North responds with two hearts, showing three tricks; two of which are his best and the other being the raise in number.

The next bid by south is three diamonds, a raise in number that shows his strength and last trick. North then bids four spades, a raise in number that shows his fourth and best trick.

Notice that each player keeps making takeouts until they have no more to show. And only when they have no more takeouts do they go to work on their assists.

That correct four spade contract could be reached with bids that sparkling with ingenuity. But nothing the bidwhole could think up would get there with such good reason and understanding.

Simple acts tell the facts.

HAMILTON EDGES SAINTS 2 TO 1 IN ROUGH GAME

Junior Warfare Resumes With St. Michael's Going to St. Catharines

By The Canadian Press

Hamilton Majors today enjoyed a 2-1 lead over St. Catharines Saints in their best-of-seven series for the senior championship of the O. H. A. as a result of their victory on home ice last night. Hamilton edged the Saints 2-1 in a rough game.

Tonight the junior warfare resumes, with Toronto St. Michael's going to St. Catharines for the 4th game of their best-of-seven semi-final. St. Mikes hold a 2-1 edge. At Toronto, the other junior semi-final, a best-of-three series, opens with Young Rangers entertaining Oakl Red Wings.

The senior game last night was tied 1-1 at the end of the second period. Brady sank the first marker for Hamilton on assists from Conlick and Shillington at 5.55 of the first period. Cooper tied it up for the Saints on an assist from Wallace at 9.36 of the second. Robertson, assisted by Jacombe and Mason, got the winning counter at 12.54 in the final frame.

Other games at Hamilton and Red Reynolds of St. Catharines were given major penalties in the second period after a tangle which followed several other bumping tilts.

The game was tame as Red Reynolds argued that he was the victim. Both went out for repairs, Reynolds coming back with five stitches in his lip.

QUEBEC ACES DOWN COMMANDOS

Quebec, March 7 — (CP) — In a high scoring senior Quebec League playoff game highlighted by the outstanding performance of veteran goalie Bill Beveridge, Quebec Aces downed Ottawa Commandos 3-1 here last night to take a 2-0 lead in the best-of-three semi-final series for the league championship.

Both teams played wide open hockey throughout and a crowd of some 4,000 fans saw Beveridge, again and again the shots fired at him from all angles by the Ottawa snipers. Beveridge handled a total of 39 shots during the contest, as compared to 19 for Lionel Bouvrette who also turned in a fine performance.

Neil Colville played a very effective game on the attack as well as on the blue line of Ottawa. Stu Smith and Lloyd Ailsby also starred for the visiting team.

Bill Trumbley, Ronnie Larsch and Ulric Tondreau were the star performers for the Aces. The trio was responsible for the three Quebec goals and two of them were bagged by Trumbley.

Stu Smith scored for Ottawa.

Cornwall Cookies Tie Lachine Rapids

Cornwall, March 7 —(CP)— Cornwall Cookies last night tied Lachine Rapids two games all in their Interprovincial Hockey League semi-final playoff series, when they trounced the latter 6-3.

Cornwall defence proved too strong for the Lachine boys after the first period when Rapids scored their only point of the game. The last two frames were a bit rough Cookies who showed much better form than in their previous encounters.

The Lemon Brothers combination proved much helpful to Cornwall with Chuck Lemon scoring two points in the third period while his brother had one goal in the second. Other scorers for Cornwall were Bobby Burr, Joe Desroches, and Marshall. Champagne scored for Rapids.

New York, March 7 (AP)—During the basketball season you've heard a lot of complaints that the game gives tall players unfair advantages, but why not raise the same point in connection with baseball pitchers?.....A perusal of Earl Hilligan's American League record book shows that most of the pitchers are less than six feet tall, stretching up to five feet. Pinky Woods of the Red Sox.....Five others are only an inch shorter and only 26 of the 117 pitchers listed are less than six feet tall...The only real little guys are Detroit's Stubby Overmire and Marino Pieretti, of Washington, rookie who comes from the Rio Lobos, Italy. They're both 5-7. The same size as Brooklyn outfielders Roy Henshaw and Milton Stadler.....Maybe there is nothing in it. Doesn't mean a lot, but when you put those 117 pitchers on top of the pitcher's mound, baseball obviously is getting a big guy some sort of an advantage.

I was doing my homework and wishing I wasn't, and pop was smoking to himself in his private chair, and I said, O wiseacres, speaking the luck, I've got 2 problems to do in arithmetic.

Three minus 2 equals none, pop said.

Meaning all I had to do was do them and then I didn't be did, and I said, Well anyways, pop, this arithmetic is a clinch compared to the things I'll have to do when I get to high school. Just think of higher math, I said.

Ain't rather not, if you dont mind but in the days when I had to think of it, why, thought was far from amusing, I admit, pop said, and I said, Aint algebra plenty, and pop sounds even fiercer.

It is, pop said. Geometry is Swedish invention conceived by a fellow named Yerkild during a nightmare caused by having to sleep with his head in a warm oven and his feet in a pail of ice water, and yet some people master it with laughable ease, so maybe you'll be one of the some, he said.

I say I wont, pop, not unless I change entirely, and humbly, pop, it's certainly a big relief to think how easy this arithmetic is compared to algebra and geometry, I said, and pop said, I'm delighted that you feel so much better. Have you done your 2 problems yet? he said, and I said, Not yet, Dad.

Well then get right to work on them, because when you've finish I want to ask you an important question, pop said, and I said, Okay, pop.

And I did the 3 problems pretty easy, saying, They're all done pop, and pop said, Good. Well, the question I wanted to ask you is, how do you feel now?

I feel swell, I feel the best I've felt yet, I said, and pop said, Then you're not dizzy from bending your nose to the old grindstone and yet tired of your problems? he says and up, you'll find it's the shortest distance between 2 important points. Do you follow me? he said, and I said, Yes sir.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER II

"You never can tell with Fran; she's dear," Amy answered. "She had to come to the Potter house by appointment of executor, it was the afternoon when Mrs. Potter's will was to be read. I've quite liked Cherry from the start, and Fran, of course, counted Emma cold Cherry, who had been supported by their rich relative for years. The house was coming, and surprisingly Amy had been installed in it, and Fran not.

"She must have left you some money, Cherry surmised, for Amy wouldn't have asked you to come."

"She must have plenty," Amy said in satisfaction.

Emma put her head in the door and told both girls to come downstairs.

"Me, too?" Cherry asked.

"Yes, I think so. Everyone in the house," Emma said briefly, and vanished. Cherry and Amy followed immediately to the library, where chairs had been set in a solemn semicircle to face the wide, flat mahogany desk at which the lawyer sat. Judge Marshbanks was near him; he smiled at the girls as they came in, and at Emma, the maid, staff, even including the Chinese cook and his helper as they filed in and took their seats. Almost at once the will was opened. Their late employer had remembered them all, leaving to every servant a sum approximating a thousand dollars for each year in her service, and for Emma's eleven years of faithfulness a round twenty-five thousand. Cherry was stupefied to hear her own name read out as beneficiary for a legacy of fifteen hundred.

The old lawyer was to be given to the city for a museum. Everything in the way of personal belongings, upstairs furnishings and the bulk of the estate were left to the granddaughter of her beloved old friend Amelia Wellington, Amy Marshbanks.

There were hundreds of bequests, some enormous, fifty thousand dollars to an orphanage; fifty thousand more for a chapel to be added to the cathedral; fifty dollars and apiece to the indigent cousins from Boston and Amy's husbands warned. Amy that the entire estate might be absorbed by these magnificent gestures.

"She's left me what deal of money in twenty-nine," said the judge, "and at the advice of her attorney and myself she put a lot more into annuities shortly afterward. Those stop with her life of course."

"What are your plans, Cherry?" Judge Marshbanks inquired.

"I haven't had time to make plans," said Cherry, "but I think I will go to college. I'm twenty years old, and I feel as if I didn't know anything."

"Well," the judge said, "that's not a bad idea. It will get you among people of your own age, shake you up, put you on your own —Yes, that's a good plan, Bertsley!"

"Stanford, I thought."

"Why not?" he agreed. "Wait a minute—wait a minute," he added. "I know a nice place down there where you might like to stay. Lots of youngsters in the family; you wouldn't feel so alone. What does Emma think of this? Have you talked to her?"

Aunt Emma and I talked the night Mrs. Porter was so ill, the last night she—" Cherry was beginning when Amy put in an animated interruption.

"Do you call her 'Aunt Emma?'"

"Well, yes, I do—sometimes," Cherry's face turned scarlet. Her fire flamed until the tips of her ears were red. The dark had allipost inadvertently; she pressed it passed at the fair and real perfect comprehension in his eyes.

"We were sitting upstairs waiting for the doctors to come out of Mrs. Porter's room," she resumed her story. "And I knew I hoped she would get well, and Emma said she was sure she wouldn't. So then we talked of what we would do, and Emma's going up into Macedonia, where she was born, little place, and retire, not work any more, and she wants a few chickens and a vegetable garden, that she's dying of the city."

"I should think Emma'd be well enough to do that," the judge said again with an approving nod. "Emma's a gallant lady. Well, go on, Cherry, through which Amy had been listening with a glint of amusement in her eyes.

"Emma said that more than anything she'd like to see me settled in a home of my own, and I said I'd like that, too, Cherry."

"A month ago."

"Oh, no, I think," Cherry confessed honestly, "I had been dreaming—thinking that I might have—well—different relations.

I always thought Emma was my mother's nurse. But—we—we like each other."

"You're a nice girl," the man commented, as if thinking aloud, with half-closed eyes upon her. Cherry flushed with pleasure; her little laugh was proud and embarrassed.

"Did you—do you ever see my mother?" Didn't you say you hadn't?" she asked, sobering again.

"No," the judge thought, his linked hands dropped between his knees. "I was on the fire. No, I was away—I was in Washington for several years after I married," he said. "But I knew she was very young and very trusting—she was not much older than you are now, when you were born, Cherry. And she was the younger; she was nineteen.

"And you mustn't," he went on after a moment, "you mustn't blame your father too much. He was good-hearted; he was a devoted fellow in so many ways. But always was deemed unable to think out consequences! All through our boyhood it was Fred who got into trouble and I got the punishment for trying to get him out. He followed any impulse. I'm not sure everything would come out all right, as I always thought," the kind quiet voice went on, "that what happened between him and your mother was the result of a single moment of wild emotion — two people, completely deprived for the moment of their senses."

"Oh, I hope so!" Cherry said, her hand gripping the arm of her chair.

She had gotten to her feet, reeling slightly with the hand gripping her chair, and the judge had risen, too.

"What are you sad—" she whispered. "that—that your brother Fred—Amy's father. . . ."

There was silence. The judge was standing now too, his face as shocked as her own.

"You said that Emma told you?" he said. "She had that! Not that! She only said that my mother—I didn't tell me anything—she said that—"

"Cherry!" The man's arm was about her shoulders. "Sit down," he said, "and talk with me a moment. My dear child, you mustn't take it this way! I'm sorry you are terribly sorry that I've shocked you."

She was breathing hard, but she sat down, her face very big in her pale face met his courageously.

"It's all right," she said, "I ought to know. I ought to have known before!"

For a full long moment of silence they looked at each other, then he spoke.

"Emma was my father's nurse and my mother's housekeeper," the judge presently said. "She was always a superior person, you can see that. She had been Fred's nurse and mine in the same way. We were boys, had been widowed and came back as my father's nurse. Her sister Charlotte was Emma's sister, or better, Emma was younger; she met my brother, eventually, she used to be in the house a good deal; Fred was always a scamp. He was married; his wife was expecting a baby of her own when all this happened. There was nothing to be done except make her comfortable and provide for her child. Amy's first one — you understand? has nothing to do with my brother. That came through her mother; her mother's grandfather Wellington, he left money to her that Fred could do—he did.

"Amy didn't have been administering for you was left you by your brother—your father—and in reference to the disposal of yours," Judson Marshbanks went on in an easier tone as still watching her keenly and anxiously. "I want to remind you that we have a balance of comfortable, substantial, professional, you would like to take up—"

She was not listening. She seemed like a girl made of stone.

"So you see that I am your uncle in every sad truly," the judge said lightly, affectionately, after a pause.

"I know," she whispered with white lips. And then, with a sudden shiver of pain that compacted her young face: "Has anyone told Amy? Does Amy know?"

"No. Nobody knows. My mother, myself, Emma. Not another soul."

"Did she say that?" he asked with a little frown. "Well, you must forgive my proud, unreasonable old woman. Your grandmother too, Cherry."

"My grandmother!" Her eyes were dark with doubt, thought. "I think—thank you so much—but I think I'll go upstairs, I'm tired," Cherry faltered, and was instantly in his arms, sobbing against his shoulder. His hand was on her head.

"I know," he said. "I know. It's very hard."

Almost immediately she stopped crying, straightened herself, found her handkerchief. "Amy's calling you!" she said, hearing her name in another moment she was gone.

She fled upstairs and to her room and there, instead of thinking—trying to walk the floor, to pause, to think, to weep violent tears—she fell flinging herself on her bed. The intensity of the humiliation of the cruelty of her feeling one of two sisters who were strangers and whose destinies touched almost the extremes of human contrast, choked and smothered her and she stopped her weeping only to pace the floor again and again to break into self-pitying tears.

It was eight o'clock, and she was haggard and weary, when she ran downstairs to the telephone upon a sudden desperate impulse and called a Sausalito number.

But when Kelly's heartening, pleased voice answered her, her tears came again and she could only gasp incoherent comfort:

"I'm in it—trouble and I've been crying, Kelly. I wondered if you'd come—come—come and get me for a drive?" stammered Cherry. "I see I had—had—and I've got to—I—call alone!"

"Trouble, Marchioness?" Kelly said, instantly concerned. "Hold everything, and I'll be there in twenty minutes, and you come up over here and have supper with me. Hey? Hey, girl? I was just feeling very low and blue and we'll do each other good, eh? Hey?"

Their dinner was of eggs and carried to the fire and eaten socially from the trays. Kelly would not let her begin on the food of her troubles until she had eaten. Then he piled things on a table, carried them away, came back to sit in the chair opposite her, filled his pipe and looking expectantly toward her.

"Now, who's been mean to you?" She gave him a flicker of a smile, but immediately her face was serious again.

"I feel so ashamed of having bothered you with it! But I—I felt that I was going mad, and you were the only friend I could think of. I just thought that if you were coming to town you might take me for a drive. I didn't mean all this!"

"I tell you my troubles," he reminded her, filling his pipe.

"It doesn't seem so terrible now; but it had enough! You see, we girls 'at Saint Dorothea's never have much about our families. That's part of being there. It isn't a regular school, you know. There aren't any measles, and no relatives coming to see you. And we all get to know one part of understand —that we aren't like other girls, who have families and homes."

"That's the trouble, you came from?"

"Yes. I was there thirteen years, from the time I was seven. But I remember my mother before that, and that I had a nurse named Emma."

"Fran told me something about it."

"At least I thought she was my nurse, and I used to imagine that my mother had been—well, rich, I suppose, and—and—someone had left money to take care of me—and Emma and Marshbanks was my guardian."

"I see. Go on, Marchioness."

"Well, then when I came down here and found me a position with Mrs. Porter, Emma told me one day that she was my mother's sister. She was a nurse at all she was—she is my aunt!"

"A jolly thing!"

"I don't think it was a jolt because I'd always thought of her as a nurse," Cherry said with a deprecating air of trying to be quite honest, "but I think it was sort of a shock to me because she's always been sort of—firm with me. She hadn't been affectionate. She hadn't acted glad to have me."

Close to tears again she looked blindly into the darting dagger-like flames of the fire, and tried to steady her trembling lips.

"Even—even when she told me, she didn't act as if anything loving," she faltered on, in a thickened voice.

"My dear girl," Kelly Conlee said, taking his pipe from his mouth, "loads of people are going to love you. You don't you worry! You're the kind people love. I'll bet all the girls at school were cockband and a housekeeper, and Emma's probably a jewel. She looks rather like a piece of never seen sail horse."

Cherry laughed brokenly, steadily wiped her eyes, and went on. "But, you see, Mrs. Porter left me some money—"

"Well, bully for her!" Kelly commented. "Have a good cry over that!"

"They read the will today. The house is going to be a museum, and lots of the furniture will be left there, and Amy's got a lot, and we all get money."

"Amy?" Kelly gave it undecided how to proceed, then rushed on. "Poor girl! But then, after they'd read the will, Amy and the judge and I were having tea in the library, and we were talking about what Amy'd do and what I'd do and all that, and I happened to call Emma 'Aimi Emma.'"

"But he's your guardian. He'd know that she was your aunt."

"Oh, yes, that wasn't it. And when Amy looked surprised I just said that I called her that sometimes, and Amy didn't pay any attention. But afterward Amy went out and then the judge asked me if Emma had told me about it, and I said yes, but then it thought that was all he meant."

"What was all he meant?"

"That she was my mother's sister."

"And what more did he mean?"

"Well, that—that—he went on talking about it, and that Emma was so fine even if she was rough and then he said that his brother Fred wasn't really a good person but impulsive and always getting into trouble."

"His brother Fred!" Kelly had kneeled to poke the slipped log in the fire. He shot her a look over his shoulder. "Fred was Amy's father?!"

"Yes, Amy's name is Amy Marshbanks."

"That's right too. There was another brother?"

"No. Only Amy's father."

Kelly stopped his pipe halfway to his mouth and stared at her.

"Huh," he commented, in a brief sound like a grunt.

"And it—it killed me," Cherry said, not crying now, but pale and beginning to be agitated, "it killed me! She's always had everything—all he's have more now—but it's not that! It's that they all loved her and I—I was nothing, they've made so much of her and she's always had—I mean, I don't want anything, I don't want them to love her. . . ."

Emma recalled suddenly at the sight of his attentive but not too sympathetic face and for a moment looked at him in silence.

"I mean," she went on presently, gaining self-control with every word, "I mean that it—it sickened me to find that Amy and I are half sisters, and that he, my father, could treat my mother so terribly and my mother was so noble, and she was ill so long! And she got nothing, and I spent all those years at Saint Dorothea's while Amy was traveling. . . ."

Her voice trailed off into an ashamed silence; the look she turned to him became agitated and then apologetic. For a full minute neither spoke and then Cherry said somewhat timidly, "Don't you think that's terrible?"

"You rather spoiled a supper," Kelly began, "that things in your background are a bit more unusual 'regular?'"

"Oh, I'm, I did. Indeed, I did! They don't tell you anything at Saint Dorothea's, you know, but of course the girls talk and read books."

"Well, then, lovely, Cherry. Why is it so much worse to know that father came of a good family, and that he really tried to do what he could for you? I suppose it was he who supported your mother, Emma's sister, and left money to take care of you?"

DONOR OF CUPS THANKED BY KIWANIS

Appreciation of Kiwanis club members by Mr. Jimmie Kennedy who kindly donated the pups named "Laddie" for their recent raffle was impressed at luncheon on Tuesday when Mr. Ketcheson was the guest at the weekly meeting. Members of the local girl guides and boy scouts also came in for expression of appreciation by Kiwanian Jack White who intimated these groups of workers had been principally responsible for the financial success of the raffle.

And incidentally the winner of "Laddie", the first pup drawn for, is already the owner of two dogs. "What in the world will I ever do with another one," remarked Mrs. D. Orr, Trenton Street, when she vised in her good fortune. But the beauty of the young pup melted her heart and she promptly assured "this pup would be kept."

NEW MEMBER ADDED TO KIWANIS CLUB

Mr. Don McNevin, local proprietor of the Clinton Hoy Creamery, was added to the Kiwanis Club roster at the regular luncheon meeting on Tuesday when he was installed by past district governor Cliff Baragar. The new member was introduced to the meeting by Mr. Ernie Pinkie. Born in Lisgar, Mr. McNevin has been in Belleville for the past three years. He is now associated with the above creamery.

KIWANIANS MAY VISIT WATERTOWN, N.Y., CLUB

Members of the local Kiwanis club and their wives have been extended an invitation from the Watertown, N. Y. Kiwanis to take part in an Interclub meeting in their city on April 3rd. Cornwall, Brockville and Kingston club have also been included in the invitation to the meeting, which will take the form of a "ladies' night."

Local club members seemed to approve of the idea when it was broached at their Tuesday luncheon meeting by Junior Club chairman Jack McVeigh, and a committee was taken a considerable number signified their intention to make the trip. Suitable transportation could be arranged for the trip, it was assured.

Pfc. H. Daniels Collegiate Guest

Former student at Belleville Collegiate and at a member of the United States Army, a veteran of the fighting in the South Pacific, Pfc. Horace Daniels and wife, of the American Forces Radio Station, was special guest during the regular Wednesday morning assembly held in the Collegiate auditorium.

As rather a full morning's program had been planned, Horace did not speak to the assembly but remained in acquaintance with teachers and was heard only briefly by students.

He is spending his furlough with his friend in the army.

Campaign speeches for the election of officers for the Collegiate Students' Council took up most of the time at the weekly assembly, while Bob Stebbings, recent scholastic champion at the Kiwanis Music Festival in Toronto, was heard in a euphonium solo, while the band offered selections.

Campaign speeches were given by Booth Bird and Jean Reid and Doug Denton, both of whom are running for the presidency, and Gwen Manjuris, Geraldine Murray, Molly Ferguson, Ann Roberts and Percy Martin are campaigning for the other office of vice-president. Barbara Marsden and Jean Reid had charge of the assembly.

A number of students asked about 2,000 dollars which was collected for fighting fire Metcalfe, which fell to the lot of the Belleville units and afterborne troops Feb. 27.

Fulwell Quarry Historic

The story of the Limestone Industry and of its importance to other industries was told the Rotary Club by T. R. Sewell, agent to Sir Hedworth Williamson, Bart., whose family have worked the Fulwell Quarries for 100 years, says The Sunderland (Eng.) Echo.

The limestone industry is probably the oldest in the world, judging by evidences that lime and plaster of Paris were used in Egypt 3,000 years B.C. Evidence that lime is necessary in 960 B.C. Calo first mentions lime in Rome about 184 B.C.

There is little doubt that Fulwell Quarries were worked by the Romans, probably for the lime they used them build their Roman wall. We have found there quarries containing bones, and pottery and kitchen refuse.

Varieties of Limestone.

Limestone deposits, fortunately, are very widespread. Almost every all has many varieties, starting with soft chalks and going through the various changes, such as magnesian limestone, and mountain limestone until we get to the hard marble. They are all of the same class of carbonate, but in various proportions, marble being practically pure.

The Fulwell deposits are the Permian and magnesian limestone. They give a fair average analysis of about 80 per cent calcium carbonate. They are not pure, as Midland lake, the water of which became so thick, as to kill all the fish died.

We find at the bottom of our quarry beds of limestone, which contain fossil shells. They are about the size and shape of earthnuts. If you get a really good piece it looks like a section on oat cake. Only Fossil Life.

Apart from that there is no fossil life at all in the Fulwell Quarries, but there has been a most extraordinary re-crystallization. No body can say how it took place in the form of cannonball, but there is the famous honeycomb beds in this stone. Some of the finest of Permian fossil remains geologist coming from all over the world to study the beds at Fulwell Quarries. Apart from the geological interest they are of exceptional geological importance.

Before getting the quarries we found that considerable difficulties had to be overcome. We tried mechanical grabs at one time for loading the broken stone onto the wagons, but found that, although it is cheaper to load in this way the upkeep of the grabs and the machines was so heavy that it paid us to revert to the old system of breaking the stone and loading it on the wagons by hand.

After the stone had been loaded the stone is taken to our kilns where it is burned. In the old types of pot kilns, where the burning process is very little changed from the methods of centuries ago, it takes from 12 to 15 cwt. of coal to burn a ton of lime.

Economical Plant.

I have no hesitation in saying that at Fulwell we have the most economical burning plant in the world. We installed the first of the kilns 30 years ago and the last one about 20 years ago. These six kilns, year in and year out, are burning only 2½ tons of coal per ton of lime, against 15 cwt. which is the usual type of pot kiln.

Coal is the fuel mostly used in this area for burning lime, but a great deal of oil is also used and after the war I believe a great deal more coke will be used.

In America wood is largely used, and in Chicago 35 years ago I was told that horse manure from street sweepings was used quite successfully in the kilns.

At Fulwell we had the first plant in Britain, and probably in Europe, for producing hydrated lime. This prepared lime is very pure and contains no free chemical composition.

Sir Hedworth Williamson's family have been working the Fulwell Quarries for some 300 years, and have been doing so back about 130 years. In the old days the quarries did a big trade with the north of Scotland. On the river you can see where old kilns were situated at the "Wreath Quay — actually the "creek" quay, on account of the name from the kilns—and at Cornhill.

Three Sets of Kilns.

There were three sets of kilns on the river. The Fulwell stone came on a wagonway down Newcastle road, was then turned into a tunnel, to come out on the "Wreath Quay." There was a much-used wagonway for the stone from the Southwick Carley Hill Quarries.

The stone was burned on the quay side and the lime put into small ships. There were three quarrying firms operating—the Fulwell Quarries, Wearmouth Coal Company and the Southwick Quarries. Each firm had a small boy noted for his speed stationed at Hoker. When he sighted a vessel coming for a cargo there was a race to the various offices to inform the companies.

Representatives of the three firms then went down to the river and met the skipper to bargain for the purchase of the cargo. The price of the lime was generally the first purchase was determined by the building of so the number of cardrons which the firm would offer to supply to load the ship. I have seen interesting letter in my office from a firm making a very bitter complaint that they had only got five more cauldrons of lime than they paid for.

Trade with Scotland.

The trade with Scotland went on until the last war and then was completely stopped. We then established a good railway trade with the north of Scotland.

Lime is an essential product in our industry today. Besides its use in building and plastering it is very extensively used in manufacture, in agriculture, in paper-making, sewage disposal and tar-tanning and in a score of chemical processes.

It is almost as important to industry as coal. Hardly anything can be manufactured without the use of lime or limestone at some stage of the process.

The government is proposing to bring back building operatives from the forces to push on with housing schemes, but they will never be able to make progress until they also bring back quarry men to quarry the stone, and provide the raw material for the building trade.

Canadian vs. U.S. Political System

(By Richard L. Strout in Christian Science Monitor)

Washington — The United States has just had a national election; Canada is just about to have one.

Unfortunately, after a Presidential election it is often impossible to tell who has had the ball. Often the election doesn't prove very much. Take the 1944 American election. Mr. Roosevelt was returned and the newspapers talked about a "mandate." But in the brief intervening period the House had roundly defeated the commander-in-chief's Bailey committee; and the Administration has taken a licking in the debate on giving Henry Wallace the loan powers, previously exercised by Jesse Jones.

There is nothing unusual in these results. Most writers on American government point to the chronic friction between the executive and the legislation branches as an inevitable result to the Constitutional separation of powers.

Now contrast the Canadian — or parliamentary — system. There is a greater sense of political drama at several points. One thing is good because drama keeps up public interest. Another actually is a democracy. One element of drama is suspense — uncertainty. In the United States the election is decided by calendar, not issue. You can predict when the election will come a hundred years ahead. But in Canada, that is not at all regularly, right to the end, as to when they Mr. King would call an election.

Then there is another basic difference. It's impossible to tell now, who will win out in the tangled, exciting and important Canadian election. But this is pretty certain. Whoever wins will really be in office. That is the sense that responsibility from there on will be pinned squarely on the victor.

The voters will know who has the power in Ottawa, who has the ball. That is about the hardest thing to ascertain, a lot of times in Washington. The President may want one thing and Congress something else, and then there is a deadlock. Or some petty baron of a committee, chairman, in one of the 30 or so Congressional committees, may object to a bill which you, I, the public, the President — about everybody — wants. One of the great things in the world is to budge the hill out.

In Canada, if Mackenzie King, or some other Prime Minister, is overruled by Parliament, he can call an immediate election. He can have a showdown then and there. If he doesn't like the "Ilsley committee" or "Wallace nomination" he can go to the public immediately. That engenders a sense of responsibility all around. The minority has its "shadow cabinet" all ready to take over. An Opposition can't just oppose; it has to think, too.

There is not an advance meeting recently, attended by several Congressmen, which discussed the report of the American Political Science Association on streamlining Congress. I was surprised at the very strong sentiment express by some Congressmen that the separation of legislative and executive authority has been carried too far. It has become a "fetish," one Congressman said.

Diplomat's Wife Strongly Favors World Language

Mme. Henri Bonnet, Greek-Born, and Versatile, Ran Hat Shop in New York After Hitler Invaded France

By ADELAIDE KERR
(Associated Press Writer)

New York, March 7 (AP) — Mme. Henri Bonnet, wife of the new French ambassador to the United States would like to see plans for a universal language included in the peace plans.

"I have thought about this a great deal," she said, in her suite at the Ritz during a recent New York visit. "There should be one language in which the people of every country can express themselves to those of all the other countries—tell what they think and feel, their ideas and opinions. If we know people and talk to them we can understand them so much better."

Mme. Bonnet's black eyes glowed with feeling as she spoke. She is a good looking young woman, neatly coiffed dark head, a tall slender figure and the chic of a Parisian. But her chic is tempered with the demands of a woman who goes places and does things.

Greek-born Helle Bonnet has lived a far more varied and active life than most diplomats' wives. She was born in Corfu, the daughter of a rich business man. Since her mother died when she was very small, she spent childhood in schools in Asia Minor, Greece, Germany and Switzerland and acquired a number of languages. She met M. Bonnet in Geneva at the League of Nations, where he was a member of the secretariat and they were married in the early 30s. After Hitler invaded France they came to New York, where M. Bonnet taught at the Ecole Libre of New School for Social Research and Mme. Bonnet opened a hat shop.

Took up Millinery.

"I wanted to support myself," she said. "I wanted my husband to be free without the burden of a wife to support at that time. So I got a girl to teach me how to make hats and opened a shop. I went very well. When I went to Washington I gave it to her and she and a friend run it now. But every time I come to New York I have a meal with them and we go the movies and then go back and try on hats.

"I have been extremely happy in this country under terrible conditions. I met the most extraordinary kindnesses from every corner. It's something you don't find everywhere. I have great respect for the Americans' genuineness and honesty."

Mme. Bonnet has spent the first month in Washington on protocol duties, calling on and receiving calls from the wives of diplomats and officials. Add to that a heavy calendar of dinners and luncheons. Recently she spoke to the annual conference of the Women Directors of the National Association of Broadcasters in New York and scored a hit by her manner. One gets the impression that quiet and worldly though her hat may be—this was a woman with a heart.

"There is so much I want to do now," she said. "I want to organize the French units to work with the American Red Cross, re-upholstering furniture and making curtains for rooms in the United States Army hospitals for service men. I am thinking of being a nurse's aid."

TODAY the cry of little children is heard across the oceans. From the flooded flats of Holland comes the wail of the homeless and lonely. In the famine-stricken cities of Russia the cry of helpless little ones grows weak with hunger. In the devastated areas of the world, little children need food, clothing, medical supplies. In war-weary China, children — and mothers — are dying.

Can we close our hearts to the cry of the world's unfortunate little ones? No! Through the Canadian Red Cross, we reach out a helping hand, and see that they are fed, clothed and nourished back to health and strength. We meet bring the smile of happiness to faces now sad and tear-stained.

Outflank Kuestrin And Reach Seelow East of Capital

Great Battle Rages Along 125-Mile Front on Oder

London, March 8 (CP) — The Russians have driven to within 25 miles of Berlin's city limits, outflanking the fortress of Kuestrin and reaching Seelow on the west side of the Oder, it was announced in broadcast from the German capital said today.

Seelow is directly east of Berlin and is 12 miles west of the Oder. It is on the main railway skirting the Oder which connects Berlin and Frankfurt.

Marshal Gregory Zhukov's massive new offensive, timed with the Allied drive to the Rhine, 311 miles to the west, also has reached a point 29 miles from Berlin northwest of Kuestrin, Berlin reported.

Thousands of Soviet troops were reached from the Russian bridgehead at Gusterbern between Kienstrin and Frankfurt, and said intensified fighting was raging there in the area, with many places changing hands.

Great Artillery Barrage

Fighting was reported flaming along a 125-mile front along the Oder from Stettin Bay to Crossen following a great artillery barrage that began 48 hours ago. The weight of the Russian artillery and attack was on both sides of Kuestrin, 39 miles south of Berlin, with the Russians battering at the northwestern, southern and southeastern defences of the fortress.

To the northeast the Germans said, the Russians have breached the old Danzig free state and smashed to within 18 miles of Danzig.

Eighty miles west of Danzig near the Baltic coast, the Russians captured the railway centre of Schlawe, a town of 8,000, the Germans said. Schlawe is 22 miles northeast of Koslin.

Moscow had not officially confirmed the German announcement but correspondents in the Soviet capital were permitted to hint that the German broadcasts were true.

Moscow, who drove to the Oder in the first place, has many thousands his forces for the grand assault for more than a month, while Marshal Ivan Koney on the south pushed forward to the Neisse River, and other forces brought the northern flank up to the Baltic and the lower Oder.

Attack Threatens Stettin

The latter wing also was developing a front which threatened to place Stettin, Hitler's home town and birthplace of Russia's Catherine the Great, under attack from the south, east and north.

The Germans said the Russians were only 12 miles by-pass of Stettin.

Further north they had pushed even closer. Already Pasilik, six miles south of Berlin on the main railway linking the city with Stettin Bay, was under fire from Russian guns.

Berlin reported that the Russians had invaded Wollin, first of the stepping stone islands separating the bay from the Baltic Sea.

Scores of cleanup battles were being fought eastward along the Baltic where up to 200,000 Germans have been encircled in Pomerania, Danzig and the old Polish Corridor, and Berlin said there was a "terrific bloodletting" in these fights.

Moscow dispatches said the remnants of half a dozen German divisions were trapped in the area of Kolberg on the Baltic. Berlin said the Russians had broken into the city.

Moscow had no news of Koney's front along the Neisse and Upper Breslau in Silesia, but the German communique said a German counter-attack resulted in recapture of Lauban, on the Queis River 67 miles east of Dresden.

Berlin said the Kuestrin-Frankfurt front before Berlin was under the command of Lt.-Gen. Reinefahrt, but A. S. Jessor, who is accused by the Russians of war crimes in Poland.

Under him, Maj.-Gen. Remer, who the Germans said frustrated a plot to seize Berlin during the plot against Hitler last July, commanded the Kuestrin garrison, the Germans announced.

Makes Us Laugh

London, March 8 (Reuters) — British naval guns were today both amused and angry at suggestions made in the United States that the British fleet was too slow and deficient in carrier planes for the type of warfare planned against Japan.

"It makes us laugh," one naval authority said.

"Before the last war the destroyer Viper, one of the fastest vessels in the world in its driven by Parsons turbines, attained a speed of 30 knots. It was nearly 30 years ago, yet it is now said that the latest types of British warships and carriers operating in the Pacific are only capable of half that speed."

Two Warships, 16 Freighters Sunk or Damaged

Manila, March 8 (AP) — United States troops were on the southern shores on Corregidor for the first time today as others, who had landed inched forward against Japanese defenders ashore on the heaviest air blows thus far in support of ground action in the Southwest Pacific.

While American bombers steeping the China Sea shipping sank or damaged two warships and 16 freighters, airborne and infantry units penetrated to the south coast of Corregidor, where Maj.-Gen. Jonathan Wainwright and Gen. Albert Selvan and Chalagan at Malayan Peak.

They met only scattered resistance.

Malayan Bay, in Batangas Province, is on the Corregidor Verde Island passage between Luzon and American-held Mindoro Island. It is about 30 miles south of Manila.

A good road skirts most of the Bay shore.

In bitterly-contested Manchuria the Russians were at Manila, the heavy bombers, attack planes and carrier-based fighters of the command 900 tons of explosives on the skidding Japanese entrenchments which held U.S. forces there stalemated for weeks.

Nineteen Japanese bombers sank a corvette in Formosa Strait.

A destroyer escort was sunk southwest of Hong Kong.

Believe Churchill Right About 'One Good Heave To End War'

By E. FRASER WIGHTON
(Reuters Political Correspondent)

London, March 8 —(Reuters)— Prime Minister Churchill's weekend declaration that "one good strong heave all together will end the war in Europe," is described by authoritative circles as fully justified by the estimate in which the German General Staff now finds itself.

While Hitler remains in command during his tour of the 1st Canadian Army front, may know no more than that the next great co-ordinated offensive between the western democracies and Russia will be the last, reports now being received in London indicate that Hitler will be woefully lacking in effective reserves.

Mr. Churchill, during his weekend dash to the front for discussions with Gen. Eisenhower and Field Marshal Montgomery doubtless took cognizance of salient new factors in the enemy's position.

One is that the German High Command now has lost its last alternative of being able to switch troops from east to west and vice versa, even if transport conditions permitted such operations.

Key factors which justify the belief that the world now is witnessing the final crumbling of German military might are these:

1. A marked deterioration in the quality of the German soldiery in the eastern front, due largely to the with the Nazi parstroops an exception.

2. German surrender on a bigger scale than hitherto.

3. Enemy abandonment of materials, such as tanks, without attempting to destroy them.

While optimism on the immediate front may be justified by a note of caution on the unpredictable, treacherous element in the character of Germany's great Rhine barrier battle may begin.

Meanwhile official reports of the civil disintegration of Germany continue to substantiate the once widely held belief that the central government and administration of the Reich is now of the stateliest character.

At the same time, it is estimated that there is a Gestapo hard core of at least 1,000,000 which is satisfied by unremitting terror tactics to greet its will over the Germans.

SEVEN OIL PLANTS, FIVE SWITCHING YARDS ARE STRUCK

1,350 U.S. Airplanes Bitter Industries and Rails Serving Ruhr Battlefields

London, March 8 — (CP)—German rail and oil targets were struck another blow today as 1,350 American bombers, following up the RAF's 1,200-plane night assault, attacked seven oil plants and five switching yards handling traffic to the Ruhr battlefields.

The most sustained air campaign of the war carried through its 94th consecutive day.

The Germans' targets included the clogged yards at Mehlem, on the southern outskirts of Bonn along the upper Rhine; Siegen, Betzdorf, Dillenburg and Giessen. Six benzol plants and one synthetic refinery in the Gelsenkirchen - Dortmund region were the oil objectives.

Approximately 850 fighters provided escort for the bombers, their protection against the German air force seldom is needed any more.

Fifth Straight Day

The R.A.F., R.C.A.F. night attack was carried out by the largest force sent out by Bomber Command this year. The British planes blasted the Germans' eastern front base of Dessau, struck at vital oil refineries and gave Berlin its 16th consecutive night raid.

Those returning from the assault on Dessau — the main objective — reported that the largest area was "ablaze from end to end, with smoke rising to a height of 17,000 feet."

Dessau is 70 miles southwest of Berlin; is one of the largest industrial cities of central Germany and is located on several railroads feeding German lines on the Russian front barely 100 miles to the east. Canadian Strike Harbury

Hitler's targets of R.A.F. heavy bombers last night included oil refineries at Harburg, across the river from Hamburg, and Heide in Schleswig - Holstein, west of Kiel, which already has been hit by Canadian and Allied warplanes.

German fighters and flak were encountered as Heide but explosions were seen and the refinery left gushing forth columns of black smoke.

PO. Robert William, a Blaon squadron gunner from Toronto, reported that he first encountered flak over his craft's fuselage, shooting away a navigation instrument and one of the pilot's windshield, but the crew was unhurt and the bomb run was completed.

Last night's raid on Berlin was carried out in clear weather which again dropped two-ton block-busters over the city.

Dr. Miles G. Brown, medical superintendent of Hamilton General Hospital said eight persons were admitted to hospital suffering minor burns.

Florence Young, who said she jumped from a window when the explosion occurred, was believed to have fractured both legs and injured her back. Besides Miss Young, others removed to hospital were:

Archie Simpson, Richard Kearney, Mrs. Marion Reynolds, Miss Jean Cook, David Barber, Wesley Judd and Elwin Dasper, all of Hamilton.

The plant is located north of Barton Street, about one mile from the centre of the city, situated in the heart of Hamilton's oldest industrial area, it lies across the street from the city's works department yards where a disastrous explosion occurred several years ago.

Most of the plant is the Canadian National Railways sour line and to the south a residential area. It is not believed any domestic were suffered in the residential district.

So intense was the fire following the explosion that walls and roof collapsed within half an hour of the blast. All persons working in the east wing were able to leave the building.

Employees of the Hamilton cotton company west of the dye plant gave first aid to the injured before their removal to hospital.

A general alarm brought fire apparatus from all uptown stations.

Fred Somers, who was the two loading lumber at a yard about 50 feet from the dye plant, when the blasts occurred, told how the north east corner, of the building "burst into flame and bricks showered around me."

William Newton and Jack McDade, working with Somers, said they saw seven or eight men and women rush out of the building in a dazed condition, some cut and bleeding.

EIGHT PERSONS IN HOSPITAL AFTER EXPLOSION OF

Series of Blasts Set Aflame Industrial Plant in Heart of Hamilton

Hamilton, March 8 (CP) — Eight persons were removed to hospital today and two were believed trapped in the plant of the Canadian Aniline Dye Company when a series of explosions set aflame the building north of Barton Street, in the heart of the city's oldest industrial area.

The blasts occurred about 10.40 a.m., shattering windows in the city nearly, most of the damage, however, appeared to be confined to the plant. Police rushed ambulances to the scene to remove the injured to hospital.

Firemen are fighting a fierce fire and there are fears that further explosions may follow when the flames reach chemicals stored in the building.

Florence Young, who said she jumped from a window when the explosion occurred, was believed to have fractured both legs and injured her back. Besides Miss Young, others removed to hospital were:

ADVANCE UNITS INTO SUBURBS OF MANDALAY

British Division By-Passes Considerable Number of Japanese

Calcutta, March 8 (CP)—Advance elements of the British 19th Division plunged into the northern suburbs of Mandalay today, and official estimates at Allied headquarters left the impression that the fall of Burma's second city was imminent.

At last 14-mile dash southward from Mandalay, to Mandalay Indian troops of the British Division by-passed a considerable number of Japanese. These enemy groups appear dazed and bewildered and are scheduled for later elimination.

Elsewhere in Burma the main road east of Mandalay smashed two miles through Japanese defences and occupied New Lashio and its railway station, establishing Allied control of the entire Burma Road from Lashio to Kunming. The Chinese had captured old Lashio yesterday.

Plans Disorganized.

Enemy battle plans apparently have been disorganized by the British dash across the Irrawaddy River valley to the Kehlida area, an operation which has threatened the Japanese rear communications.

Unless the Japanese can bring in reinforcements immediately, it is believed here they may be routed from the Shwebo Plain, not distant future. Supplying troops and reinforcements is a major Japanese problem at their far-flung front. The south communications now are severed and tenuous alternate routes are under continual hammering by air.

The fall of Lashio came six weeks after the Ledo Road was opened from India to China. The town is the northern terminus of the railway to Rangoon.

The Japanese still control good roads from a few miles south of Lashio to Southern Burma, Thailand and Indo-China.

Division Consolidating Five-Mile Advance

Rome, March 8 (AP) — The U.S. 10th Mountain Division of the Allied 5th Army made "local improvements" yesterday despite stiffening resistance by a series of positions west of the Bologna-Pistoia highway on the 5th Army's Italian front, Allied headquarters announced today.

The division is consolidating a five-mile advance through rough terrain and heavy mud artillery, machine gun and mortar fire. Seventy-nine prisoners were taken. Patrols of Bologna were captured from the enemy, which yesterday described the fighting as "most successful limited objective attack."

CANUCKS LAUNCH 2 DAWN ATTACKS ON WESEL BULGE

Last Important Nazi Bridgehead on West Rhine Bank Between Cologne, Netherlands

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army in Germany, March 8 — (CP Cable)— Canadian infantry today launched two dawn attacks on the enemy bulge at Wesel — containing the last important German bridgehead on the western bank of the Rhine between Cologne and the Netherlands border.

Sliding armored troop-carriers, Kangaroos, one force attacked toward Xanten, seven miles west of Wesel, and the other moved south of the town. Xanten—centre of "Fish Alley" so nick-named because of the number of German anti-aircraft guns being used there against Allied troop-carrier planes — is heavily shelled by Gen. Crerar's artillery.

Three miles south of Xanten, Ontario Infantry again struck at Veen, registering progress.

30,000 Nazis in Bulge

Perhaps 30,000 Germans were fighting Canadians south of the town, although the reason for resistance was unclear since the entire northwestern front west of the Rhine has collapsed. Only yesterday they could not move the anti-aircraft guns, now being thrown against the 1st Canadian and Second British armored dumps over the river and decided to fight on while the ammunition lasted.

Not every attack Allied troops meet extremely heavy fire from defending guns because most German antiaircraft guns are being used in a ground role. In addition, the enemy is shelling the Allied lines from the east bank of the Rhine where the Germans have dug-in guns.

Clear Areas of Mines

British troops of the 1st Canadian Army yesterday closed around Alpen, on the Rhine road 6½ miles southwest of Wesel, but a spell of bitter Allied efforts to enter the town.

Meanwhile Canadian and British units were drawn in a semi-circle around Xanten but were under fire from scores of anti-aircraft guns around the perimeter and from high, flat-trajectory guns on the Rhine.

The assault on the bulge was slow going because of mines, booby traps and cratered. This terrain consists of rolling fields with odd stretches of woods. Much fresh barrier has country flattens out to the Rhine and to the Wesel-Xanten line.

Last Attack Helpful

Central Ontario infantry, supported by Sherman tanks, attacked the bulge in the area of Veen, halfway between Alpen and Xanten, yesterday morning and advanced back by heavy shellfire. Another attack was launched this time in the afternoon by western and northern Ontario troops which was gaining ground at last reports.

(No western tanks have so far been identified by the enemy in formative but central Ontario units reported have been the Queen's own Rifles of Canada, Toronto, and the North and Southern Highlanders, Hamilton.

Cologne's Fate Suggests Hitler Commits Germany to Mass Suicide

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Cologne, March 8 — (AP)—After taking inventory of what remains of Cologne and other lesser German cities captured by the Allies, the conclusion is inescapable that Hitler has committed Germany to national suicide.

Nothing downtown section is a sorry sight.

Only ruined structures of the Reichsbank, Dresdener Bank, Disconto Gesellschaft and other financial institutions are pock-marked shells.

The main post office directly opposite these banks is in far worse condition than the post office in ruined Aachen. The telephone exchange is a wreck.

I stumbled over the bodies of dead Germans as I picked my way tact through debris along almost unbearable streets. On the second floor of the city hall the scene of the complete breakdown of transportation is graphic.

Various burghers living on the fringe of the city of Cologne, for instance, were convinced that three celebrated clocks in the shadow of the ancient cathedral were unfavorable—the Excelior, the Bingo Lampe and the Dom Hond.

They are heaps of rubble.

The cathedral itself is still standing, but it suffered some damage. The roof of the north tower and the north and south portals of the impressing west facade, though the original portal itself is practically intact.

Crossing Made South of Cologne, Gain Firm Footing

Half of Bonn, Bad Godesberg Captured by Other Units

By JAMES M. LONG
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, March 8. (AP) — The United States 1st Army crossed the Rhine south of Cologne last night and obtained a firm footing today on the east bank of the great German barrier stream.

Lt.-Gen. Courtney H. Hodges poured more and more infantry and men across the river after his sudden and sensational crossing in the face of heavy fire which left the bridgehead over the quarter-mile-wide stream was shrouded by a military censorship because the Germans obviously did not know the exact situation.

Ready Stream Over.

The crossing started at 4.30 p.m. yesterday. In the hours since then, a steady stream of men and materiel has been pouring onto the eastern bank and moving forward in a drive to get the bridgehead out of range of enemy artillery.

Cologne is in about the same latitude as Newfoundland, and the days at this season are extremely short.)

During the first 24 hours, there was little artillery or mortar fire on the beachhead, indicating the enemy was in utter confusion when the first bridge across the river from the ashes of Cologne before Hodges' hard-driving, disciplined.

First Army infantrymen spanned the quarter-mile-wide river against rather light opposition before the startled Germans could grasp what was happening, Supreme Commander Wes Gallagher said.

The official announcement was passed by censors at 8:56 o'clock last night after 24 hours of security blackout—used while events of great importance are shaping up. Fast of Bonn Captured.

Other units of the 1st Army captured half of the German University City of Bonn (101,000) and half of Bad Godesberg, Dusseldorf, Hitler air years ago bumbled the late Neville Chamberlain before Munich.

The Germans said the 1st Army was within 17 miles of forming with the 3rd Army which crossed the Rhine on perhaps 50,000 Germans caught west of the Middle Rhine.

Gen. Courtney H. Hodges seized the opportunity of establishment of the bridgehead after troops were found disorganized after the Germans had fled from the Cologne Plain.

Half of the Rhine crossing swept through the army from division so division and down through the line, Correspondents Don White and Jack Foisie said.

It brought grins to their whiskers and cheers and cheered everyone in the army.

Must Hold Bridgehead.

Now that the last bridgehead, it means the war is months nearer to an end. The Germans at the Davenport, Iowa, told Whitehead.

The sentiment was echoed by many officers and soldiers who had looked on the river as the greatest obstacle to be met by the army since it landed on the sands of Normandy last June 6.

Gen. Eisenhower had six other armies standing on the west bank of the Rhine and its grey-green waters.

The crossing of the Rhine—one of the greatest achievements of the entire war—came just two days after the capture of the great Rhineland capital of Cologne, which was cleared completely today.

The German communique said the 1st Army had reached Remagen, only 17 miles from IL.-Gen. George S. Patton's Wrath on the Rhine. Five to six German divisions back in the Rhine might be trapped by a joining of the 1st and 3rd Armies.

Forward positions of the covering Rhine bridge could be disclosed through a security blackout, but every indication at Supreme Headquarters was that a great victory was shaping up.

The 9th Armored Division of the 1st Army was declared many hours ago to be more than 10 miles southwest of Bonn and "well under 25 miles" from the 3rd Army's 4th Armored Division.

The amazing dash of IL.-Gen. George S. Patton's 3rd Army ranks to the Coblenz area and the Rhine confirmed the Nazi industrial district from the north, snapping many of its communications and routes for war material. The Seventh Army in the south was two miles inside the Reich.

Cologne finally was cleared completely of infantry mopup up of the Rhine at places between that city and Bonn, 20 miles south. Troops besieging Bonn were reported across the Rhine bank road leading south to Coblenz.

Thousands of defected prisoners were streaming back westward from the 2,500-square-mile pocket in which three-to-six divisions were in danger of being ordered between the 1st and 3rd Armies.

Half of the great steel west-Rhine pocket in the Ruhl Mountains, Germany's war making, swiftly as the United States 1st and 3rd Armies closed at least 18 miles apart on the north, west and south.

Only an hour close the 3rd Army was to Coblenz, a major traffic centre was not specified. Both the 1st and 3rd Armies were pushing the Supreme Headquarters in news dispatches said to belong to more than five or six German divisions pocketed in the Ruhr.

(A Blue network broadcast said the 1st Army was 1½ miles from Bonn and 17 miles from Remagen, here where the late Neville Chamberlain met Hitler just before the Munich Conference seeking "peace in our time." Bad Godesberg also was said to have collapsed, with Americans racing through town after the capture of Dusseldorf.

Cross Are River

The Germans said the 1st Army had crossed the Ahr River, last natural barrier between them and the 3rd Army, and that 3rd Army troops were advancing through Kleis in the Rhine-Moselle triangle.

Meantime 1st Canadian Army forces had launched a double attack at dawn against the enemy bulge at Wesel. The 25-square-mile pocket, there in which more than 20,000 Germans still were reported, was considered one of the important bridgehead west of the Rhine between Cologne and the Netherlands border.

Outflank Kuestrin And Reach Seelow East of Capital

Great Battle Rages Along 125-Mile Front on Oder

London, March 8 (CP) — The Russians have driven to within 25 miles of Berlin's city limits, outflanking the fortress of Kuestrin and reaching Seelow on the west side of the Oder, a Tranocean broadcast from the German capital said today.

Seelow is directly east of Berlin and is 12 miles west of the Oder. It is on the main railway skirting the Oder which connects Stettin and Frankfurt.

Marshal Gregory Zhukov's massive new offensive, timed after the Allied drive to the Rhine, 321 miles to the west, also has reached a point 28 miles from Berlin northwest of Kustrin, Berlin reported.

Tranocean said Seelow was reached from the Russian bridgehead at Goerlitzen between Kienitzin and Frankfurt, and said tactic dispatches establishing place in the area, with many places changing hands.

Great Artillery Barrage.

Fighting was reported flaming along the entire front along the Oder from Stettin 'Bay to Grosen' following a terrific artillery barrage that began 48 hours ago. The enemy said the "greatest battle of the struggle" is on both sides of Kuestrin, 50 miles east of Berlin, with the Russians battering from the northwestern, eastern and southern sides of the fortress.

To the northeast the Germans said, the Russians have bypassed the old Danzig free state and smashed to within 18 miles of Danzig.

Eighty miles east of Danzig near the Baltic coast, the Germans admitted the railway centre of Schlawe, a town of 26,000 population, had fallen to the Russians. Schlawe is 22 miles northeast of Cublinen.

Moscow had not officially confirmed the German announcement but correspondents in the Soviet capital were permitted to hint that the German dispatches were true.

Zhukov, who drove to the Oder in the first phase, had been preparing his forces for the grand assault for more than a month while Marshal Ivan Koney on the south pushed forward to the Neisse River and other forces farther north threatened to flank up to the Baltic and the lower Oder.

Attack Threatens Stettin

The latter wing also was developing a front which threatened to place Stettin, Berlin's chief port and birthplace of Russia's Catherine the Great, under attack from the south, east and north.

The Germans said the Russians were only 25 miles from the port of Stettin.

Further north, they had pushed even closer. Already Pasilitz, six miles north of Stettin on the main railway leading to the city with Pomeranian Bay, was under fire from Russian guns.

Berlin reported that the Russians had also invaded Wollin, first of the stepping stone islands separating the bay from the Baltic Sea.

Scores of landing barges were being fought eastward along the Baltic where up to 200,000 Germans have been sneaked in Pomerania, Danzig and the old Polish Corridor, and Berlin said there was a "terrific bloodletting" in these fights.

Moscow disclosed also the fre-nants of half a dozen German divisions were being wiped out around Kolberg on the Baltic. Berlin said the Russians had broken into the city.

Moscow had no news of Koney's front along the Neisse and inside Breslau in Silesia, but the German communique declared a strong local counter-attack resulted in recapture of Lauban, on the Queis River 67 miles east of Dresden.

Berlin said the Kuestrin-Frankfurt front before Berlin was under the command of Lt.-Gen. Reinhefahrt, an S.S. leader who is accused by the Russians of war crimes in Poland.

Under him, Maj.-Gen. Remer, who the Germans said frustrated a plot to seize Berlin during the plot against Hitler last July, commands the Kuestrin garrison, the Germans announced.

Makes Us Laugh

London, March 8 (Reuters) — British air circles were today both amused and angry at suggestions made in the United States that the British fleet was too slow and deficient in carrier planes for the type of warfare planned against Japan.

"It makes us laugh," one naval authority said.

"Before the last war the destroyer Viper, one of the fastest vessels in the world to be driven by Parsons turbines, attained a speed of 30 knots. It was nearly 30 years ago, yet it is now said that the latest types of British warships and carriers operating in the Pacific are only capable of half that speed."

Two Warships, 16 Freighters Sunk or Damaged

Manila, March 8 (AP) — United States troops were on the southern shores on Luzon for the first time today as Gipers, east of Manila, inched forward against Japanese positions entrenched on the beaches as bi-bows three far in support of ground action in the Southwest Pacific.

While American fighters swooping from China Sea shipping sank or damaged two warships and 16 freighters, artillery and infantry units penetrated to the south coast of Bataan, where the Japs captured Bagan and Calatagan at Balayan Bay.

They met only scattered resistance.

Balayan Bay, in Batangas Province, is on the important Verde Island passage between Luzon and American-held Mindoro Island. It is about 30 miles south of Manila. A good road skirts most of the Bay shore.

In bitterly-contested Marikina watershed area east of Manila, heavy bombers, attack planes and dive-bombers dropped more than 900 tons of bombs on the Japs' operate Japanese entrenchments while the U.S. forces virtually stalemated for weeks.

Liberators in the area sank southwest of Hong Kong.

Believe Churchill Right About 'One Good Heave To End War'

By E. FRASER WIGHTON
(Reuters Political Correspondent)

London, March 8 —(Reuters)— Prime Minister Churchill's weekend declaration that victory will bring peace 'all together will end the war in Europe," is described by authoritative circles as fully justified by the extremity in which the German General Staff now finds itself.

This latest remark, made Sunday during his tour of the 1st Canadian Army front, may mean no more than that the only great co-ordinated offensive between the western and eastern fronts will be the last, reports now being received from Germany show. It will not be woefully lacking in effective reserves.

Mr. Churchill, during his weekend dash to the front for discussions with Gen. Eisenhower and Field Marshal Montgomery doubtless took cognizance of salient new factors in the enemy's position.

One is that the German High Command now has lost its last alternative of being able to switch troops from east to west and vice versa, even if transport conditions permitted such operations.

Key factors which justify the belief that the world now is witnessing the final crumbling of German military might include:

SEVEN OIL PLANTS, FIVE SWITCHING YARDS ARE STRUCK

1,350 U.S. Airplanes Bitter Industries and Rails Serving Ruhr Battlefields

London, March 8 — (CP)—German rail and oil targets were struck another blow today as 1,350 American bombers, following up the RAF's 1,000-plane night assault, attacked seven oil plants and five switching yards handling traffic to the Ruhr battlefields.

The most sustained air campaign of the war carried through its 24th consecutive day.

The bombers' targets included the clogged yards at Essen, almost in the shadow of the guns along the upper Rhine: Siegen, Betzdorf, Dillenburg and Giessen, Six bound yards and one synthetic refinery in the Gelsenkirchen - Dortmund regions were the oil objectives.

Approximately 350 fighters provided cover for the bombers, close protection against the German air force seldom is needed any more.

15th Raid on Berlin

The R.A.F.—R.C.A.F. night attack was carried out by the largest force sent out by Bomber Command this year. The British planes blasted the German capital's eastern front base of Deau, struck at vital oil refineries and railway yards in the 1945 season's night raid.

Pilots returning from the assault on Deaau — the main objective — reported the whole target area was ablaze with fires, some of which were rising to a height of 17,000 feet.

Deaau, on the eastern outskirts of Berlin, is one of the largest industrial cities of central Germany and is located on several railways feeding German lines on the Russian front, being 100 miles to the east.

Canadians Strike Harburg

Other targets of R.A.F. heavy bombers last night included oil refineries at Harburg, across the river from Hamburg's docks, and Scholzwig — Holstein, west of Kiel, Canadians struck at the Harburg plant.

German fighters and flak were encountered at Harburg, explosions were seen and the refinery left gushing fiery columns of black smoke.

Sgt. Robert Wilson, a Essex soldier gunner from Toronto, reported that Harburg "looked like a sea of white craft's flashes, shooting away at navigation lights and some of the pilot's windshield, but the crew was uninjured and the bomb run was successful."

Last night's raid on Berlin was the fourth the U.S. force virtually stalemated for weeks.

Liberators in the area sank southwest of Hong Kong.

EIGHT PERSONS IN HOSPITAL AFTER EXPLOSION

Series of Blasts Set Aflame Industrial Plant in Heart of Hamilton

Hamilton, March 8 (CP) — Eight persons were removed to hospital today and two were believed trapped in the plant of the Canadian Kelline Dye Company when a series of explosions set aflame the building north of Barton Street, in the heart of the city's oldest industrial area.

The blasts occurred about 10.40 a.m., shattering windows in the city hall nearby. Most of the damage, however, appeared to be confined to the plant. Police rushed reinforcements to the scene to remove the injured to hospital.

Firemen are fighting a fierce fire and there are fears that further explosions may follow when the flames reach chemicals stored in the building.

Mrs. Miles O. Brown, medical superintendent of Hamilton General Hospital, said eight persons were admitted to hospital suffering minor burns.

Florence Young, who said she jumped from a window when the explosion occurred, was believed to have fractured both legs and injured her back. Besides Miss Young, others removed to hospital were:

Archie Simpson, Richard Kenney, Mrs. Marion Reynolds, Miss Jean Cook, David Barker, William Judd and Edwin Dasper, all of Hamilton.

The plant is located north of Barton Street, about one mile from the centre of the city. Situated in the heart of Hamilton's oldest industrial area, it lies across the street from the city's works department yards where a disastrous explosion occurred several years ago.

East of the plant is the Canadian National Railways spur line and to the south, a residential area. It is not believed any damages were suffered in the residential district.

So intense was the fire following the explosion that the walls and roof collapsed within half an hour of the blast. All persons working in the east wing were able to leave the building.

A general alarm brought fire apparatus from all uptown stations.

Fred Somers, who said he was working next door at a yard about 50 feet from the dye plant when the blasts occurred, told how the north-east corner of the building "burst into flames and bricks showered around me."

William Newton and Jack McDaid, working with Somers, said they saw seven or eight men and women rush out of the building in a dazed condition, some cut and bleeding.

ADVANCE UNITS INTO SUBURBS OF MANDALAY

British Division By-Passes Considerable Number of Japanese

Calcutta, March 8 (CP)—Advance elements of the British 19th Division plunged into the northern suburbs of Mandalay today, and official estimates at Allied headquarters left the impression that the capital of Burma's second city was imminent.

In their 16-mile dash southward from Mandalya to Mandalay Indian troops of the British Division by-passed a considerable number of Japanese. These enemy groups appear dazed and bewildered and are scheduled for later elimination.

Between 120 miles north-east of Mandalay smashed two miles through Japanese defences and occupied New Lashio and its railway station, establishing Allied control of the entire Burma Road from Lashio to Kunming. The Chinese had captured old Lashio yesterday.

Plans Disorganized.

Enemy battel plans apparently have been disorganized by the British dash across the Irrawaddy River Valley to the Kehlin area, an operation which has threatened the Japanese rear communications.

Unless the Japanese can bring in reinforcements immediately, it is believed here they may be ousted from Burma in the not distant future. Shipping troops and reinforcements is a major Japanese problem and their key north-south communications now are severed and tenuous alternate routes are under continual hammering by air.

The fall of Lashio came six weeks after the Ledo Road was opened from India to China. The town is the northern terminus of the railway to Rangoon.

The Japanese still control good roads from a few miles south of Lashio to Southern Burma, Thailand and Indo-China.

Division Consolidating Five-Mile Advance

Rome, March 8 (AP) — The U.S. 10th Mountain Division of the Allied 5th Army made "local improvements" yesterday despite intensified fire on the newly-won positions west of the Bologna-Pistoia highway on the 5th, front, Italian front, Allied headquarters announced today.

The division is consolidating a five-mile advance through rough terrain and heavy Nazi artillery, machine gun and mortar fire. Several dominating "peaks" overlooking miles of Bologna were captured in the offensive launched yesterday terday termed "a successful limited objective attack."

CANUCKS LAUNCH 2 DAWN ATTACKS ON WESEL BULGE

Last Important Nazi Bridgehead on West Rhine Bank Between Cologne, Netherlands

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army in Germany, March 8 — (CP Cable)— Canadian infantry today launched two dawn attacks on the enemy bulge at Wesel — containing the last important German bridgehead on the western bank of the Rhine between Cologne and the Netherlands border.

Riding armored troop-carriers — Kangaroos — one force attacked toward Xanten, seven miles west of Wesel, and high wooded ground south of the town. Xanten — scene of "Pint Alley" so nick-named because of the number of 6-inch anti-aircraft guns being used there against Allied planes, has been heavily shelled by Gen. Crerar's artillery.

Three miles south of Xanten, Ontario infantry again struck at Nazi defences surrounding the village of Marienbaum.

20,000 Nazis in Bulge.

Perhaps 20,000 Germans were fighting fanatically in the bulge, although the reason for resistance was unclear since the entire northwestern front west of the Rhine has collapsed. But possibly they could not leave the area, although now being filtered against the 1st Canadian Army and ammunition dumps over the river are decided to fight on while the ammunition lasted.

In every attack Allied troops meet stiffening resistance as they near guns because most German ammunition dumps have been used in a ground role. In addition, the enemy is shelling the Allied lines from the east bank of the Rhine where the Germans have gun-in guns.

Guns Around Alps

British troops of the 1st Canadian Army yesterday closed around Alpen, Veen and Issum, road 8½ miles southwest of Wesel, but a spell after bloody efforts to enter the town.

Meanwhile Canadian and British units were drawn in a semi-circle around Xanten but were under fire from scores of anti-aircraft guns around the perimeter and from high, wooded ground south of the town.

The attack on the bulge was slow because every road has been blown and every bridge is under heavy fire of rolling fields with odd stretches of woods, and the Nazis barrier tactics flattens out to the Rhine where it is almost across the river.

Last Attack Helpful

Central Ontario infantry, supported by heavy tanks, attacked the bulge in the area of Veen, halfway between Alpen and Xanten, Hamilton Highlanders of Canada back by heavy shellfire. Another Ontario force launched late in the afternoon by western and northern Ontario infantry which was gaining ground at last reports.

(No western tanks have so far been reported by the enemy in defensive but central Ontario units crossed the Lasso Creek with Royal Rifles of Canada, Toronto, and the Argyll and Southern Highlanders, Hamilton.

Cologne's Fate Suggests Hitler Commits Germany to Mass Suicide

By LOUIS F. LOCHNER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Cologne, March 8 — (AP) — After taking inventory of what remains of Cologne and other lesser German cities overrun by the Allies, the conclusion is inescapable that Hitler has committed Germany to national suicide.

Everything downtown section is a sorry sight.

The proud structures of the Reichsbank, Dresdener Bank, Deutsche Gesellschaft and other financial institutions are "burned-out" shells.

The main post office directly opposite these banks is in far worse shape than the city hall, now in ruined Aachen. The telephone exchange is a wreck.

I stumbled over the bodies of dead Germans as I picked my way through debris along almost unlighted streets. Many bodies were near gutted St. Gereon's Church.

Not even the residents in the western part of Cologne are aware of the full extent of the damage in the old part of the city because of the complete breakdown of transportation facilities.

Various buryhers living on the northwestern fringe of Cologne, for example, were unaware that three celebrated hotels in the shadow of the ancient cathedral were still livable—the Excelsior, the Savoie Lampe and the Dom Hotel.

They are heaps of rubble.

The cathedral itself is still standing, but it suffered some damage. There are big holes next to the north and south towers and the imposing west facade, though the main portal itself is practically intact.

Crossing Made South of Cologne, Gain Firm Footing

Half of Bonn, Bad Godesberg Captured by Other Units

waters.

The crossing of the Rhine is one of the greatest achievements of the entire war—came just two days after the capture of the great Rhineland capital of Cologne, which was cleared completely today.

The German communique said the 1st Army had reached Neuss, only 11 miles from Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton's Watch on the Rhine. Five to six German divisions back in the Rhine might be trapped by a joining of the 1st and 3rd Armies.

Forward positions of the covering armies could not be checked through a security blackout, but every indication at Supreme Headquarters was that a great victory was shaping up.

The 9th Armored Division of the 1st Army was declared many hours ago to be more than 10 miles southwest of Bonn and well under 25 miles from the 3rd Army's 4th Armored Division.

The amazing dash of Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton's 3rd Army tanks to the Coblenz area and the Rhine outflanked the Saar industrial district from the north, snapping many of its communications and routes for war supplies. The 3rd Army on the south was two miles inside Germany.

Cologne finally was cleared completely behind retreating troops of the Rhine at places between that devastated city and Bonn. Troops of Maj.-Gen. Hoge's command reached the Rhine bank road leading south of Cologne.

Thousands of dejected prisoners were streaming back westward from the 2,500-square-mile pocket in which five to six divisions were in danger of being caught between the 1st and 3rd Armies.

All through the great 'net' west-Rhine pocket in the Rhel Mountains, German resistance was disintegrating swiftly as the United States 1st and 3rd Armies loosed at least 18 divisions for the kill of encircled against the foe.

A bridge across the Rhine at Remagen, 17 miles southeast of Bonn, the United States 1st and 9th Armies were pushing Godesberg where the late Neville Chamberlain met Hitler during the pre-Munich Conference seeking "peace in our time." German resistance was said to have collapsed, with Americans racing through town after town in the Rhineland.

(A Blue network broadcast said the 1st Army was 11½ miles from Cologne and that Gen. Dodez's men were the late Neville Chamberlain met Hitler during the pre-Munich Conference seeking "peace in our time." German resistance was said to have collapsed, with Americans racing through town after town in the Rhineland.

Meantime the Canadian Army front has launched a double attack at dawn against the enemy bulge at Wesel. The 40-square-mile pocket — the German rearguard of some 20,000 Germans still were reported trapped between the two important bridgehead west of the Rhine between Cologne and the Neiperberg border.

Private Ernest A. (Bert) Knox, only son of Mr. Wilbert E. Knox, 52 Ann Street, has been injured during active action in Belgium, his father was informed by official communication yesterday. Mrs. Knox died two years ago.

The twenty-year-old soldier, formerly in Canadian Pacific employ with the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation, is suffering from concussion, but his condition is not regarded by after medical authorities as serious. He made application to enlist at Kingston in March, 1940, and after lengthy training in various Canadian military centres, went overseas in October, 1940. He joined the Belleville Rifles Unit in Belgium four months ago.

Born in Belleville, Private Knox is a former student of Queen Mary and Queen Victoria schools. Other than his father he has no immediate relatives.

REPORT OF SAPPHIRE DISCOVERY IN COUNTY AROUSES INTEREST

Report from Toronto that "an important discovery of sapphires" had been made in the northern part of Hastings near Bancroft aroused considerable interest among local officials here today. Previous to the report no indication that any discovery of such nature had been made or found by residents of the county. Neither County Clerk Eric Denyes nor the hospital through the Chamber of Commerce, were aware of the finding of sapphires.

Report of the discovery was made by Thayer Lindsley, director and president of several mining firms, so he spoke to the annual banquet of the Prospectors and Developers Association. Further details of the discovery would be awaited with interest he said.

CAPTAIN A. E. MAY PROGRESSES FAVORABLY FROM WOUND IN LEG

After suffering a leg wound in December during the German bombing raids in Allied France, Captain Arthur E. May, Jr., of the United States Army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur May, Georgs Street, is progressing favorably in an English hospital, according to a letter word received by his wife here.

Born in the United States, Capt. May came to Belleville with his parents 18 years ago when his father was transferred to this city as draftsman with the Stephens-Adamson Company. He enlisted in the Canadian army four years ago but transferred to the U.S. army eighteen months ago and was stationed in Iceland for some time before going to the European war theatre last August. He was with the U.S. 8th army when wounded.

His wife is the former Winnifred Mary Redfern and lives at 275 Ann Street.

PTE. MAX HARROW REPORTED MISSING

His parents received official word yesterday to this effect.

The young soldier, who recently celebrated his eighteenth birthday, enlisted a little over a year ago, and after training in Canada was sent overseas. Four months ago he went to Belgium where he was wounded, and invalided to hospital in England.

He was born in this city and received his public school education here. Prior to enlistment he was employed with the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation. His father who is also an employee of this concern is at present a patient in St. Joseph's Hospital, Toronto.

Rabbit Rarity Eats, Sleeps, Plays With Family Pet Dog; Shows Remarkable Intelligence

"Queenie" was a bedraggled looking little creature as she crouched beneath the skirts of an old orange crate that contained faces of her rescuers.

The rescue occurred last August on Highway No. 2, when passing motorists spied Queenie's species, for she has developed a tail, something that equals her near-human fellow creatures in the handsome Spitz dog, which has been the pride of the Black family for four years.

Play Together.

Queenie and Snowball became fast friends almost immediately. Snowball, a white rabbit, were not predominant in the Spitz family, but became attached to his white-furred playmate. They would romp and play and fight, good-naturedly of course, together. Their mutual affection has proved a source of amusement to the Blacks but to the neighborhood as well.

Queenie is a fastidious little female—a lady, if you please. She nibbles at her favorite greens at the dinner table with the family. She sniffs at cookies like a debutante at her first cocktail, then settles down to eat them. She will turn a piece of chocolate with a while face then nibble at it with a look of contentment in her intelligent eyes. Snowball, however, she nudges Snowball who politely turns over and they lunch together.

Pets, pets, the people, must have exercise. At first the Spitz dog, ageing at the strange sight of the two animals at play, "Snowball's" long white pelt would lift in a sweeping right or left. Queenie, however, would roll across the floor, always keeping her feet for more effective sweep. Sweep "em!

But the rabbit's long hind legs realized that no gal would stand being batted around like a baseball so, using that part of his anatomy as a weapon, she worked the sweeping paw and neatly and deftly tripped him on the floor with her sharp teeth. The Spitz cried enough, and went over to his bed and lay down. His comfort was past, a bit sorry perhaps, immediately went to him stretched her length on the dog's paws outstretched and under his nose, and he promptly went to sleep. This, since, is a daily occurrence.

The only long-eared alarm clock in captivity, Queenie's morning exercises consist of digging up the garden, pushing open bedroom doors, and dashing to the bed, and wakening their sleeping occupants in the glinting expectation of breakfast. She repeats this performance until the children are up. Incidentally the Black children are never late for school.

Has No Boy Friends.

Then she comes downstairs, charges in the kitchen, shouts for "Snowball" and curls up with him on the floor, where they breakfast nap.

Queenie has no boy friends, the family sees to that. The old dog has put in an appearance, but the slighting curling of Queenie's lip and the buck for the more comforting shoulder has been noted.

Near disaster fell upon the Black children's pets when a hungry cat was reported missing, and tearful young faces and sorrowful countenances evidenced the loss of the rabbit. But, it eventually was revealed, she had inadvertently been locked in the cellar, and all was well.

Oh, yes, Queenie is for the war, by the way, is a handsome young white rabbit.

Moving Day, Formerly a Routine Now One of Many Complications

Days ago, remember when the days of peace fluttered over this country, when eggs were cheap, butter, sugar and beer be needed and the only problem known was those handed down to the kids? Days of peace when the time to get home nights, at that time of the year, people started to worry about moving day which in May 1st was a long way off.

In fact moving day came, the grapevine started to hum with questions and answers, agents and real estate agents were confined to offices getting eighteen hour telephone shifts.

Moving was a simple thing in those days. First one got his house or apartment, and could afford to move, children were overlooked by live wire realtors. All that was necessary before the moving van backed up to the door was to notify two or three people, change creditors, of the new address and life resumed normality.

But since the Austrian paperhanger started to run his head to place the world in a war bed and shake it well before using, certain obligations have loomed morning day near the top of the Headline with its monthly bills, the Plenty Are Interested.

So if you are one of those people with a "Don't Fence Me In" complex and wants a flat, apartment or house or one of those unfortunates whose landlord has decided that he likes your cabin better than his seven-roomer, and you are lucky enough to get four-walls and a ceiling, then brother, better take a day off and start looking out for who and what are interested in your change of address.

Believe it or not, depending on what you want and what your position is in life, there are between 25 and 35 organizations that are vitally interested in where you get your mail.

In the old days you could wait until the last load left for the new dwelling, then calmly go to the phone and notify the few interested in the change of scenery.

If you are a "last-minute Mike" you are due for disappointments.

General Patton Twice Swam River To Inspire Troops

Baltimore, March 8 — (AP)—How Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton twice swam the 150-foot Sure River in Germany in January under heavy machine-gun and artillery fire, inspiring "Doughboys to follow him," was told yesterday by one of the men who did.

Staff Sgt. Thomas J. Delbaugh of Cumberland, Md., one of the soldiers telling the story, described across the Sure, said "there was about a foot of snow on the ground when we got to the Sure River somewhere near the meeting place of the Luxemburg, German and Belgian borders."

"We learned that we had to take the town of Betlendorf on the opposite side and it is quite a city," Derbaugh, a member of the 4th Infantry Division which helped relieve the pressure on Americans trapped at Bastogne by a German counter-offensive last December. He now is touring war plants in the Baltimore area.

"The Germans began firing machine-guns and artillery at us as we came up to the river bank," the River Very Sent.

"Just before dawn we started going across in three-man boats. The river was very swift and cold and we had pieces of ice floating in it.

"After a while enough Gen. Patton called the boats back and ordered the men to swim across with ropes, handcuffs and blankets. They could carry because they were fighting pleasure for the Germans in the boats, sitting two or three feet out of the water.

"He figured the men would have better chance swimming since they would then present only their tops of their heads as targets to the enemy gunners.

"To show us it could be done and to inspire the troops, Gen. Patton jumped into the water and swam across to the opposite bank, then swam back. Thousands of troops followed him."

Shots Are Fired At Carabinieri Guarding Clinic

Rome, March 8 (AP) — Shots were fired in the night at Carabinieri guarding the villa of Count Count Francesco Jacomoni to call on war crimes charges, in another of the series of demonstrations of hatred launched by Premier Ivanoe Bonomi.

No arrests were made to burst into the hospital.

The escape Sunday of Gen. Mario Roatta on trial for war crimes and a protest riot before the royal villa were overlooked incidents of the week.

The Italian electorate its confidence in Bonomi late yesterday. Opposition parties protested anew against the position of control of the government.

The cabinet sitting in extraordinary session, affirmed confidence in the premier by a vote of 19 to 1 and pledged a swift Fascist purge.

An announcement said the four-party coalition government had agreed on a "charter for breaking up the coalition which first planned the Fascist regime and is responsible for intensifying the war and bringing Italy's position in the world."

Bancroft —(Special)— Add entries in the Harbinger of Spring list:

Away up north in the village of Bancroft where Old Man Winter still reigns supreme, but gradually his grip of spring is beginning to throw out its feelers.

Those in the southern part of the county have also their likely robins and caterpillars, but those in the north are content with a real surprise last Sunday when they saw a butterfly flitting around in the interior of the church.

Incidentally, another resident of Bancroft likewise states he saw two ducks leisurely flying in a northern direction.

Whitefish Nets Set in South Bay

Point Traverse, March 8 — Although the fishing season here is not clear of ice, commercial fishermen have got underway there on Saturday, when Clayton Hubbs set a net in South Bay, which is one of the earliest openings in several years.

High off shore winds have carried the ice out of South Bay and between the Duck islands into the foot of the lake, permitting fishermen to set their nets in open water of this point.

First Robin.

Mrs. Norman Farrington of this vicinity, reports the appearance of a robin here on Monday. Can this be a harbinger of spring? Catkins and spiders have also made their appearance, a resident stated. A local farmer killed a snake on Tuesday.

Ice Harvesting Ice.

Ice harvesting is being commenced at Milford this week.

Ice dealers at Picton report that they are unable to get on the ice in the bay, and to date no ice has been harvested there. One Picton fish dealer is contemplating hauling ice from East Lake, several miles away.

Five-Legged Lamb.

A freak lamb arriving at a local farm here had five legs instead of four, usual four members. Two legs were attached to its left front shoulder.

PICTON

Rotary Hears Talk On Public Utilities

Picton, March 6—Public Utilities was the subject of an interesting talk by O. H. Scott, superintendent of Belleville Public Utilities at the Rotary Club here. The speaker was introduced by Commissioner Morley Durf.

Mr. Scott in speaking of the agitation for uniform hydro rates for the province said he believed this could not be done without taking authority away from local Utilities Commissions and centralizing complete authority in the Provincial Commission.

Consideration must be given to treatment of sewage in sewage disposal plants, Mr. Scott said. Only by this method of handling is it possible to give domestic users of water the quality which they will consider desirable. He referred to water as the most important of the utilities, since it is a product depended upon in daily life, as well as for fire protection.

Mr. Scott said that in Belleville, school children are given instruction regarding metres and checking bills for use of electricity.

Mayor N. McKibbon thanked the speaker. L. B. Calnan welcomed guests, Hugh McDonald told of plans for an Easter ball. Treasurer J. Attard gave a financial report. President S. N. Sinton presided.

Guy Ampoker of Macon, Ga., led a patrol across the Adolf Hitler bridge at Oerdingen, Germany, and brought back men back safely to the first Americans to cross the German waterway. All members of the patrol received the Silver Star for the exploit.

This Milder Weather

Spring, "the sweet spring of the poets" and of all other persons, is due in less than two weeks, to be exact, on the evening of Tuesday, March 20th, at 7.38 p.m. (official war time.) But though it is yet so far away, the northern world has been delighting recently in springtime weather as was heralded when March entered quietly just one week ago. Prophets of the seasons, many of them, held out generally a cold winter for 1944-45 and severity is the only word for the temperatures and the storms which marked the period from early December to the early part of February. Snowfalls not often equalled in depth clothed the cities and countryside deep in silence for days at a time and numerous tie-ups of transportation on the highways and roads in some parts of the country are recalled.

But these untoward events have been partly atoned for by the unusually mild weather and the landlike contour of the spring month. According to popular reading of nature, the bear could see his shadow on the day over a month ago when he is said to have emerged from his cave to view the landscape and so retired for six weeks more of winter or a second winter, since he saw his shadow. But though following, there seemed to substantiate the truth of the adage, long before the six weeks had passed the weather became mild.

Many had expected a severer winter than in 1943-44 and this was natural because the former was unusually mild. Few could have foretold or did foretell the present spell of mildness. At least no one openly forecast the disappearance of the snow. Perhaps people were but welcoming the warmer weather, the lovely days and all the signs of melting without thinking of making prophecy out of their views and hopes. Now they will hope that the month will indicate an early spring without any relapse into such conditions of storms and weather disturbances as sometimes mark the close of March.

Those who look on the brighter side have some real welcome evidence. Whether any robins have been seen earlier, the fact stands that a robin was in Belleville yesterday on the west side. Its song was heard singing and the hearer did not have long to search the limbs of the trees and housetops with his searching glance before he saw the bird from which had come the welcome voice.

There have been other inspiring evidences for some time, now greatly multiplying, as the tender shoots of plants, resting in the ground south and west of walls from which the reflected rays of the sun beat down into the earth and send the blades upward to the light.

This mild spell has conferred a great benefit on consumers of coal, easing the tension of severe weather on the limited coal supplies available and the hard-worked delivery systems.

Spring's approach on occasions brings its sense of uneasiness and early in the year there was concern here over the possibilities of a flood. There was enough it seemed, to do considerable harm if the weather conditions conspired against a mild spring break-up. But the elements have since been uniformly favorable, the snowfalls declined in volume, gradually adding to the burden on the land and warmer days and cool or cold nights came. There was a little rain but so little as not to affect the situation.

Floods are the results of many factors all conspiring to one end. But this year there was none of this. The only unfavorable element was the volume of snow and the sun's rays have taken care of that.

In this country where there was at one time this winter a real scarcity of water, that unfavorable condition has changed and the moisture has largely gone into the ground and into wells and very little until lately found its way into the streams.

Civil Administration in Burma

About one-half of the total area of Burma has now been liberated, but it is the less fertile and productive half. The Civil Affairs Service, which is manned to a large extent by experienced officers who formerly served in Burma, is gradually fostering normal conditions of life in the reoccupied areas. The people, both of the hills and of the plains, will long remember the three years of Japanese domination as an era of forced labor, stolen cattle, and compulsory requisitioned crops for which the only payment was in Japanese paper currency.

Upper Burma, which has never been self-sufficient as regards food, is now in the grip of scarcity. The whole country formerly produced 6½ million tons of rice annually, and exported nearly half of this, but now there is grievous shortage; the more fertile areas are still in Japanese hands, and furthermore the working cattle have been either slaughtered or requisitioned by the Japanese, or have perished from neglected disease; and the irrigation dams and canals in central Burma are disorganized. Villages in the theatre of military operations, especially in the Naga Hills, were looted and burned by the starving Japanese, and the cultivators were of course unable to plant their rice.

The first job of the Civil Affairs Service, therefore, is to supply free food and housing for the many thousands of utterly destitute persons. Huge stocks of rice are being brought in, both by road and by air, together with cooking oil, salt, soap and other necessities. So that it is now possible to distribute a basic food ration of one pound of rice and one-eighth of an ounce of salt per head. In newly liberated Akyab the price of rice has already dropped to 2/- a pound (14c) a pound from 1/6 (30c), the price under Japanese rule. There is also very little cotton cloth in the country, hardly any medicines, and no sewing or manufactured goods.

Plans have been made for bringing in large supplies of all articles required, and to utilize to the best advantage all that can be produced within the country. First-aid centres with doctors and nurses in attendance and well-equipped with medicines, are already moving into liberated areas. Another necessary task is to get industry working again as soon as possible. Flows, carts and so on, as well as working cattle, have to be provided for agriculture, and plans are afoot to encourage full production of rice, ground-nut, sesamum, cotton, etc., and to render assistance in the reconstruction of mud-built villages. The inhabitants welcome the return of the Civil Affairs Officers and crowd into their camps. As the Japanese move out the Burmese are returning to their villages on ox-carts, with their families and their household goods, no longer afraid of being conscripted for labor by the Japanese. Civil Affairs Officers takes over a liberated area he starts at once to rebuild the local administration by calling together the village headmen and getting the Burmese police force running again. These Burmese police formed their records in the jungle to keep them out of Japanese hands. Now they have been digging them up again.

They are also bringing back their home furniture and factory machinery which they had taken to the jungle or had buried when they found that the Japanese were taking everything made of metal, including railway lines and the corrugated iron roofs. Already some of the small factories have been put back into working shape.

Avoids Fine Through Misspelling

(From "Word Study")

At Durham, N.C., a misspelled word on a traffic sign helped acquit a defendant.

As the story goes, a resident of Durham refused to Water, in a successful plea to avoid a fine in an alleged traffic violation. The Durhamite was arrested for driving his car on the north side of Morgan Street, where a sign definitely read: No stoping.

When the defendant was brought to court he brought with him a copy of the ordinance and urged that he was not guilty of "stoping," inasmuch as the dictionary stated that "stoping" means "extracting of from a stope, or, loosely, underground." Judge A. R. Wilson found him not guilty on the charge, since obviously he had not been doing any ore extracting, from a stope or otherwise.

THE DOG WHO COULD READ

A trainer of a clever breed
Dreamed he had taught his dog to read
And thought the trick would bring him fame,
Until the morning paper came.
"Ah," said the dog, "from all accounts,
Man's wisdom not to much amounts.

"I've heard you boast your power to think
But here it is in printer's ink,
An endless tale of gruesome acts
Recorded every day as facts.
For one man's madness millions die,
As at each others' throats you fly.

"One man can set the world on fire
And shatter wall and roof and spire.
One man can fill your finest years
With blood and agony and fears.
Believe me, since I've learned to read,
A dog's life I would rather lead."

Spooky the Way Forts' Fly Back Each by Self and Arrive at One Time

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Marianas Islands —(delayed)—No sooner has one B-29 formations disappeared to the north with their long flights to Japan, than single planes begin coming back.

These are called "aborts," which is short for abortive. They are a much-used word around a bomber base.

The "aborts" come straggling back in twos and threes. They are planes that had something happen to them which forbade them continuing on the long Japan expedition. Sometimes it happens immediately after takeoff, sometimes it doesn't happen until they are almost there.

The term "abort" had a bomb-bay door come open, and couldn't get it closed. The second had part of the cowl flap come unfastened and the mechanic undoubtedly caught hell for that. A third had a prop run away when he lost an engine.

My friend Lieut. Robert Todd, of Ogden, Utah, "aborted" on a mission I watched take off. He blew a cylinder head clear off.

It was within sight of Japan when it happened, and he had to let others back home by only half an hour. He flew 12 1-3 hours on one day, and didn't even get credit for a mission. That's the way it goes.

Long Day, Weary On.

Those on the field will idly look at their watches as the long day wears on, mentally calculating the progress of their comrades.

"They're about sighting the mainland now," you'll hear one say after a while.

They should be over the target by now. I'll bet they're catching hell," comes a little later from somebody.

By late afternoon you look on your watch and know that by now, for good or bad, it is over with. You know they're far enough off the coast that the last Jap fighter has turned for home and the last one alone with the night and the awful returning distance, and other troubles.

Our planes bomb in formation, and stick together until they're left the Japanese coast, and then they break up and each man comes home on his own.

It's almost spooky the way they can fly through the dark night, getting above all that ocean, for reported. And the others, after their hours of terrific strain, fall wearily into bed.

within a few minutes of each other. First Headlights.

The afternoon we're begun to get radio messages from the planes. A flight leader with radio how the weather is, and if anybody went down over the target. Then the single planes, one by one, we begin to patch together a general picture.

We lost planes that day. Some went down over the target. Some just disappeared, and the other boys never knew where they went. Some thought as long as they could keep crippled planes going, and they had to "ditch" in the ocean.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Saguenakis Suggested As Name for New Street Along River

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer.

Now that a new street along the eastern bank of the Moira River is being opened, the question of an appropriate name for the thoroughfare is being given consideration.

When this proposed development is completed, the public name given the name "Esplanade" was suggested. But a word derived from the Latin and is usually applied to mean a public drive along a shore-line. In that sense it was technically correct, but some have expressed objection for it because of past associations.

Since the present movement began to get under way some months ago, the name "Riverside Drive," has been frequently used. But strong objections have been raised against such a term by Mr. Mackenzie Robertson and other prominent citizens because of its very commonplace nature. Mr. Robertson has pointed out, "Riverside Drive" is the name of a street in every town, city or hamlet which has a street on the bank of a river, a description within its bounds. In this respect "Riverside" is in a class with such terms as "Main" and "Main" and "Bridge" which decorate the street signs of towns and cities in North America with such monotonous regularity. They are quite as undistinctive as "Front," "Queen" and "Bear" and "Mud" and "Crow" Island, Quinte. Why apply such a term to a beautiful stretch of water as the Moira? Why apply such overworking commonplaces to the twenty hundreds of our beautiful lakes and streams? Why not give them really excellent names which could be used only for them? Money has been expended in the process, and that's how it should be. Not a score of "Trout" lakes. That sort of thing is not only unnecessary confusion and betrays an unimaginative mind. And above all, part of those who do the naming.

Mr. Robertson has suggested that instead of the hackneyed "River" that we give the new highway the same name as the bridge and call it "Moira Drive."

Moira has always seemed to me to be a beautiful name. It has a ring and musical cadence. It was borrowed from the ancient name of a county in County Down, Ireland. According to Irish folk-lore, it means "great" in local. As Belleville we divide it into three syllables, Moi-ra, with accent on the second syllable and the "o" and "i" long in quantity. The Irish pronounce it Moy-ra, with its pronunciation and make it Moy-rah.

The name was bestowed on our river, however, out of honor to the Earl of Moira, who, curiously enough, never even saw the turbulent little stream which commemorates his name and never even visited Canada. Yet he must have made a few geographical features in this immediate district.

The family name of the Earl of Moira was Rawdon and he was the third son of Sir John Rawdon of Moira, County Down, Ireland. Francis Rawdon became an officer in the British army and fought on the British side in the Revolutionary War in the United States. He made an excellent record and shortly after the war he was raised to the peerage by the British government and chose for his title, Earl of Moira. He was made Viceroy of India from 1813 to 1823 and was entitled with the title of Marquis of Hastings. He died in 1826 and left the County of Hastings. Francis Rawdon, who benevolently bestowed his family name on the Moira River, was born in Loughbrickland, Down and was also connected with the Rawdon house of Hungerford.

Mr. Robertson has suggested "Moira Drive" as stated above. But, there is a better name, particularly in the way of adopting that purchased from the already have our important arterial street with the same name. Some other cities have also had to change the name of a street because of its name being confusing to the public. Belleville has its Victoria Road and difficulty for strangers in finding their locations.

I, therefore, take the liberty of suggesting Saguenakis Drive as the name for this new development.

Saguenakis is historic. It was the name applied to the river by the Mississauga Indians who lived here long before Columbus discovered America. The Saguenakis were here when the first white settlers arrived. They also have a beautiful and euphonious name for this river which is a large and steady-flowing stream before the dams were so foolishly deprived of the protection of its valley and its forest growth. Saguenaka is easy to pronounce and spell and there is not a repetition of the name of any other geographical feature. It is redolent of self, and it would help to keep away from names that are trite and hackneyed.

Canadians have done remarkably well in their nomenclature on the whole but there have been some cases of instances where the choice client, for example, was not indicative of thought or discrimination. We have "Canadian Pacific Railway" St. in Belleville.

I confess to a great liking for the retention of the original Indian names wherever it is practical to do so. Canada, Ontario, Ottawa and Toronto, are beautifully appropriate for our country, our province and our country's capital and capital of our province.

Suppose that some one with a flair for the repetition of European names were to propose that we change the name of Canada to New Holland. Ottawa to Jones Falls, Toronto to New Wales, Toronto to New Cheshire and Niagara to York Falls, what would be likely to happen? It seems also almost to mention but yet we have a name for the proposed province that will be sonorous, distinctive, appropriate and not duplicated elsewhere in Canada.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

ANY VITAMINS TODAY, FOLKS?

Today most physicians prescribe vitamins for or administer them to many patients every day.

Recently 300 veterinary medical students and technicians at Ontario Veterinary College were divided into two groups, each group given either shotgun vitamin tablets, vitamin extract tablets, or yeast extract tablets. The tablets were all of the same size and appearance, to take for a month. The investigators concluded from the experiment that administering vitamin supplements to these apparently healthy animals, consuming the usual American diet (which I suppose, means, food anyway), had no demonstrable beneficial effect.

In the first place if the volunteers were really in the best possible health it would be pretty silly to expect that any vitamin or combination of vitamins could improve their health, vitality, sense of well being, capacity to work or anything else.

In the next place, if any of them did have any impairment of health due to deficiency of one or more vitamins, it would be pretty silly to expect to remedy the trouble by simply adding a little more vitamin content to the diet for a month. These Ontario Health Investigators evidently confuse vitamins with drugs. That is just a plodding old country doctor who knows and knows very much about the prophylactic or preventive value of vitamin concentrates or vitamin supplements, but knows I have no patience with the notion that it takes several months of optimal (several times more than best average diet) consumption of vitamin feeding to restore vim in their veins, vigour in their muscles, the systemic effects of a year or two of severe, long continued, do not yield to a month of proper vitamin treatment.

These self-appointed debunkers of the vitamin craze were years behind the march in their knowledge about the newer principles of nutrition. Why, as the Netherlands' utterance above quoted (from one of their public leaders) so well illustrates.

Answer — The naive requests I receive in the daily mail I know that the education of the public about health has been taking care of by those old masters of public health education, (several medicine and nostrum manufacturers—and one "new" one) but other category should include producers of bread, milk, cheese, poultry, fish, and cereals and what have you. But, right now the quality is now too sophisticated to be represented by the crudest attempts of the slow-footed medical profession. They all is it, leaving for the moment, individually or through their organizations, the question of on the one hand, that one should not be fanatic only when one's physician is fanatic, and on the other hand of vitamin or vitamins concerned; and on the other hand, that bread should be doctored with synthetic vitamins instead of those such as Glutamine (B1), riboflavin (B2 or G), etc., to insure that everybody who eats store bread shall get a full and adequate dose of vitamin every day regardless. But then isn't the stand taken or approved by the national medical organization usually like that?

YOU'D BE SURPRISED

By GEORGE W. STIMPSON

YOU POOR SHRIMP

Why should an insignificant person be called a shrimp?

"Shrimp" is derived from a Teutonic root signifying "to shrink" or "to wither away."

The term has been applied to very small things and persons for many centuries.

In one sense a shrimp is a small, slender, long fellow. Also, a certain marine crustacean found along sandy coasts in many parts of the world. The shrimps around the British Isles are of the northern coasts of Europe are the best. They have been esteemed as a seafood since ancient times.

Possibly a diminutive, dried-up or shrivelled person was originally called a shrimp after the crustacean after the same analogy of "small fry" and "one of the fry." The application of the word may go back to the verb "shrimpen" or "shrimpan."

Always in the sense of a child, a dwarf, or a small puny person was the word established in England already in Shakespeare's time. In King Henry VI, ACT II, Scene 3, the Countess of Auvergne says of Lord Talbot:

> It cannot be this weak and > writhled shrimp
> Should strike such terror in his enemies.

And in Love's Labour's Lost, Act V, Scene 2, Holofernes, introducing Moth as Hercules in a masquerade, says:

> Great Hercules is presented by this imp,
> Whom the blue killed Cerberus, that three-headed canis;
> And, when in his fist he doth a babe, a child, a shrimp,
> Think this the fabulous conception
> Of this our forces with his mamma.

An edible crustacean, somewhat like but larger than the ordinary shrimp, called a "prawn," a word of unknown origin.

In Henry IV, Part II, Act I, Scene 1, Mistress Quickly, the hostess of the tavern, is arrested for debt. She says to the fat knight that good-naturedly calls her "Dame," and "calling me she had a good dish of prawns, whereby you did desire to eat some; whereby I told you that they were a green wound."

Finally, the word is used humorously of some species are two or three feet long.

Barker Property Proposed as Community Centre

Picton, March 8—Purchase of the Barker property as a community centre and as a memorial was suggested at town council Monday night Mayor N. McKibbon appointed a committee of Messrs R. Warren, Councillors A. E. Grindrod and C. Blakely to investigate the matter. It was reported that the Rotary and Kinsmen clubs would assist in a financial way.

The property has been offered to the town for $6,000 a very moderate sum, as there are spacious grounds centrally located and a large house.

It was suggested by members of council that a building to house a swimming pool and facilities for other recreation. An arena is another possibility.

It was pointed out that the town already has a war memorial and such a community centre would be a useful memorial to those who have given their lives in this war. W. Forbes Hydro Estate.

Mayor McKibbon informed council that Hydro rates would be reduced in Picton, April 1st. Approval of proposed reductions by the Public Utilities has been made by the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission. The reduction applies to all classifications.

Permission was granted the Kinsmen to hold a tag day for their Milk for Britain Fund in July.

Public Health.

Miss M. P. Silver, nursing supervisor of Prince Edward-Lennox Control, Ontario Department of Health, spoke on social diseases and urged that action be taken for their control. There were 13,275 cases of V.D. reported to the Ontario Department last year, and 200 cases this year. For every case reported, she declared. Instruction to students in secondary schools is essential, she said, pointing out the grave danger of these diseases. The rapid spread must be fought by doctors and nurses, social workers, churches and the police department. The importance of supervised playgrounds as an aid to its control was stressed by Miss Silver.

A permit to erect an automobile salesroom on the Livingstone property, previously granted to Fred Healy, is transferred to Fred VanDusen.

Public library estimates were presented and total $3,345.

Relief report showed 30 aided in February at a cost of $361.

POLITICAL CRISIS IN ITALY GROWS MORE INTENSE

Disorders Spread to Other Prisons and Sporadic Bomb Explosions Heard

Rome, March 7 — (AP) — Disorders spread to the Regina Coeli prison and sporadic bomb explosions throughout Rome punctuated Italy's political crisis today.

Following yesterday's clash before the Royal Palace between Carabinieri and a crowd in which a Communist demonstrator was killed and several persons were wounded, convicts and persons awaiting trial for Fascist crimes burst out of their antiquated cells at the prison before dawn. Police and firemen quelled the riot with fire hose streams.

Bombs burst sporadically in various sections of the capital and crowds were reported to have demonstrated before Carabinieri barracks in outlying sections.

No further casualties were reported, however.

Extraordinary Session

The cabinet met in an extraordinary session to consider a Left-Wing demand for its resignation as a result of the escape of Gen. Mario Roatta while he was on trial for alleged Fascist crimes.

The cabinet appointed Gen. Brunetto Brunetti commander of the Carabinieri succeeding Taddeo Orlando, who Roatta is on Yugoslavia's list of criminals. It also announced appointment of a new chief of the Fascist purge.

Whether Premier Ivanoe Bonomi would remain in Premier still was undecided however. A swifter purge was essential if the Communists would remain in his cabinet.

West Aberdeen Pass

Last night Bonomi declared that "as a member of a coalition government I could never abandon my post without the approval of his cabinet."

Rome's central sirens were patrolled today by squads of police.

The British Provost Marshal said three Allied personnel were wounded during the Royal Palace riot.

Besides the Italian slain, a number of Italian civilians were wounded.

The Government communique said one civilian was wounded, but the Rome press said 12.

The communique denied that the Communist demonstrator was killed by the guns of the Carabinieri. It said the Carabinieri fired into the air.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Pick She Types Marriage to a Business Rather?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

She's the type of man I've always wanted for a husband—intelligent, well-read, broad-minded and generous to a fault. He is, however, the shyest set of human beings I've ever met, when he has attempted to make love to me, he has stuttered, stammered and ruined the whole business day and age, don't you think he would be better off if he were to bring up the subject and bluntly ask him if he would not like to become engaged!

Undecided.

Millions of women have actually proposed to men, but they haven't done so in the blunt way you propose. The actual proposal has been so subtle, so camouflaged by feminine wiles and graces, that the man never realized that the Little Lady had actually done the proposing.

All men, no matter how shy, like to reserve this perogative for themselves, and a bald proposal of marriage, even to the shyest, might send your tongue-tied suitor scurrying tail thither. I had an amusing letter from a girl the other day. She signed over the pages of a manuscript, full of charming household effects. Scores were furnished delightfully for very little. Wouldn't it be lovely to have a home like that, with someone you loved "World, your" he said, and the deed was done.

He is 16, she is 19, and Engaged Without Parents' Consent Else.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a boy of 16, and a junior in high school. I've fallen for a girl with a 19-year-old girl. She's the daughter of a local movie theatre, and we started going around together about eight months ago when I took a part-time job there. I've met her parents and they're very nice people.

I've told her how I feel and she admits she thinks of me more than just a friend. She's engaged to a soldier but we never mention him. She had a ring, but I can buy her another ring than she has. Do you think it would be too long to be engaged two or three years? And what do you think about the difference in our ages?

D. L. B.

Almost every boy hates to romantic life by falling in love with an older woman. Such an experience, often beautiful and apt to protect a boy from the terrible mania which possesses so many youths, seldom does it lead to marriage, the girl, as in your case, is probably engaged or married to someone else, and accepts the devotion of the boy lover as something sweet and unspoiled. If you find this experience making you jealous or unhappy it would be well to stop seeing the girl.

Young Wife, Unwelcome in Husband's Family, Worried by Accusations.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband's family were opposed to me from the beginning, the reason being our marriage withdrawn his move than generous allowance to them. When I was executing my baby, after we'd been married a year, I was unjustly accused by a slanderous tongue of not being able, and becoming involved in misrepresentation of some family funds.

This was broadcast all through the family connections and even to family friends. Later it was discovered that I was not the guilty party, but my husband's elder sister had taken the mother. The shame included my husband, and he has adopted a policy of his family, and no longer gives them an allowance. I have a home to run and begged me to intercede with him to continue the allowance especially to his old mother who had nothing to do with this unsavory business.

M. C. M.

As his mother had nothing to do with these false accusations, why not ask your husband to forgive and reconciled to her and continue the allowance? At this time, when it would be unwise to become friendly with the sisters who have accused you of a crime they did not commit.

She Ex-Girl Friend Says She's Too Good for Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm deeply in love with a girl who has always been around with a soldier; she met at a dance. They became engaged me a great deal of worry, as one never knows. I'm too good for her, and that I ought to find a girl more my ideal. I've told her I'm willing to go with her again and hope what has passed she asked for time to think it over. Do you think I have any chance with her? I'm 24 years old and declared because of a heart ailment.

Bill.

Do you know why this girl thinks you're too good for her? She's she's a wild type, or is she just giving you the excuse to keep you at a distance? Perhaps she doesn't want to get back on the old friendly footing? She haven't told you enough about your problem. If she's not this type, she is called "bad," I believe I'd take her at her word and let things stand as they are.

Told Him in the Beginning He Was Not a Marrying Man.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For about a year I went out with a young man who has since gone into the army but has not yet gone overseas. He used to come to see me whenever he could and I enjoyed his company. We were very happy and congenial. In the beginning of our acquaintance he told me he was not a marrying man, but he knew he loved me, and I can't understand why he dropped me without a word.

His financial position is excellent. He has no family obligations. I have written to him at his post but he doesn't answer. He's not attentive to any other girl and I hear he seems unhappy. Shall I continue to write?

M. H. N.

When a man tells a girl he's not the marrying kind, he wants her to understand that even if he should fall in love with her he does not expect to marry. There may be innumerable reasons why he cannot marry, and when a girl accepts the attendance of a non-marrying man, she has been known to fall when the right girl appears. In your case this one seems to be standing in the decision.

Better not waste any time replying over him.

Foster Parents Permitted To Keep Baby, in Spite of Mrs. Fredericks

The picture of a young girl walking up and down in front of a house to try to catch a glimpse of her baby makes us stop and consider.

How about our "quality of mercy," on which we smugly pride ourselves, saying that it is the distinction in this country to look after all unwed mothers well.

This is the old, old story of a girl being so much in love that she didn't stop to ask questions of the man she believed in. When she told him she was going to have a baby he said that they should get married, he coolly informed her that was out of the question—he already had a wife—and if she disclosed their relationship he would kill her and the baby. Nice sort of man that!

The parents of this 16-year-old unwed mother are most unwise to try in urging their daughter to sign away her baby. Surely the girl's parents for permitting her to sign an agreement for adoption.

Aren't we becoming more enlightened concerning this question of illegitimacy? In Scandinavian countries before they were overrun by Nazis, the question of illegitimacy was outmoded, the question being why should the sins of the parents be visited upon an innocent child?

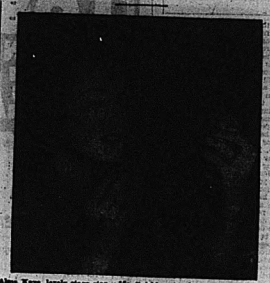
The Quick Pick-Up



Alma Kaye, lovely stage star, adds finishing touches to her make-up.

By HELEN JOLLETT

THERE ARE times when a woman is in need of a quick pick-up treatment for a weary face. She has run herself ragged during the days. Her nerves are shouting like bacon, curling at the edges. Her muscles are tired, face drawn, feet haggard and full of worries and heart not enough of courage and spirit. She has to do something to put her broken pieces all together again. A bad situation, but not serious. She should fill the bath tub with fairly warm water, take a quick shower cap to save her precious tresses. She should remove make-up with a thin cream and, when the complexion is clean, put on a heavy emollient. If the bath room is always the combination of cream and moist heat, it is a treasure to her skin; it will give it color.

Five minutes of relaxation in the warm water will go a long way toward preparing her for the adoption of her child some months before the birth. As she told the court in her attempt to recover her baby, she was so frightened she didn't know what she was doing.

The situation was enough to terrify any girl. In the most brutal way the child's father had not only gone back on her, refused to assume any responsibility, but actually threatened to kill her and the child if she told. How could she realize the rush of love that would come with this baby girl with its first cry—has you all she had signed the adoption papers giving it away.

In rendering his decision that the adoptive parents should keep the child, Visiting Judge Richard M. Duncan said that while his sympathy was with the 19-year-old unwed mother, who had shown a great deal of character and was willing to assume the responsibility of bringing up her baby, he felt that the best interests of the child would be served if it were allowed to remain with its foster parents.

The legal argument was that the child would fare better with the adoptive parents than if people knew it was born out of wedlock. The judge condemned bitterly the

Fine Flannel Frock

Strawberry pink daytime dress

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

THE NICELY done little flannel frock pictured here for fussy is always a sell-out, my big sister, especially when it is as attractive a design as the one depicted here. Strawberry pink flannel is tailored with two deep folds in front to simulate a ruffled jumper. The folds end at the deep, slit pockets which extend from the side seams. The skirt is gored in back. It is a grand frock for a career girl, for college, or for any casual daytime activities.

DIRT'S WORST ENEMY

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEEKMAN

A Letter of Condolence

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

Will you please give me a form for a letter of condolence? To me this is the hardest kind of thing to write, and I never know just what to say.

S. E.

It is really impossible to give a form for a letter of condolence, because each one must express sincere feeling, and above all things be sincere, and no letter of condolence is written in the manner you would. Also, what we write depends on how well we knew the person who has died; or how close we are to the person in sorrow.

In a letter of condolence you should say what you truly feel, fill down at your desk, focus your thoughts sympathetically on the person you are writing to, and let your heart speak truly. Try to forget that you are using written words, but just let your pen say what you are feeling. The note of condolence that brings the greatest comfort is the one that is as simple as a warm handclasp. A letter that carries the thought of sympathy and understanding, that expresses a genuine appreciation of the one who has gone.

Write as simply as possible. Remember that an aching heart will find it difficult to follow "flourishes or rhetoric," will be really comforted by a brief genuine sentiment. And almost always it is appropriate to add if there is anything you can do to be of service.

To someone less close to you in friendship, a note something like this might be sent:

Dear Mrs. Roberts:

I know how painfully inadequate words are at such a time, but I do so much want to tell you how deeply I sympathize with you in your great sorrow. In a humble way I share your loss, for I have known Sarah for several years, and deeply admired her fine character and her enduring charm.

Do let me ask and for your own, dear Mrs. Roberts, if there is not some little thing I can do for you? Please let me do anything I can to be of help.

Most sincerely,
Sally Brown.

CHICAGO HAWKS TIED FOR FOURTH, BEAT RANGERS 6-3

Have Chance to Make Playoffs Sure by Defeating Bruins Twice

(By The Canadian Press)

That pre-season prediction—we'll finish about fourth"—came back to plague coach Jack Adams today as his New York Rangers shifted into the National Hockey League cellar.

Even since the Blueshirts emerged from their Wembley training camp last all Schoolboy words have haunted him became Rangers have around that very spot all season.

And today Chicago Black Hawks, who spent most of the season in the cellar and right on the heels of New York, share the fourth place playoff berth with Boston Bruins, one-half game ahead of Rangers.

The Birds slid alongside Bruins at Chicago last night by belting Rangers 6-3 and could snatch sole possession of the playoff berth from Boston in their two scheduled clashes next week.

Pete Moreck touched off a Chicago first period rally with a goal at 6:04. Within two minutes Lee Ramsay and Clint Smith counted to give Hawks 3-0 lead.

Rangers cracked back into the game before the period ended on goals by Hank Goldup and Bob Dill. Bill Moe tied it up shortly after the second session started but after that it was all Chicago.

Bill Mosienko accounted for the winning goal before the second period ended and Don Grosso and Moreck with his second of the night scored in the final session.

Name Athletes Are Guinea Pigs For Physicians

Philadelphia, March 8 (AP)—Big-name athletes and hundreds of athletic young fry were signed up as guinea pigs today in a medical research project to determine whether there are any such thing as an "athletic heart."

Dr. Paddy Sexe, golf champion, and Lieut. Hadon Marlowe, baseball star, were among a group of football, baseball, boxing and rowing figures who agreed to submit to exhaustive physical examinations to help answer the old and often-asked question of whether sports are harmful to constitutional health.

Adult stars in most cases will be tested only once but younger volunteers will be examined periodically, some from their grammar school to college days. It will be five or six years, said project director Dr. Joseph Wilfer, before enough data has been amassed to justify a conclusion.

Examinations will include X-ray measurements of the heart and complete studies of the cardiovascular systems.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

New York, March 8 (AP)—Arthur Donovan, the fight referee, was explaining his theories on judging fights to the members of the New York Boxing Writers' Association, who have been somewhat confused by Commissioner Eddie Eagan's efforts to find a more satisfactory system... His efforts often diminish the confusion to any great extent as Donovan "reviewed the charges that have taken place in New York over a period of years, four judges generally referred to the boxers as "this fellow" and "that fellow" and the conclusion of each judge was that "Naturally there was a Bellabaloo so they threw that rule out the window.... But at the end he left the impression that he prefers the present system of counting rounds won and lost by any point system, providing the judge has the option of awarding the decision to a fighter who is clearly shorter even though he won fewer rounds; that the figures aggravations, if effective, is very important and knockdown "is amazing."

CASUAL COMMENT

By R.J.C.

A school inspector having studied his investigation into the class's knowledge of history, paused and said:

"Now it's only fair that I should give you a turn children. Can anyone ask a question that I may answer for them?"

Promptly he heard a voice.

"Please, sir, what is the name who has two eggs for breakfast every morning, but doesn't know how he does it, and always gets one boy who can tell him?"

The Inspector thought and finally had to answer: "No, I'm afraid I cannot. What does he get them from?"

"Please, sir," said the boy, "the loops ducks."

Bert Bastede Writes

From H.M.C.S. Cornwallis, comes letter from Bert Bastede entertaining the Belleville Rotary Club during the "Little Six" junior group hockey days. Bert says he hasn't heard about the Kingston series at last date. However, he readily admits he would like to have been playing centre between his brother Doug and Stan Sexton for the Combines against Belleville.

Bert points out that three different teams have won the group title in the past three years, Trenton in 1943, the Combines in 1944 and Belleville in 1945. Quote to Jerry Quinn—"maybe it's your turn next."

Bastede and Patterson played for the Navy team this year against such opposition as Bob Goldham, Gary Edwards, Charlie Hamilton, Bill Shill, Hughie Barker and other former big leaguers. Bert says Doug Coleman and Johnny Menard, two former Belleville juniors are somewhere "down east" with the R.C.N.

Packers to be Honored.

On Monday night next all of the players to appear in the Quinte R.C.A.F. hockey group will be tendered a banquet at the Quinte Hotel, so says Fit. Jimmie McCaskill, sports officer at the Quinte R.C.A.F. base and president of the Quinte service league. It is a fitting gesture on the part of the league executive, as the respective teams received no remuneration for any description during the regular schedule. Naturally the league champion Trenton "Flyers" will be seated at the head table and will be plenty of suitable gifts as winners of the league.

Out at Marmora the following night the Madoc Hockey League will hold its annual banquet and Mush oreelli for the success of the Madoc League can be loomed into the lap of Provincial Constable Jack Hatch, league treasurer and his able assistant, Bruce Wallace. Among the season for free food is assured.

Remember When.

Jack Hobbs, England's cricket god, made his 12th century in Australia on December 26, 1911, at Melbourne 10 years ago today. The great batsman had his 197 not out run in the fifth test match at the end of the season. He hundred stood as a record for 33 years, the international 5th of the 1936-37 series. Don Bradman and Aussie batting ace, equalled the mark.

Hank Looks Ahead.

A managerial berth is the ambition of Cpl. Hank Greenberg, former Detroit slugger, after the war. He declared while here for a benefit rally... "I would like to manage a big league club and I know I can handle the position," Hank said. "I haven't had any offers because I'm still under Uncle Sam's jurisdiction, but will be ready for one this year is over."

However, Greenberg hopes to keep his name in as a player, too. "I've kept myself in excellent shape during the last four years," Hank declared. "I think I'll be able to play if this war doesn't last too much longer."

Baseball Co-operates.

"With no All-star game and the possibility of the 1945 world series being cancelled, baseball league ball is going all out to co-operate with U.S. government heads in their efforts to conserve travel and permit the rolling stock to be used for more important material," says Bill Cayzon in the Niagara Falls Review. "The cancellation of events means the loss of several thousands of dollars to worthy causes, but if the big legislators think that they and the diamond leaders are right with the nation's interests, Organized ball has been right into the war effort from the beginning and if every other athletic body had done the similar fashion, there would be no cause for complaint from the men at the Capitol. In addition to giving thousands of men into the fighting branches, the big-circuits have contributed more than $2,000,000 to worthy branches and have entertained thousands of soldiers without cost at all big league games. Headliners were sent to the various training camps to give soldiers to fan with the men and display the 1944 world series pictures, and now they are into the business of corralling travel. Baseball representatives have asked for non-travel recommendations from the men entering the armed forces and battle in the promotion of the international conflict."

Toronto, March 8 —(CP)— The champions are no longer—and even eyeing a close runner-up, Galt Red Wings had no difficulty in defending off last year's Memorial Cup winner—Oshawa Generals—in the first round of their Junior O.H.A. series.

And so the Gens—for eight years a powerful team to be contended with—have packed their gear and think of pleasant summer months and the next hockey season.

For the first time in eight years the Oshawa lads were unable to shine in the third period, and that was their downfall. There was no lack of practice and the Generals had a good team—but the new parkloads only. True the team was a little younger than usual on the average, but even that is no alibi and Charlie Conacher's boys are offering none.

Most of the lads have at least two more years of junior hockey ahead of them and the experts are already warning that Generals will again be the team to beat next year while the O.H.A.'s probable contender—St. Michael's College—will carry the colors of the province with as much power as did the Oshawa sextet last year.

"Take Me Out . . .

There is every likelihood that professional baseball may return to Vancouver this spring, Tommy Gorman, player shortage on the West Coast has decided officials of the Western International League not to have more than four teams, Vancouver, Tacoma and Salem are definitely interested in resuming after the two-year layoff. The league will not meet likely be from Spokane.

Figure-Facts:

A world's record is being claimed by Sarnia's ace five-pin bowler, Charlie Loxton. Loxton rolled 132 consecutive games within the hour. His high single was 411, low 143. High three was 908 and altogether he spilled 32,736 pins for a 246 average. There were 675 strikes recorded, and spares and 193 head-pin splits. . . . Gino Sovran, Windsor Assumption College captain, hooped his 1,000th point the other night in a game against Detroit Tech. The Purple Raider netted a seventy-eighted ankle from a game a few days before but went on the floor for a few minutes until he sank a long basket that brought his total to the four-figure mark.

Incidentally:

Capilano Stadium in Vancouver, which burned last year, was the first park in Canada to have lights for baseball and football. They were put in during 1938. . . . Although B. C. boxers only copped three bouts in the Gloves' crowns—compared to seven for Ontario—the boys drew the highest praise from R. F. Sparks, sports writer. . . . N.H.L. scouts have been eyeing Bill Mosienko, Chicago Black Hawk star currently playing with the Halifax Navy squad.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Washington Senators opened the baseball training season yesterday with an initial drill at College Park, Md., with only four players indulging in a warmup under conditions that were hardly delightful. The participants were pitchers Dutch Leonard, Roger Wolff and John Niggeling and catcher Al Evans, with a dozen local boys chasing the loose balls during the meagre workout.

It was believed that, subject to further manpower restrictions, practically all of last season's regulars would report, with the exception of shortstop Johnny Sullivan who has been accepted for military service.

St. Louis Browns yesterday lost another player to the armed forces when pitcher Ellis Kinder, all-star choice in 1944 of the Memphis team of the Southern Association, was notified he had been accepted for military service. He won 19 games and lost six last season.

A small group of Chicago Cubs left the Windy City last night for French Lick, Ind., to open spring training today, but General Manager James T. Gallagher of the National League club admitted there were 11 players on the roster from sources of calcium and riboflavin.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 428

The Kibitzer

The startling simplicity of Horse Sense is good company for its amazing soundness. Therefore, it should not surprise you that all of it backfires with equal mathematics as well as logic.

In Horse Sense, the basis, for an opening bid of one is, among other things, five tricks. Thereafter, that hand shows one more trick by each raise in the last partnership contract.

Before hearing from partner, the basis of last responding hand is two tricks. And that hand shows one more trick by each raise in the last partnership contract.

This is the way partners tell each other the exact number of tricks they can take. And now let me tell you what happens when that it stands up against any argument.

A bid of one must take seven tricks. The opening one bidder says he has five. The responder must provide the other two for the seven tricks they must take. That is their basis for the one bid.

If responder rises to a bid of two, his raise shows one more trick: a total of three. His bid of two must take eight tricks. With opener's five, have that many.

If opener raises responder's bid of two to a bid of three, it shows another trick in his hand; a total of six. His bid of three must take nine tricks. With responder's three, they have that many.

AT THE BELLE

"Hail the Conquering Hero"

Paramount's "Hail the Conquering Hero," now on the Belle Theatre screen, turns the movie house into a laughing palace as the audience watches Eddie Bracken and William Demarest go through some of the craziest screen antics ever unfolded on the screen.

Author-director Preston Sturges gets the credit for another smash comedy hit to follow closely upon his "Miracle of Morgan's Creek." Many of the assorted Sturges characters are back again to tickle the patrons' ribs and, if that weren't enough, the story alone would provide ample merriment under his own power. It concerns a discharged Marine, who, rejected because of hay fever, who goes home to face up with Bracken, Demarest and five companions.

The screen finds that Bracken is ashamed to go home because of his service record. The boys fix that soon enough, rebuilding him in the community in the guise of a hero. The local citizens accept Bracken with a brass band and all the trimmings, run him for Mayor, and then see the bubble exploded when the opposition discovers this hoax. Nevertheless, Bracken wins back his girl, Ella Raines, is elected mayor after a curtain speech by Demarest and wins the favor of his neighbors.

FALCONS BEATEN BY ST. MICHAELS IN FOURTH GAME

Students Require Only One More Game to Win the Series

(By The Canadian Press)

St. Michael's dispersed of St. Catharines 9-3 last night on the latter's ice to register victory in three of four games played in their best-of-seven semi-finals for the O.H.A. Junior "A" championship the students requiring only one more win to take the series—and pass the Falcons can cop the Memorial Cup in Toronto.

In the other semi-final bracket Galt Red Wings outscored Young Rangers 6-2 at Toronto to assume a 3-1 lead in this best-of-three competition.

Ted Sloan gave St. Mikes a scoring start at St. Catharines but Taggart of Falcons made it all square for the first period only to have Johnny McCormack regain the lead for the Collegians early in the second. The middle round closed with St. Michael's 5-3 to the good and the victors added four in a row during the wind-up canto.

Leo Gravelle tallied three goals and one assist, followed by McCormack with two goals plus one assist and Bob Paul with two counters, Sloan getting the other score. Taggart and Pelmoski earned one tally each for Falcons, Doug McMurdy having the assist on both markers.

The semi-final tilt at Toronto was patterned in similar fashion with Stompboil putting Galt into an early lead, Wayne Hay lifting it up for young Rangers during the initial frame and Bill Adams carrying Red Wings out in front again early in the second period. Galt held a 4-1 edge at the close of that round and breezed to a 6-2 decision in the final period.

Adams was a two-goal ace for Galt while Bill Curtis stood out with one goal and three assists. Other Galt marksmen were spread among Stompboil, Pollock and Pavelich. Markesen of the Young Rangers were Pogue and Payne, with Ringer giving the pass for one score.

HERSHEY BEARS BETTER CHANCES

(By The Canadian Press)

Hershey Bears bettered their chances to win a berth in the playoffs of the American Hockey League as they defeated Pittsburgh Hornets 3-1 on home ice last night.

Bears took the 2-0 lead in the first frame of the game as Hal Cooper scored one minute flat after the opening period with Dodds adding the second goal after not quite six minutes of play.

Hershaymen were unable to tally in the second period but allowed the Hornets their only goal, scored by Bob Gracie, a former Bears' star.

Hershey played cautious, defensive hockey in the third stanza but bettered their 3-1 lead when Hal Buller fired through and skated to the Hornets' net to score unassisted two minutes before the end of the game.

NOMADIC GOLFERS TRY MATCH PLAY

Miami, Fla., March 8. (AP)—The Nomadic golf professionals, who have fought it out on an every-man-for himself basis over the long trail of medal play tournaments, tried their hands at team competition today for the first time this winter.

Paired off in 16 combinations, they battled at match play in the first 36-hole round of the $7,500 international four-ball event.

The switch in the change from the almost invariable stroke discharged Jack Isaacs.

"This kind of tournament gives the amateur a real chance," insisted Bob Hamilton, the Professional Golfers' Association champion. "It makes match play entirely."

"In medal play the weather may be perfect for one player and terrible for another. Here they both have the same chance."

The betting was even that the best-ball scores would drop to 60 or lower since the players can afford caution in the winds and hit for the pins, depending on their partners to back them up if they fail.

Although they wanted to be listed as outsiders, Byron Nelson and Harold (Jug) McSpaden were given the top-seeded spot.

ROYALS DEFEAT HULL VOLANTS

Montreal, March 8. (CP)—Montreal Royals turned back Hull Volants 4-0 here last night to grab a one-game lead in the best-of-seven series of the Quebec Senior Hockey League playoffs.

Gerry Heffernan paced the Montreal victory with a brace of goals while Dunc Cheyne also tallied two for Volants.

Henry Hayes shot Royals in the lead after twelve minutes of the initial frame had gone by.

Royals served into a 1-0 lead at the midway mark in the mid-session when Heffernan fired two goals in quick succession, one a goal mouth-pass from Smiley Mirsook. Then Cheyne broke into the scoring for Hull after he caught the Montreal defence flat-footed on a solo effort.

Smiley Mercuck beat Goalie Alex Wood following a three-man rush down the ice along with Heffernan and Alex Smart before Cheyne came back with another spectacular goal to cut Royals' lead to four-to-two.

Gignac added another one for Royals in the second half of the final stanza when he backhanded a 30-footer through a mass of legs right behind Goalie Wood before Larry Laframbroise retaliated for Volants.

HOW FAR WILL SOME WOMEN GO?

THERE is a certain type of woman whom every wife should know at first glance. Second glance is often too late.

THIS is the woman who comes to a home as a guest, and, under the protection of hospitality, stays to wreck it. She may be a friend, a neighbor or even a relative.

HER eyes generally fall on the protector of the home—the husband. Her first aim is to make him HER protector. She follows the motto that a man is only as good as the woman he is with. She is prepared for any depth.

THERE are stories like this in any town, any neighborhood. One such story has now reached the screen. It happened only because a certain producer, whose list of hits is the largest in Hollywood's history, became possessed of a desire to get away from the ordinary.

HE is the man who made the famous "Thin Man" series with William Powell and Myrna Loy. He did "The Great Ziegfeld." The stars of his dozens of pictures run from Jean Harlow to Joan Crawford to Clark Gable to Barbara Stanwyck.

BUT to him, greater than these, is the picture he has just completed. The title is "Guest In The House"—from the famous stage play.

THE man who made this picture is Hunt Stromberg.

The players are Anne Baxter, Ralph Bellamy, Aline McMahon, Ruth Warrick, Scott McKay and Marie McDonald.

IF you think you know how far some women will go to attain their ends — you don't need to see "Guest In The House." If you are not sure you know, you are going to be shocked. But maybe a shock is what you need.

"Guest In The House" comes to the McCarthy Theatre on Saturday.

Community Effort Urged to Combat Venereal Disease

The increasing inroads of the greatest enemy to the health of the youth of the nation, and, therefore of combating and bringing to a minimum, venereal disease in Ontario was the theme of an address here last night to 300 people in the Collegiate Auditorium by Miss Pearl Silver, Training Supervisor of the Venereal Disease Division of the Ontario Department of Health.

Miss Silver urged the importance of individuals' and communities' co-operation with the extensive programs now under way and sponsored by the Ontario Department of Health.

That V.D. is definitely increasing in Ontario is evidenced, in the fact that during the months of January and February this year, 2,771 new cases were reported. In 1944, 13,276 cases were reporting in Ontario.

It is estimated, Miss Silver said, that for every case of syphilis reported to authorities, there are two unreported, in the case of gonorrhoea, only one of every six cases are brought to the notice of authorities or physicians.

In some Northern centres in Ontario 500 of every 100,000 people are affected with the disease. In Sweden, she said, authorities have induced the media of open discussion of facts and preventive action have a ratio of 14 of every 100,000 infected.

Tragedy of Disease.

One of the tragedies of the disease is the terrible toll it takes of the lives of innocent babies, "In one year," Miss Silver told her audience, "congenital syphilis could be wiped out if the people of the country got down to business. Dr. J. Moore, Johns Hopkins University specialist, stated that congenital syphilis can be prevented as easily as small-pox through the simple routine of blood tests, and adequate treatment before birth."

"In Ontario last year there were 165 cases of this form of the disease, and already, in the first two months of this year, 19 cases have been reported," Miss Silver stated.

Besides the calamity of the children, blindness, sterility and mental diseases are products of this enemy to public health. "One of every eighteen inmates in mental institutions in the province are there because of the aftermath of venereal disease."

Four Factors.

Besides the four factors, health, welfare, moral and legal, the Ontario Department of Health has made definite plans for the search-out of the hiding places of these diseases. Programs covering education in schools, films and informative literature are already under way, but Miss Silver pointed out, much depends on the community at large. Residents must be willing to discuss openly, and vigorously the demand to combat this menace in a forceful way.

Prostitution, promiscuity through the media of cheap dance halls, lower class restaurants and similar places where young people are tempted are but some of the things that are adding to the annual increase in the spread of the disease.

Miss Silver urged all to face these problems and do all in their power to eliminate or bring to the lowest minimum the disease that is ravaging the health and happiness of the lives of the nation.

"It is up to the parents," she concluded.

The meeting here was sponsored by the Belleville Board of Health and the local branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses.

Trenton Pilot Completes Two Operational Tours

Montreal, March 8 —(CP)— Back from aerial warfare on far-flung fronts, another draft of R.C.A.F. personnel arrived at the reception depot at suburban Lachine today.

Included in the group were men who had seen service in India, the Middle East, Italy and over the Western Front.

Nineteen members of the Women's Division were included in the party, which also had 27 members wearing the D.F.C. and the D.F.M. At least a dozen of the men learned on their arrival that they had been appointed to commissioned rank.

Most of those returning are home either for refitment or for duties in Canada, but one small group was back on 30-day special leaves. Toronto was exceptionally well represented in today's draft with about 35 men and women en route there.

Men who had completed two operational tours included PO. J. F. LaFrance, D.F.C., of Trenton, Ont.

POLICE COURT

William Ayton Given One Month On Fraud Charge

William Ayton, 36 of Foxboro, was sentenced to serve one month in the common jail by Magistrate J. Y. Wills today, after pleading guilty to a charge of fraud.

Ayton admitted to obtaining, by false pretences, the sum of $300 from Wesley VanClief, Miller, by means of misrepresentation in the sale of a motor car. Provincial Constable E. J. Stubbins, who investigated the matter, told the court Ayton had informed Mr. VanClief the motor car in question was free of all incumbrances when actually there was something like $264 owing on the vehicle when Ayton sold it.

"The accused has ten similar convictions registered against him and is on probation right now", said Crown Attorney Deroche as he urged a jail sentence under the circumstances.

"There is no doubt this man has knowingly and willingly lied. people can't go around just disregarding signed contracts, you know", warned His Worship before passing sentence.

"What's going to happen to my wife and family?" asked the convicted man. "You should have thought of that before", replied Mr. Donnan.

Remanded Till Monday.

Sidney Welch, Thurlow, appeared on a charge of indecently assaulting a teen-aged girl. He was not asked to plead, but was held in custody until Monday next. "The evidence is such a strong one", remarked the magistrate, "that a lengthy trial will be necessary", explained Mr. Donnan.

The only other case, preferred under the L.C.A., was not heard today.

Bracken Expresses Belief Prime Minister May Extend Parliament's Life After Apr. 17

Claims "One-Party" Delegation May be Sent to World Security Conference in San Francisco

Ottawa, March 8 (CP) — John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, expressed belief in the House of Commons last night that Prime Minister Mackenzie King may seek to extend the life of parliament so that a "one party" delegation may be sent to the forthcoming World Security Conference in San Francisco.

Mr. Bracken, who suggested that all major parties now in the House of Commons should have representation on the Canadian delegation to the Conference, said he believed Mr. King proposed to "use his majesty's" prerogative to rule the country beyond April 17, the five-year term of Parliament is scheduled to expire.

Because the San Francisco Conference would not start until eight days after the life of Parliament has expired, Mr. King would have no mandate to represent Canada at the Security Conference, said Mr. Bracken in the half-hour address broadcast over a National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation on free time allotted by the CBC to political parties.

Will Not Save King Claim

"The strategy of extending the life of the present government, either by direct or indirect means, will not save the political fortunes of Mr. King," he said. "Such an extension, in the face of his many pledges not to do so, is an all to patent a device to stave off as long as possible the inevitable defeat that awaits him.

"If it be said that the coming of the Victory Loan and the International Conference at San Francisco make his continuance in office a necessity, it is no answer. For five years Mr. King has known that the life of this parliament would end on April 17 next. During that period, he had pledged himself many times not to extend its life. No technical excuse which allows the government to carry on after that period will go down with the Canadian people".

In the field of Foreign Relations, Canada should help the British and American peoples to work in the closest harmony and should co-operate with them in peace as in war, said Mr. Bracken.

Canada must support the idea of collective security for the establishment of peace, and she must give her proper share of military and financial support to such a world peace organization. In view of Canada's dependence upon foreign trade for her prosperity, she must speak with a more effective voice in international councils on matters of trade, peace and understanding.

"In our own interest and in the interest of other nations too, we should exert all our influence to help create a world where trade moves with reasonable freedom," he said.

On the domestic front, the government's manpower policy made "impossible any approach to equality of human sacrifice in this war." The people would not forgi; the "unfair call-up, the discriminatory two-army system, and inadequate reinforcements."

The manpower errors would not end with the defeat of Germany. Canada was at war with Japan, but no provision had yet been made to send any but volunteers to that theatre of war.

"Have we to go through another cabinet crisis before the home army is required to bear even a share of whatever responsibilities the government assures for the army's part in the Japanese war?" he asked.

Mr. Bracken outlined the program his party would carry out if elected in the next general election. He said:

"We favor an economy in which private initiative can produce with all the energy, drive and skill which has given the modern world a steadily rising standard of living—an economy in which, in addition, the power of state will be used to guide, to stimulate, to regulate and, if necessary, to supplement the efforts of all legitimate enterprise."

The C.C.F. program, on the other hand, would lead to one monopoly after another until finally all business would be a state monopoly.

"We readily grant that certain enterprises should be operated as public utilities," said Mr. Bracken. "But Socialism can't stop short of totalitarianism."

Nazi Press, Radio Exhorts People To Fight to Last

London, March 8 (CP) — The German press and radio exhorted men, women and children yesterday to rise up and fight as the war's deadly "spectacles with grand stride."

"Every German, man, woman and child—young or aged—must know he is fighting," asserted an inspired editorial-broadcast. "We have no time for 'weaklings.'"

Within Germany, the Moscow radio said, new disorders flared in Berlin, Munich and Dresden in which S.S. and police intervened. "Volkssturm men in Dresden supported the demonstration crowd and fired on the S.S.," German language broadcasts from Moscow said.

"Anti-Hitler leaflets appear night after night in Hamburg and Berlin."

Must Sell 12,000 Stamps by Friday To Reach Quota

With an objective of 53,000 Belleville and district must sell another 12,000 war saving stamps by its goal in the current food and allied industries stamp selling campaign is to be reached on Friday night. Local officials of the drive announced this morning that up until last Saturday evening a total of 41,000 stamps had been sold in Belleville and district.

School children are continuing to do a grand job of stamp selling and since the opening of the campaign have sold something over 2,000 stamps. Chah prizes for the top stamp selling pupil in the schools are being offered and winners will be announced as soon as totals are compiled following the completion of the campaign.

After a rather slow start the campaign as a whole this week, gathered momentum in the Belleville district and local officials expressed the opinion the objective of 53,000 stamps would be reached. Attaining the goal set for this district would only be achieved when it was pointed out, if residents appreciated that "Friday is Stamp Day" and when purchasing their family's needs took along an extra quarter to buy a war saving stamp.

B.C.I. Hoopsters Down Albert By 35-17 Count

The Belleville Collegiate Institute hoopsters downed Albert College 35 to 17 in a Junior Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. game yesterday to move into the group leadership.

Watson was the chief marksman for B.C.I. with 14 points with Pisano of Albert getting six. Vaughn, clever B.C.I. guard, paired off against McIntosh, the Albert scoring ace, and marked his man sufficiently to keep the latter's scoring to a single point.

WHY THE RED CROSS Needs Ten Million Dollars

13,460,000 FOOD PARCELS

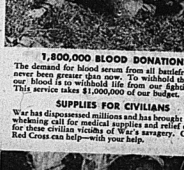
Canadian Red Cross packs Prisoner of War Parcels for Great Britain, Australia and other Allies, as well as her own prisoners of war. Canada's share of the $20,020,000 is $5,020,000. The balance, $15,000,000 will be repaid to Canada by the other countries.

1,800,000 BLOOD DONATIONS

The demand for blood serum from all battlefronts has never been greater than now. To withhold the gift of our blood is to withhold life from our fighting men. This service takes $1,000,000 out of our budget.

SUPPLIES FOR CIVILIANS

War has dispossessed millions and has brought an overwhelming call for medical supplies and relief clothing for these civilian victims of War's savagery. Only the Red Cross can help—with your help.



RELIEF FOR OUR ALLIES

● The 1945 Budget of the Canadian Red Cross Society may be summarized as follows:—

(1) Prisoner of War Parcels.. Repayable by Great Britain, Australia	$20,020,000
	15,000,000
	5,020,000
(2) Allied Relief	8,000,000
(3) Blood Donor Service	1,000,000
(4) Hospital Supplies, comforts for Armed Forces and civilians, peace and contingencies including St. John Ambulance Association	5,830,000
(5) Peace Time requirements including Red Cross lodges at military hospitals in Canada	1,750,000
Administration Canada and Overseas	600,000
Campaign & Publicity	400,000
Funds available and other income	$22,600,000 12,600,000
1945 Campaign	$10,000,000

The Canadian United Allied Relief Fund and Canadian Red Cross Society are collaborating to send additional aid to Allied Red Cross Societies, for distribution to stricken civilians of the United Nations. This need increases as our armies advance.

PEACETIME REQUIREMENTS

Aid for disabled war veterans, including Lodges at our Military Hospitals: Curative Hospitals in frontier districts: Nutrition Service: Home Nursing, First Aid—all these and other services must continue and expand.

SUPPLIES FOR ARMED FORCES

The very lives of our men in the armed services often depend on medical supplies and field comforts shipped by the Red Cross. 50,000,000 supplied and comforts have been sent. Millions more are needed urgently.

KEEP MERCY ON THE MARCH

War is bitter and cruel with its attendant casualties. Canadian Red Cross will be at the side of our fighting men on battlefield, in hospitals, in enemy prison camps during the most critical moments—what it can do for them THEN will depend on what Canadian citizens do NOW.

This, if ever, is the time for the most generous outpouring of our hearts and our resources.

Hitler's Supermen In Cologne Proved Yellow, Deserted People

By LOUIS F. LOCHNER

Cologne, March 5.—(AP)—Hitler's supermen in Cologne proved yellow as deserted their people last February, three days before the American forces entered the bombwrecked city.

Hitlerdom's administrative apparatus for Germany's fourth largest city could not take the saturation bombing of Friday, March 1, the supermen began scurrying for the interior of Germany on that day, and the last left on the afternoon of the 2nd.

It is difficult to check with certainty upon a story like this one, but the following facts seem to be true:

Various citizens with whom I have talked said there was one real mass exodus after last Friday's heavy air attack. Three bridges having been destroyed and two others damaged, thousands of grey-uniformed Cologners used a bridge of limited capacity which spanned the Rhine near New Market Place.

Heavy vehicles were forbidden specifically, but the Nazi hierarchy ordered trucks, presumably bearing documents, over the span. Suddenly the bridge snapped and sank into the river. Just how many fugitive civilians were killed probably never will be known.

(This apparently was the Hohenzollern bridge, the Hohenzollern bridge is farther north.)

It is difficult to check with certainty upon a story like this one, but the following facts seem to be true:

A crowd had to jump fast to avoid injury as the unexpected incident occurred outside the prison. The woman, Mrs. Elsie Van Der Elst who long has been an opponent of capital punishment, repeatedly cried:

"You let the girl off, but you hang the man. It's a damned shame!"

She referred to the reprieve granted Hulten's co-defendant, Miss Elisabeth Marina Jones, 18-year-old British strip-tease dancer. Home Secretary Morrison recommended to the King Tuesday that her sentence be commuted to life imprisonment.

Hulten, whose home was in Cambridge, Mass., and the girl were convicted at Old Bailey of charges of killing George Edward Heath, nicknamed the "Man with the cleft chin," last Oct. 6.

Hulten, sentenced to death Dec. 23, was the first American soldier to receive such a sentence at the hands of British authorities in wartime.

Hanging Witnessed

He was hanged at 9:10 a.m. in the presence of a handful of British prison officials and two American officers.

After being refused admission to the prison, Mrs. Van Der Elst boarded an idle garbage truck and, with the driver, tried to beat though the police guards at the gate. The police wheeled another truck in its path. They dragged both the woman and the driver out and took them away.

Earlier the police had sought to persuade her to leave the prison area, but she shouted "Don't touch me."

Members of the crowd then joined in hooting protests against Mr. Morrison's decision to reprieve the dancer and let Hulten die. By 9 a.m. the crowd was more than 200, most of them women, and its temper had become hostile.

Mrs. Van Der Elst, wealthy widow of a Belgian Army Captain, once, testified in her activities for the abolition of capital punishment, said:

"I have suffered several times and I have been outside every prison in England."

Morrison Makes Ruling

Mr. Morrison had ruled there were insufficient grounds for interference with Hulten's sentence.

Mrs. Jones admitted in court that she had yearned for the excitement of a "gun molly" life.

So far as could be learned, Hulten died without knowing Miss Jones had received a reprieve.

The case had caused wide stir in Britain, where the justice of the death sentence and the reprieve granted Miss Jones were debated.

If British precedent is followed the King will follow Mr. Morrison's recommendation for edmmutation of Mrs. Jones' death sentence. Under the usual procedure, this would probably mean her parole in about 15 years.

Mother Still Proud of Son.

Boston, March 5 (AP)—Mrs. Signe Hulten broke into uncontrollable sobs today when informed by The Associated Press that her son had died on London gallows for the robbery slaying of a cab driver.

Words failed her completely and she could only murmur "yes, yes," as the news was brought to her.

Both she and the Cambridge, Mass., paratrooper's wife were under a doctor's care as they waited the long night hours away.

Earlier Mrs. Hulten characterized her son as "a saint", compared to those who have condemned him.

"I am still proud of my son," she told a reporter last night.

"Let them remember it when the real hour of justice will strike," she added.

Yesterday was the 20th birthday of the paratrooper's wife and she and her daughter, June, 21 months, were ill.

Nevertheless Rita Hulten sent a cablegram to the London Daily Mirror to be delivered to her husband before the execution.

"Keep up your hope and courage, darling," she cabled. "Trust in God that this will come out all right. I love you and am with you hoping for the best."

U.S. Paratrooper, Karl G. Hulten Hanged for Crime

London, March 5 — (CP)—Karl Gustav Hulten, 22-year-old United States Paratrooper, died on Pentonville prison gallows today while a middle-aged woman, protesting his execution for the bodyslaying of a London taxi driver, was trying to crash the courtyard gates however, for nowhere in Cologne is there an organized German authority to be found.

The Nazi police also deserted—particularly the dread Gestapo. But that aspect is told by Cologners with glee. They declare that Rhinelanders never were as nazified as the rest of Germany.

Ironically, on every street corner are placards with the words: "Unbeugsam, unvicinbar, wir are eure of victory in the end."

Dents Exploited In Last-Stand Line on Iwo Jima

Guam, March 5. (AP)—Dents in the last-stand line of the Japanese on Northern Iwo, driven up to 500 yards in hand-to-hand combat Wednesday, were exploited today by three United States Marine Divisions striving for a break-through.

In a maze of pill-boxes and blockhouses, with their backs to the cliffs, the enemy still showed no sign of a collapse as he met the all-out drive with intense small arms and machine-gun fire.

The latest push opened Tuesday. The fighting all that day netted only local gains.

Every step was contested by a foe which has lost two-thirds of an original garrison of 20,000 and is battling to the last man.

A motion was passed to bring in the annual budget on Friday.

Mr. Hepburn charged the government with attempting to curtail debate on the Throne Speech.

The proposed new Securities Act received second reading and was referred to the Legal Bills Committee for second reading.

Nine bills were given first reading.

TODAY: Debate on the Throne Speech resumes.

Little Benny's Note Book

Cousin Oscar is still living in our guest room in his corporal's uniform the last thing I heard this morning on my way out being him still snoring up there, and tonight after supper Oscar was practicing rolling a cigarette with one hand, doing it almost perfect, and ma said, My Oscar, you're certainly clever with your hands

You dont know anything yet, Cousin Oscar said I can show you some card tricks that'll make you think you're seeing. Somebody is a Great Magician, and I can handle a billiard cue like nobody's business I can make those billiard balls talk, he said, and ma said, Goody now, I should think you'd be very handy around a house.

By golliss that's an idea, pop said. It's amazing the number of little things that go wrong around a house, and they all added up to a big expense if there's no handy man around. Now there's no reason why Oscar cant do a little handy job or 2 around the house every day just to amuse himself. How about that, Oscar? he said.

Well, Cousin Oscar said, and me said, Why I think that will be a perfectly wonderful way for Oscar to practice his cleverness. He can start with that job of repairing and painting the screens that you started and abandoned, William, and there are faucets all over the house that need attention, she said.

We'll think up new little jobs every day, they'll be practically endless, yes sir, she said, by golly I think you're a great genius, Oscar, he said, and Cousin Oscar said, I'd be glad to, but I dont want to have anything I cant finish. I mean I hate thinking seriously of putting off any day now. I think I'll go record to Pearl and shoot a little billiards, I'm feeling a little nervous sometimes, he said.

And he could well not, and ma said, Goodness, William, I almost seem to see a ray of hope, let's keep our fingers crossed, and pop said, Let's knock on wood too.

Which they both did.

CHAPTER 11

"Yes; the judge said so today."

"I appreciate it's a terrible shock," Kelly said thoughtfully, looking up through wreathing smoke to take a long drink that got the details. An unknown father is so much less objectionable than one you can identify offer dreadful circumstances. But Cherry, as it is, thinks things discount as they once did."

He paused, then went on: "You're better off than I am; you're twenty and I'm thirty-one. You've got all the world before you, and I'm so-damned in love with a married woman that I don't know what to do with myself. I've been painting like the devil all day," Kelly went on moodily, "but I'll scrape it all off tomorrow. It's rotten! I think I'm going to shut up this place and travel—I'll leave you the key; you can come over and use it any time you like, if I go."

He glanced at his watch. "It's ten-ten. I'm going to run you home."

They went out into the darkness to the car, and Kelly drove moodily and what we see from the bridge will probably keep us indoors all night. Now I'll tell you, Cherry," he went on, turning down the hill, "that's what I'd like to marry, some day: You'll have bad moments over this thing, no question about it. But whenever you get down, say to yourself, 'It's my business to be giving, not taking; I'm the mother type, mothering all mankind,' and it'll pull you up.

"It does back me up; it bucks me up just to say it," she admitted gratefully. "It seems to—to open doors for me. Whenever I think I haven't anything to give, I remember that, and give something to somebody. But Kelly," she went on a little shyly, "wouldn't that apply to you too? I mean in varying —in being in love where it makes you so unhappy."

"Yep, but I'm like taking type," he answered soberly. "Most men are, and lots of women. The other type is rare. Rare!"

"You're bad, Kelly—saying that to comfort me, Kelly!"

He stopped at the gloomy Porter mansion to get out and walk with her to the door with her.

"You'll never know what you've done for me tonight," Cherry said in the dark columns of the entrance.

"You did something for me too. I've been thinking of Stella all day. Listen," he went on in a brighter tone, "I'm a beggar. If you get too down, you telephone me and I'm going crazy any time I'll telephone you, and we'll walk it off together. There are swell walks up over the river my way. How about it?"

"I would think it the nicest thing that happened to me," she said in a low tone, her eyes shining up at him in the gloom, her flower hat in the shadows.

"It's a shadow."

"There's only one thing. If we do that I don't think I'd ever have any troubles," Cherry went on, her hand in his.

"You know what you ought to get for that!" His arm held her lightly; his lips brushed her forehead and he was gone.

"So you start back," Cherry's career best, early the next day, asked cherry as she and Amy, mounting the stairs, and into their seats fifteen minutes after luncheon had been announced.

"I start coaching," Cherry answered. "And then, if they let Stu go, I enter regular classes next September."

Her radiant, eager look went around the table and met with a response from everyone except the stern-faced old woman who sat at the head. After a little, Cherry accepted Cherry because she had no other option. Amy had grown to like Cherry; Fran liked her in her indifferent way; the judge was openly fond of her; Antonia Porter got on well with her. The elder Mrs. Marshbanks could only fall in line. The judge had said to her upon one of the first occasions of Cherry's coming to the house, "You know who she is, of course?" to which his mother had returned frigidly, "Certainly!" and had asked in return, "Does Amy know?"

"Certainly not," the judge had returned promptly, and that had closed the discussion for the time. But he had known and Cherry presently came to realize that her presence in the Marshbanks mansion was distinctly resented by the old dowager. Curiously, the effect of that attitude was to stimulate her.

"After all, I'm girl, would-be doctor on the few occasions when she came into contact with the old woman, "you're my grandmother, you know, and you can't help it and I can't help it."

Emma had gone with her kitten to her own quarters now and Cherry was to leave for Palo Alto in a few days, to take possession of a room in the house of one Mrs. Pringle, and begin summer-school work and to do a certain amount of coaching so as to be able to enter college as a regular student in the fall. On this particular day she was going down in the limousine with Fran who had a call or two to make in Atherton and Menlo Park, and who would let Cherry up for the return trip after. Cherry had introduced herself to the new landlady and inspected her quarters.

When she and Fran were in the car, Fran said presently, "Run the window down, will you, Cherry? It's warm."

"Wouldn't you rather have the side window down?"

"No, I want to speak to Roundy," Fran said, as to the road, "and you, please don't hear it, and when she could speak to the chauffeur Fran had decided to stop at the antique shop."

The young Parisian did not turn his head. But he nodded slightly.

"No, wait a minute, I think we'll do that after we leave Miss Rawlings," Fran said the same time her almost imperceptible nod indicated that she quite within hearing. Fran's answering faint nod and voice suggested that it didn't matter what the chauffeur heard, if indeed he could hear anything.

"I'll see you Kelly now and then, don't you?" Fran asked.

"Now and then."

"Lately?"

"The day we closed up Mrs. Porter's house we had a date for yesterday—I saw him then," Cherry said, her heart beating violently as the Samaritan visit. "We walked a while in the woods."

"You like him a lot, don't you?" the soft, hoarse voice with its hidden note of laughter and tears asked simply.

Cherry felt the blood in her face. "I—guess so," she admitted, swallowing.

"Do—do!" Fran said—absently. "I'm sorry about Kelly! I was very fond of him when I started out," she presently went on, "and I told him myself that I didn't love him—as the Samaritan visit. "We walked a while in the woods."

"You like him a lot, don't you?" the soft, hoarse voice with its hidden note of laughter and tears asked simply.

Cherry felt the blood in her face. "I—guess so," she admitted, swallowing.

"Do—do!" Fran said—absently. "I'm sorry about Kelly! I was very fond of him when I started out," she presently went on, "and I told him myself that I didn't love him—as I might love some man some day, as he's twenty-two years older than I am. But I do know, I—"

"But that's all the more reason," Fran said, after a pause. "Why I should play fair with Kelly, Cherry, I wonder if you will do something for me."

"Tell me!"

"Well, I'm—I'm not very well," Fran said, with a sudden change of tone, "and I'm going to ask you to do something for me."

"Of course!"

"And for that reason," Fran pursued, "perhaps I'm a little less strong than I might be about—about it. I won't say flirting, I hate the word! But about friendships with men, liking men, I can't help it, Cherry, I—I—" And to Cherry's astonishment the dark eyes so near her own were suddenly misting. "I've made such a mess of my life so far," Fran said, "that I'm going to play the game now."

"So if you can," Fran concluded, as Cherry continued to watch her in silent fascination, "put that to Kelly. He likes you. He thinks you're interesting. I'm not; yes, nowadays I don't see him at all. I promised Ted I'd not see him unless it was unavoidable, and it is unavoidable. That day you were with me—the day at Saratoga—the day it rained, was the—no, that wasn't the last time," Fran interrupted herself to say honestly, "but at least I don't know when I'll see him again, and if you could rather put it to him that's it's from a—a friend, that I'm not seeing him, hope you don't think I have a right to say so, do you?" she asked, with a careless, charming smile in Cherry's direction.

"Fran, you have!" Cherry was ashamed of her own suspicions of Kelly.

Fran said nothing more, and Cherry was quiet too, looking out of the car window at the countryside that was growing richer and more beautiful every mile.

"This is your place; it looks comfortable enough," Fran said as the car stopped. "Ask Roundy to get you the station in Atherton, will you, and we'll find out then where the Rasmussen place is. And we'll be back for you so far."

Cherry delightfully thrilled, descended at a green lodge not too well trimmed, a stretch of lawn in need of cutting and a wide, square wooden house narrowly balconied with most of its many windows closed to the street spring. Mrs. Pringle, large and untidy, took her up to her room, which was large and pleasant, and somewhat bare in effect after the luxurious perfection of the Marshbanks home. But Cherry loved it at sight. It was her own, and when she took possession of it a day or two later she would be, for the first time in her life, free to do as she liked, spending her leisure and her allowance as she liked.

When she expressed herself as enchanted with it, they went downstairs and looked into a dining room with one large table covered with oil cloth, set in already set for dinner. At this point a tall boy dashed in, and Mrs. Pringle had to find a blue paper, shouted furiously that he had a "four o'clock," and was forcefully arrested by his mother's big hand to be introduced to Miss Rawlings, who on Saturday was coming down to stay.

"Hello, Miss Rawlings," said George Pringle, all but breaking the bones of Cherry's right hand. "I'm late, and it's Saturday. I'll be flunked out next week and then I'll be home."

He thundered upstairs, thundered down again, was gone and a pretty girl of perhaps twenty entered in the kitchen eating a slice of bread, with peanut butter lavishly plastered over it, and raised her pretty mouth.

"Mother, I didn't know. Miss Rawlings was here! How do you do? Are you hungry? What could I offer you?"

"How were your ex-sat' asked the mother.

"Repulsive," said Rebecca Pringle calmly. Cherry laughed and Rebecca smiled at Cherry and they immediately liked each other; was the all stuff he'd never dreamed of mentioning to me before!" said Rebecca, "But I think hi sis some fun. You've been up to school?" she asked the visitor. "You haven't? Then I'll tell you what we'll do; we'll take a run up there now, and we'll show you 'round—"

"Oh, you're tired! I wouldn't think—"

"I'm love it," Rebecca, whose manner was goddesslike in its unconscious serenities, said pleasantly. She and Cherry went out to a battered open two-seater at the gate and were immediately engulfed in a town full of small cars from which students dangled hilariously.

The college buildings, were set in long cloisters and flower-edged lawns. When they stopped at the co-operative store, boys swarmed about the car and Rebecca introduced them, and Cherry could talk of classes she wanted to visit and of coaching in a group that was absorbed in the same interests. They were all keen, too; they were in theatricals; they were reading a play; next Thursday night, and she must come.

Altogether, when they went back to the car they were all on the steps in real small-town fashion, greeting people who were bringing hawthorne trees or cutting flowers, and Cherry, on occasion, car flashing by, Cherry was quite intoxicated with happiness and satisfaction. She felt like one of all the changing phases of her life this spring had brought her the most contentment.

She had telephoned Kelly only once in her life; she thought she might telephone him legitimately tonight, making an appointment to tell him of her good fortune, and perhaps think something of what Fran had said. Also, she might not see him again for her own life, as an even hour's drive from the city, and Tuposts was another half-hour's trip across the bay. But although she put in the call immediately upon reaching home and waited for it until ten o'clock, the number was reported as not answering, and somewhat chilled, she abandoned the idea.

However, two weeks later when Easter vacations were over and she was consciously counting days, and studying dutifully with a coach who had been recommended, she had a telegram from him that sent her spirits to the skies.

"Coming to town tomorrow from Carmel Sunday morning. Can I pick you up for picnic at Tupcote at about ten? Love, Kelly," read the message. Cherry could not answer it but she was at the station when he stopped the battered old car at the gate, and when she settled herself beside him she would not have changed places with any woman in the world.

"Goody!" she said.

"Why goody?"

"Because you're alone."

"Who'd you think I was bringing?"

"No one special. But it's more fun to be alone."

"I've been a little too much distracted about you, Cherry, even for the Rasmussen wedding, and then went on to Carmel and painted cypresses and rocks."

"When—She felt a prick of sick premonition. "When was the Rasmussen wedding?" she said.

"Two weeks ago—two weeks ago Wednesday. Alice Rasmussen is a client friend I have, you know. She's a peach, if you mean that affair; no fuss. Her brother must be in Europe, I guess. I heard about that, and Stan wanted me for his best man.So I went there a couple of days—I was bluer than indigo and then went on down to Carmel."

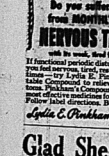
Glad She Took Friend's Advice to Try Syntona

This Well-Known Woman Had Suffered More Than a Year With Indigestion, Acidity, Gas and Heartburn. Tells of Good Results.



MRS. E. SMITH

"A few weeks ago I was miserable with stomach disorders and I am glad to tell publicly of the wonderful results I've had, because it may be helpful to others, said Mrs. E. Smith, 84 Gibson Avenue, Hamilton, Ontario, in a recent statement.

"My stomach was weak and often bothered me. I had so much indigestion, acidity, gas, heartburn and pains that I felt sick and miserable. I had dizzy spells and headaches and could not sleep well. I suffered this way for more than a year. I worried a lot about it, too, as I felt so run down and tired. I could not go out with things that I wanted to and my friends would call and ask how I was but I couldn't seem to get any better. I felt that I was going down hill and didn't know what to do.

"But thanks to the interest of my friend I was led to try Syntona and I soon began to take my first bottle. I can now say I am getting along fine. I am not troubled with indigestion, acidity, gas or heartburn and I sleep fine. I have gained in weight and my food doesn't agree with me. I feel well and am free from dizzy spells and headaches. I also sleep better and get up refreshed, feeling strong and well. I am glad to be recommending to find a medicine that really does good results, and I hope that my experience will be the means of helping many others who may suffer as I did."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN. THE DRUGGIST. Over 1,000,000 bottles of pure herbal compound can help you, too.

Drew Government Receives Support on Two Divisions Forced by the Liberal Group

Vote, However, Did Little To Ease Precarious Position of Government

Toronto, March 8. (CP) — The aggressive Liberal group in the Ontario Legislature failed in another effective attempts to defeat the Progressive Conservative Government yesterday, the administrative drawing C.C.F. support on a technical issue to vote the first divisions of the session, 60-36 and 59-31.

The vote results, however, did little to ease the precarious position of the government, which still faces a possible decisive test on a C.C.F. Throne Speech amendment which amounts to a lack of confidence resolution in addition to a Liberal sub-amendment.

Liberal House Leader, Mitchell Hepburn moved his divisions after following a motion by Provincial Secretary Leslie Blackwell to bring down the budget Friday, Mr. Hepburn charging the move was "an attempt to throttle" debate on the Throne Speech before provided. Write Box 230, Belleville. M7-2t make it possible for the legitimate broker to continue business "without being subject to the whim of political expediency" and fully protect the public."

Hon. Mr. Blackwell stated that in addition to providing judicial machinery, the act should also make some provision for police action against fraudulent securities brokers.

"I have an uneasy feeling that in a few years, there will be many Ontario will be overrun by a type of salesman who will never catch up with in the courts. Thousands of people will be induced to hand over their savings and variety bonds in return for my mythical profits.

"We can't adequately deal with them by labelling legislation or prosecution," said Mr. Jolliffe. "A police force now kind is hard to secure, but as it is necessary to have police forces to deal with fraud, I also fail to be impressed by the argument that a reasonable proportion of the capital raised through securities went into development work."

New Bills Presented.

Among the seven first reading was one brought in by William Dennison (CCF-Toronto St. Davd), providing for payment of a provincial fuel commissioner to assure "fair distribution" of fuel supply and to control fuel wholesale. Two bills were introduced by Acting Agriculture Minister George Doucett.

One would amend the Livestock Protection Act by permitting municipalities to buy sheep or other stock killed by wild animals; the second would empower the agriculture minister to designate area for raising queen bees, to register incoming bees with the apiarist at the border to control business "without being subject to the whim of political expediency" and fully protect the public."

Much to be Done

With attention now focussing on the period following victory in Europe, it is well to review the work still to be done by Victory Bonds. It includes:

—fighting the war in the Pacific
—financing rehabilitation
—fighting inflation

It is of utmost importance to the success of these vital tasks that Canadians buy more Victory Bonds and retain those already purchased. There is no better investment than Dominion of Canada Bonds.

EARLY ROBIN SEEN

Although the official date for the beginning of the season is still a few weeks away, the early southern sign that Spring is just around the corner was seen in the city gardens yesterday. Mrs. Harry Ashley, 116 Catherine Street, both saw and heard a robin while on his way to school. The young boy heard the robin and looking to see him perched in a tree.

And he is just possible that there is more than one robin now from the South as another of the species was seen in Dufferin Park district the same morning.

London Lunch Cafe Entered, $150 Stolen

Trenton, March 7—The London Lunch, owned and operated by George Xenos, was entered during the early hours of Tuesday morning and about $150 in cash and a quantity of cigarettes taken.

Entrance was made through the skylight, by removing a pane of glass.

Hydro Truck Damaged.

Considerable damage was done to a three-quarter ton Chevrolet panel truck owned by the Hydro Electric Co., of Belleville about 1.30 on Tuesday morning about a mile north of the C.N.R. subway on Front Street.

The truck was driven by Edward Hogle of Belleville, who attempted to make a right turn. The side of the road was covered with soft snow and as the truck moved along on the side of the road it dug deep into the soft shoulder for a considerable distance. Turning sharply to bring the truck back to position it suddenly struck a dry spot and turned completely over on its side. Considerable damage was done to the left side of the truck but neither the driver nor his helper, C. A. Kent of Belleville, were injured.

Attendance Lower.

Attendance at Red Cross on Tuesday was considerably lower than for the past few weeks and it is hoped this is just a temporary condition as there is much work to be done both in sewing and knitting and helpers are still urgently needed.

A donation of, home-made soup supplied by Mrs. O. J. Alpas was raffled and winners were Mrs. Ed. Parker and Mrs. M. Parker, $1.2s being realized.

Another donation of two very fine flannelette nighties was made by Mrs. Bruce Robertson, 16 Charles Street South.

22 Cases Heard.

Twenty-two cases came before Magistrate T. Y. Wills in Trenton, Police Court on Tuesday afternoon with County Crown Attorney Lieut.-Col. R. G. Donnan, K.C., prosecuting. Nine paid the usual $10 and costs for being intoxicated and one minor paid $10 and costs for purchasing liquor while under age.

John Bary charged with leaving the scene of an accident and careless driving, having been involved in an accident on Saturday night which resulted in injury to Allen Heaton, had his case enlarged for one week, as his solicitor was out of town.

Russel Ryckman, was fined $25 and costs for leaving the scene of the accident. He hit a car owned by Harry Flindall of Brighton, last Saturday afternoon and failed to remain at the scene of the accident.

Given Suspended Sentence.

Russel Moon was given a suspended sentence of one year when he appeared on a charge of wearing an officer's uniform without authority. Sentence was suspended because of the condition of Moon's health.

George LaBrash, charged with keeping liquor for sale and careless driving, asked for a week's enlargement.

William Stacey charged with theft of coal was given six month's suspended sentence and ordered to pay $3.50 costs.

Kenneth Grange, charged with wife assault, was given one year's suspended sentence and ordered to pay $25 costs.

Harold M. Hoard on a charge of assault, case enlarged for one month.

Cecil Mountenay charged with being intoxicated while in charge of a car; case enlarged for one week.

Whitehall Notebook

BY JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, March 8. (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill addressed the National Conservative conference here March 15, last day of the two-day meeting of some 2,000 delegates, and political experts may scan Britain some hint as to the likely date for the general election.

A vote has been promised for this year and most guessers have been predicting late autumn. But Mr. Churchill, fresh from his talks with President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin, presumably has a good idea when the war can be expected to end and on the basis of the information might give workers of the party he leads an idea of the urgency of party organization.

Even without specific information, however, the Conservative, Labor and Liberal parties already are hard at work and choosing of candidates is going ahead apace.

Private enterprise and individual freedom will be the main planks in the Conservative platform and Ralph Assheton party chairman and member of parliament for Rusheliffe, has tackled the issue in recent speeches.

That the party is behind him on this line—which automatically sets up the Labor party as the expected major opposition despite Liberal claims of a great resurgence of support—is shown by views which will be put before the March 14-15 conference.

Individual freedom and enterprise are the subjects of eight resolutions, and a call will be made for Progressive relaxation of wartime controls. One states that increased production "and maintenance of a high living standard can best be secured by individual effort, rather than by bureaucratic control and nationalization of production and distribution."

Seven other main points are brought up in resolutions for the conventioneers:

1. Foreign policy—the government's policy is supported and "effective steps" are demanded to prevent future German aggression, including prohibition of air-plane manufacture in Germany.

2. British Commonwealth—suggestion is made that the Dominions be invited to co-operate in the task of securing the fullest possible development for the colonies; and an immediate five-year plan for defence, currency, commerce, communications and general developments is urged.

3. Export policy—a vigorous program should be launched with a view of encouragement and stimulation of export trade.

4. Labor compulsion—a resolution on the location of industry after the war opposes any compulsory transference of workers.

5. Housing—resolutions will urge encouragement for the private building industry, existing facilities for more people to buy their own homes.

Preference for ex-servicemen in employment and housing will be proposed, the importance of a long-term policy for agriculture will be another topic and there will be debate on such problems as fair wages, National Health, Insurance and Social Security generally.

Russians Battle Second Time Into Kuestrin Say Huns

Enemy Admits Reds Reach Stettin's Outer Defence Zone

By RICHARD KASISCHKE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, 9 (AP) — The troops of Marshal Gregory Zhukov in their drive toward Berlin have fought into Kuestrin a second time, the Germans reported today, and a bitter battle is raging in the ancient streets of the Oder River fortress.

Russian tanks and infantry attacked 17 miles northward, into the northwestern part of the city — which can relax: their master, Peter Rist, 16, won't be bringing home the lion cub he purchased from the Central Park Zoo for $25.

It's unlikely any other youngsters will either, for New York's acting comptroller, Alvin E. Rykroft, recommended yesterday that the city sell furry game park department require parents to consent before selling lion cubs to children.

Peter, who got his $25 back, said he regretted had intended to kill the lion, which was sickly, when he bought it, but he couldn't see it would recover. It did before he could remove it, and "as soon as they saw he was going to be all right at the Zoo they started to try to get him away from me," he complained.

Consolation prize, offered by Mr. Sylvester: that the lion be named Peter.

Lid of Secrecy on Effects of Allied Raids Lifted by Advance to Rhine

By WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press War Correspondent

Cologne, March 9 AP) — Allied advance to the Rhine has lifted the lid of German censorship on the effects of Allied air raids, permitting ground observers to assess for the first time the full extent of the damage inflicted.

A check of Cologne, Rhine industrial capital; Krefeld, textile and silk city; Duisburg, Oberhausen, Essen, one of the smaller Rhine industrial cities, and the Rhine river port of Neuss, opposite Duesseldorf, shows that Allied strategic bombing is not claims gleaned from photographs — such as the estimate that Cologne was 60 to 80 per cent destroyed — are conservative.

Precision bombings of cities will not break German civilian morale but will so disrupt life in a city and its discourage workers that factories cannot operate, with even a fraction of efficiency.

Allied big incendiary raids cause considerable fires in the centre cities than high explosives.

That bombing of railroad yards has not yielded the results expected, largely because of the extremely efficient German repair system.

That bombing of roads has been virtually useless in trying to stop traffic in a country like Germany where there are hundreds of decent good roads. Only in rare cases of such bottlenecks as the Rhine bridges has the bombing of bridges been productive.

1,000-BOMBER FLEET HITS KASSEL FOR SECOND TIME

Submarine Building Yards in Hamburg And Objectives in Berlin Pounded

London, March 9 —(CP)— The German industrial city of Kassel, heavily bombed by the R.A.F. last night, was attacked again today by the main force of a 1,000-bomber fleet of the U.S. 8th Air Force.

In night raids British bombers also hit submarine building yards in Hamburg and unspecified objectives in Berlin.

Canadian Halifax bombers joined in the attack on Hamburg and FO. Martin of Metcalfe, Ont., a gunner in the Alouette Squadron, said: "I can see the big explosions come up from the target."

Kassel, attacked about 115 miles east of Cologne and a major target in the night raiders, was at least 60 per cent destroyed by previous bombings. Some of the city's tightly packed industry, including important aircraft and locomotive works—have been dispersed and scattered, and it was these the R.A.F. attacked.

At Hamburg the main objective was the Blohm and Voss shipyards, where new-type U-boats are being assembled.

Berlin was again the target of night raiders, which dumped two-ton block-busters on the German capital for the 17th consecutive night.

Encounter No Flak.

Yesterday for the first time American heavy bombers of the 8th Air Force encountered no virtual flak as they attacking 12 different rail and road targets in the Rhine valley.

Some of a great armada of 1,350 bombers and 350 fighters one bombing, was lost—an all-time low for operations of such magnitude.

The German radio indicated Allied fighters and fighter-bombers from advanced bases on the Continent were shelling Zambrugge, strength over the front today after two days of comparative inactivity because of weather.

Hanover, Hagen Hit.

The R.A.F.—which also attacked Hanover and Hagen during the night—kept up its pressure on communications from all night operations. One was against Munster.

Berlin radio said Allied bombers had been bombarding Zambrugge, on the southwest tip of Mindanao, since early Thursday in what "is believed to be a prelude to a landing attempt." Zamboanga has good air bases.

Mindanao, second largest island in the Philippines, has been bombed heavily by American planes for months. Today's Allied communique told of a 139-ton bombing of Zamboanga's barracks and supply areas.

It reported the U. S. 6th Army's action on Luzon advanced 12 miles up the Agno river, to capture Aringay, one west of Baguio.

Within Five Miles

An American force was last reported within five miles of Baguio on the south.

On the south coast of Luzon the 11th Airborne Division, the 158th Regiment captured the town of Nasugbu, 45 miles southwest of Manila.

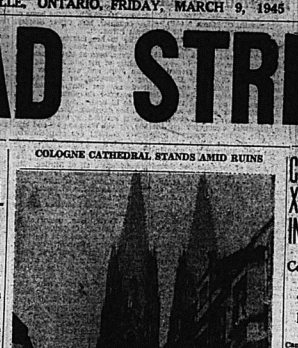
Yesterday the centre of the city and around the port of the devastation of the suburbs.

Germans in the suburbs estimate that raids have killed or injured 70,000 persons, and that 100,000 have been rendered homeless.

Many factory has been hit once or twice. Some are out of commission permanently. None has been operating since last fall.

Cologne has such vital war production plants as the Humbaldt Deutz motor works, which built aircraft engines, and tank motors and employed 22,000. This plant has been destroyed, the Germans say the same destruction is happening to other cities.

The damage suffered by Cologne was far greater than Stalingrad, observers who saw both have said.



COLOGNE CATHEDRAL STANDS AMID RUINS

Standing practically undamaged amid the battered ruins of Cologne, Germany's third largest city, is the famous Cologne cathedral, dating back to the 13th century. Its 515-foot high twin spires towers over 2,000 acres of utter devastation.

AMERICANS LAND KING REAFFIRMS ON MINDANOA IS. OPPOSITION TO JAPANESE REPORT EXTENDING HOUSE

Also Report U. S. Warships Shelling Zamboanga on South Tip of Island

Manila, March 9 — (AP) — An unconfirmed Tokyo broadcast, heard in London today, said American units have landed on Mindanao, second largest of the Philippines. An earlier report by Tokyo said United States warships were shelling Zamboanga, on the southwestern tip of Mindanao, but "no landings had been made up to Thursday night."

American forces on Luzon were closing in on Baguio, summer capital of the Commonwealth, and widening their holdings on the south coast.

Tokyo radio said warships had

Ottawa, March 9 — (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King at a press conference yesterday declared that Members of the Senate and opposition Members of the Commons will be included in the Canadian delegation to the San Francisco Conference, announced several days ago, changes and re-affirmed his opposition to any extension of the life of Parliament.

CANADIANS TAKE XANTEN, ALPON IN WEST BULGE

Compress Bulge Into A Triangle of Less Than Twenty Square Miles

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the 1st Canadian Army in Germany, March 9 (CP Cable) — The key town of Xanten, seven miles east of Wesel, and nearby Alpon, 5 1-2 miles southwest of Wesel, have fallen and the 1st Canadian armies have compressed the Wesel bulge into a triangle of 20 square miles.

But across the Rhine for five miles east and south of Wesel the Germans have massed the greatest concentration of artillery ever to face Canadian army in the whole long armed effort to prevent a crossing in that area.

Evidently they fear such an attempt.

If a bridgehead were established in this area, the Allies would have clearly been caught off guard.

On the north, the 1st Canadian Army finally captured Xanten, bitterly-contested key town guarding the Wesel ferry crossing, after seven miles farther east. Alpon, 5½ miles southwest of Wesel also fell and the Wesel bulge — where a reported 20,000 Germans held the last important German bridgehead between Cologne and the Netherlands border — was hammered into a 20 square-mile triangle.

Just across the Rhine from Gen. Crerar's troops, the Germans have massed the greatest artillery concentration ever to face the Canadian Army, Canadian Press war correspondent Ross Munro reported.

Great stores of military loot were captured in the bridgehead across the Rhine.

Whether the United States First Army had been able to get tanks across the river was anyone's guess. Neither supreme headquarters nor censored front dispatches disclosed any detail on the buildup within the Remagen area.

Protective Air Cover

Some 30 fighter bombers flew a protective cover over the bridgehead through the morning while medium and light bombers attacked railroad keypoints through which the Germans would have to move troops for counter-attack against the foothold.

Troops of the U. S. 1st Army's breach of Rhine defences had come at Remagen — famous half-way between Bonn and Coblenz — in the Allied sad today.

At Remagen, the Americans succeeded in crossing to the eastern bank of the Rhine, before relatively weak U. S. A. forces could penetrate on the northern approaches of the Rhine. Their advance guard of the Rhine, halted by German bolt positions before the town of Remagen.

Line is three miles east of Remagen, on the Cologne-Coblenz autobahn or Reich highway stronghold of Vergato, 17½ miles northwest of Bologna, have occupied Caviano, Allied Headquarters announced today.

In the push, although slowed somewhat by the enemy in the last 24 hours, Allied troops approach yet to Vergato, which has held out against Allied attacks for four months.

The Germans, meanwhile, stepped up their counter-attacks against the U. S. 10th Mountain Division's new bridgehead over the Reno river, Bologna-Pistoia highway, as well as the Allied advance farther west in the Serghio valley.

Allies Only Mile From Objective

Rome, March 9 —(AP) Allied 5th Army troops are only a mile from the Canadian army's Rhine bridgehead, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Other U. S. 5th Army divisions teamed with the U. S. 3rd Army in rapidly wiping out a great Ritz

Man is Nailed to Ten-Foot Cross And Mass of Thorns Put on Head

Chicago, March 9 — (AP) — A man identified as Fred Walcher, about 40, was found by police today at 12 a.m. in a 10-foot cross, with 10-penny spikes through his hands, his feet bound with rope and a crudely fashioned mass of thorny bushes on his head.

The police, responding to a report of an unconscious man, found the man unconscious on the heavy cross, made of two-by-six timbers, which was fastened to part of an elevated railway pillar.

The victim, about five feet, 10 inches and husky, was taken to hospital but doctors did not immediately remove the nails from his hands.

Police Capt. Patrick O'Connell said Walcher was not wearing a coat or hat and his clothing was not disarranged.

Regaining consciousness several hours later, Walcher told Capt. O'Connell that he was summoned from his basement apartment by a knock on the door and asked to assist at an automobile accident. It was when he arrives at the scene of the accident that the alleged accident a man threatened him with a gun and forced him to lie down on the cross.

Capt. O'Connell said police were working on the theory that Walcher might have been the victim of a religious cult or fanatic and in this connection he cited a paper found in the victim's pocket which read: "This good man is chosen (He) sacrificed for the children, world inspiration for world peace. Let's all pray (He) for the good of all mankind (She) for the unborn world and troilers."

In addition a pamphlet titled: "Post-war employment plan for Christian men to work with world order" was found in the pocket. O'Connell characterized this as a "religious dissertation on social ethics."

The captain said he was unsatisfied with Walcher's answers to early questioning.

Dr. Paul San Filippi, attending physician, said Walcher's condition was satisfactory. There were 3 wounds, one in each palm, and a slight laceration of the left breast, the doctor said.

Thousands of Men Drive Over Bridge Captured Intact

Foothold Five Miles Deep And More Than That Wide

Paris, March 9 —(CP)— A United States bridgehead across the Rhine — first war-won crossing of Germany's historic water barrier since the days of Napoleon—today was being built up steadily somewhere south of fallen Cologne.

Continued secrecy masked the direction in which the U. S. 1st Army might next be expected to jump.

Reports originating elsewhere on the Western Front and also broadcast from Berlin said the crossing was won at Remagen, 30 miles southeast of Cologne and 277 miles southwest of Berlin. A railway bridge spans the stream at this point.

The Germans said the Americans had captured a bridge intact at Remagen. The Ludendorff span there is a double track railroad bridge capable of bearing tanks, trucks and foot troops.

Allies Mass on Location

Allied Supreme Headquarters denied the exact location of the bridgehead was a matter of military secrecy, since the enemy had clearly been caught off guard.

On the north, the 1st Canadian Army finally captured Xanten, bitterly-contested key town guarding the Wesel ferry crossing, after seven miles farther east. Alpon, 5½ miles southwest of Wesel also fell and the Wesel bulge — where a reported 20,000 Germans held the last important German bridgehead between Cologne and the Netherlands border — was hammered into a 20 square-mile triangle.

Protective Air Cover

Some 30 fighter bombers flew a protective cover over the bridgehead through the morning while medium and light bombers attacked railroad keypoints through which the Germans would have to move troops for counter-attack against the foothold.

Troops of the U. S. 1st Army's breach of Rhine defences had come at Remagen — famous half-way between Bonn and Coblenz — in the Allied sad today.

At Remagen, the Americans succeeded in crossing to the eastern bank of the Rhine, before relatively weak U. S. A. forces could penetrate on the northern approaches of the Rhine. Their advance guard of the Rhine, halted by German bolt positions before the town of Remagen.

Line is three miles east of Remagen, on the Cologne-Coblenz autobahn or Reich highway stronghold of Vergato, 17½ miles northwest of Bologna, have occupied Caviano, Allied Headquarters announced today.

In the push, although slowed somewhat by the enemy in the last 24 hours, Allied troops approach yet to Vergato, which has held out against Allied attacks for four months.

The Germans, meanwhile, stepped up their counter-attacks against the U. S. 10th Mountain Division's new bridgehead over the Reno river, Bologna-Pistoia highway, as well as the Allied advance farther west in the Serghio valley.

Explosion Claims Lives of Two Men

Hamilton, March 9 (CP) — Investigation was started today into the cause of an explosion and fire which yesterday destroyed the Canadian Aniline and Extract Company plant in central Hamilton and claimed the lives of two men, two other persons went to hospital with injuries suffered in the blast.

Firemen and police last night fought a losing battle with the flames. Supt. 47, and Thomas E. Farnan, 37, of Hamilton, Hamilton, from the smouldering ruins of the building more than eight hours after the blast. It reached the city's fire alarm debris over a wide area at 11 a.m. EDT. Fragments were found as far as the worst in an industrial plant here in years.

A mountain pocket in which perhaps 50,000 Germans are still trapped, Stockton. The jaws of the trap along the Ligurian Sea coast were only 16 miles or less between Remagen and Munster, capital town four miles from Coblenz.

Two thirds of the Coblenz plain was captured and the rest was being overrun with ease and speed.

The U. S. 1st Army proceeded with the reduction of the last half of Bonn, immediately city on the Rhine between Coblenz and Cologne.

Many troops battled also for the last fourth of Bad Godesberg, three miles up-river from Bonn — where Hitler met the late Prime Ministers Chamberlain — who was seeking "peace in our time" before Munich.

Outflank Rohr.

The Rhine crossing threatened to outflank the industry-packed Ruhr, without which Germany's war potential would be reduced from a shif to three-fourths, as they said it brought the battle of Germany to its most decisive phase in the West.

Patton's dash to the middle Rhine had northeast of Kaiserslautern cracked the Saar district and Palatinate, they said.

Briefing officers at Allied supreme headquarters explained that the "Remagen bridgehead" referred to the Rhine crossing means that the bridgehead is secured from the range of light enemy artillery fire. They explain Germans still field place is a 77-mm. gun which ranges to six miles. This would suggest that the bridgehead had been pushed at least four miles east of the Rhine and that Allied troops had gained its eastern banks, covering perhaps a minimum, at least, of four miles.

This much was known through the more than 40 shrouded hours

Russians Battle Second Time Into Kuestrin Say Huns

Enemy Admits Reds Reach Stettin's Outer Defence Zone

By RICHARD KASISCHKE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)
London, March 9. (AP) — The troops of Marshal Georgy Zhukov in their drive toward Berlin have fought into Kuestrin a second time, the Germans reported today, and a bitter battle is raging in the ancient streets of the Oder River fortress.

Russian tanks and infantry attacked 17 miles from the northwestern part of the city — which the Germans said yesterday had been by-passed on the north and south by the Russians who had driven across the Oder to within 28 miles of Berlin—but were finally driven back to the bridges, a German broadcast claimed.

Kuestrin, 36 miles east of Berlin, was first reported penetrated about a month ago, and since the announcement of Zhukov's drive from Warsaw was spent.

The Russians, however, had not yet communicated officially the taking of the Oder—an announcement which would mean that the Allies in the east as well as in the west have joined battle with the enemy in the heart of Germany.

For Assault on Stettin.

To the north Russians pushed forward from an area eight miles southeast of Pomeranian port of Berlin's Baltic port of Stettin and rushed up base and launching position for an assault across the Damm-sche Neck, which fronts Stettin on the east.

Moscow dispatches said a crossing, which would outflank Stettin on the south, and threaten a northern sweep around the city might already have been made by the time the assault was announced. Berlin said Russians had crossed the Oder between the lake and Stettin Bay.

Soviet bombers loosed a torrent of bombers and fighters on German troops falling back into Stettin and destroyed an important bridge near Altdamm, the Stettin suburb on the east side of the Oder outlet.

The Germans admitted the assault had reached the port's "outer defence zone" and declared German naval forces had joined the battle along Stettin Bay.

Within 13 Miles of Berlin.

Berlin said Russian forces, surging across the "Rhine of the east" two days ago, reached the junction of the two rivers, but official Moscow kept a news blackout on developments in that area.

The Russian high command, however, announced that Zhukov's troops rolled within 12 miles of Danzig in a battle advance yesterday, and that Russians had driven to within seven miles of Gdynia, great Baltic port for Danzig, by taking Luebzin.

Marshal Konstantin K. Zzukov's northern wing advanced up to seven miles yesterday and captured 40 localities on a 30-mile front, Moscow announced, of which were unnamed, "Bez," Sirs," Rybno and Lubochin.

In the Lauenburg area, Marshal K. K. Rokossovsky's 2nd Ukraine army overcame stubborn resistance pointing up to 14 miles, driving a 10-mile wedge northward to within 12 miles of the Baltic coast at Rerr, Moscow's war bulletin said.

With the capture of Stangenwalde, the Russians were eight miles inside Danzig territory and were menacing the big rail junction of Neu Tuxew, Perhaps 200,000 Germans were trapped in the Danzig area.

Other Soviet forces further west in Pomerania, beyond toppled Bueton, were driving on Koslin and Castenburg, six miles south of the 14-by-way road junction of Schlawe, the Russian communique said.

The capture of Bueton, Moscow also put the Russians within 17 miles of Gdynia, important Nazi naval base on the Baltic.

Enemy reports said the Russians in a new attack has crossed the Gross Nogat river boundary from East Prussia and were within 15 miles southeast of Danzig.

Bay Battle Pressed For Show.

A dispatch from Stockholm said purchase 3,000 Germans and foreign slave laborers under army direction were converting bomb-battered Swinemunde, Baltic port on a vertical line in anticipation of a Soviet siege.

A neutral informant said at least 50 per cent of the street corners are now fortified with machine-guns and anti-tank guns controlling the approaches.

New York, March 9 (CP) — The pet, skunk, the 10-inch alligator, the three dogs and the white mice he had owned yesterday had been by-passed on the north and south by the Russians who had driven across the Oder to within 28 miles of Berlin—but were finally driven back to the bridges, a German broadcast claimed.

Lid of Secrecy on Effects of Allied Raids Lifted by Advance to Rhine

By WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press War Correspondent

Cologne, March 9 (AP) — The Allied advance to the Rhine has lifted the lid of secrecy from on the effects of Allied air raids, permitting ground observers to see for the first time the full extent of the damage inflicted.

A check of Cologne, Rhine industrial capital; Krefeld, textile and silk center, and Monchen Gladbach, one of the smaller Rhine industrial cities, and the Rhine river port of Neuss, opposite Dusseldorf, shows that Allied strategic air force claims gleaned from photographs and reports are the estimate that Cologne was 60 to 80 per cent destroyed, are conservative.

The 1,000 bombings of cities will not break German civilian morale by any means, but they will at least give the city and its people something with which to bargain in the event of efficiency.

That big incendiary raids cause considerable damage is more than high explosives.

4. That bombing of railroad yards has not yielded the results expected, because of the extremely efficient German repair system.

That bombing of roads has been virtually useless in trying to stop traffic in a country like Germany where there are hundreds of good roads. Only in rare cases of such bottlenecks as the Rhine bridges has the bombing of bridges been productive.

Some 70,000 to 100,000 persons were killed in Cologne, of them about 20,000 by Allied bombs, which had a pre-war population of 770,000.

Wandering about the city you wonder where they are living.

The once-gaudy, bounded by the Kaiser Wilhelm ring, is virtually no more. It is difficult to detect such devastation. But if a resident of Cologne or Wuppertal should walk up some morning and find nothing in his city but a shell and the ruins of other cities' rubbles—with no water, no lights, no gas, no Allied troops yet in the whole town—the situation would be comparable to that in Cologne.

Inside the centre of the city and around the port the effects are relentless off in the suburbs.

German factory estimates that raids have killed or injured 70,000 workers, 20,000 of them allied manpower and fall.

Every factory has been hit once or twice. Some are out of production permanently. None has been operating at more than 50 per cent.

Cologne has such vital war production plants as the Humboldt Deutz motor works, which built aeroplane and tank motors and employed 23,000. This plant was destroyed. The Germans say the same destruction is happening to other cities.

The damage suffered by Cologne was far greater than Stalingrad, observers who saw both have said. In standing practically undamaged amid the tattered ruins of Cologne, Germany's fourth largest city, is the famous Cologne cathedral, dating back to the 13th century. The cathedral's lofty 515-foot high twin spires towers over 2,000 acres of utter devastation.

1,000-BOMBER FLEET HITS KASSEL FOR SECOND TIME

Submarine Building Yards in Hamburg And Objectives in Berlin Pounded

London, March 9 —(CP)— The German industrial city of Kassel, heavily bombed by the R.A.F. last night, was attacked again today by the main force of a 1,000-bomber fleet of the U. S. 8th Air Force.

In night raids British bombers also hit submarine building yards in Hamburg and unspecified objectives in Berlin.

Canadian Halifax bombers joined in the attack on Hamburg and PO. Mortimer, a gunner in the Alouette Squadron, said he "saw two big explosions some up from the target."

Kassel, attacked about 115 miles east of Cologne and a major target for night raiders, was at least 60 per cent destroyed by previous bombings. Some of the city's rattles' plants including important aircraft and locomotive works—have been reported partly restored, and it was these the R.A.F. attacked.

At Hamburg, the main objective was the Blohm and Voss shipyards, where new-type U-boats are being constructed.

Berlin was again the target of night bombers, which dumped two-ton block-busters on the German capital for the 17th consecutive night.

Executive Ne Flak.

Yesterday for the first time American heavy bombers of the 8th Air Force attacked Berlin, and by flak as they attacking 12 different rail and road targets in the Berlin valley.

Out of a great armada of 1,350 bombers and 350 fighters one bomber was lost—an all-time low for operations of such magnitude.

The German radio indicated Allied air power spectrum bombers from advanced bases on the Continent, which covered the full strength over the front today after four days of comparative inactivity because of weather.

Hanover, Hagen Hit.

The R.A.F.—which also attacked Hanover and Hagen during the night—announced yesterday's operations of 1,000 bombers from all-night operations, including Saturday's flights.

Berlin radio said Allied bombers from Italy were striking Germany again today.

Simultaneously, the Air Force heavies smashed at already battered rail yards and two tank manufacturing plants in Berlin. Both plants had recently been repaired and put into partial production.

AMERICANS LAND KING REAFFIRMS ON MINDANOA IS. OPPOSITION TO JAPANESE REPORT EXTENDING HOUSE

Also Report U. S. Warships Shelling Zamboanga on South Tip of Island

Manila, March 9 — (AP) — An unconfirmed Tokyo broadcast reported in London today, said American units have landed on Mindanao, 2nd largest of the Philippines. An earlier report by Tokyo said United States warships were shelling Zamboanga, on the southwestern tip of Mindanao, but "no landings had been made up to Thursday night."

American forces on Leyte were closing in on Baguio, summer capital of the Commonwealth, and widening their holdings on the south coast.

Tokyo radio said warships had been bombarding Zamboanga, on the southwest tip of Mindanao, since early Thursday in what "is believed to be a prelude to a landing attempt." Zamboanga has good deep water.

Mindanao, second largest island in the Philippines, has been bombed nearly by American planes for months. Today's Allied communique told of a 139-ton bombing of Zamboanga barracks and supply areas.

It reported the U. S. 93rd Division on Luzon advanced 12 miles up the west road to capture Attagay, 6th west of Baguio.

Within Five Miles

An American force was last reported within five miles of Baguio on the south.

On the south coast of Luzon the 11th Airborne Division and the 158th Regiment captured the town of Lemery in a 13-mile sweep eastward. This increased pressure on Japanese who are being cut off from escape routes in southern Luzon. Heavy fighting continued in the Shimbiki line sector east and northeast of Manila.

In the mopup of Chips, Seabees, supporting Army, U. S. bombers sank or damaged 11 freighters, including a 10,000-ton tanker and a 5,000-ton cargo vessel.

Low-flying medium bombers bombed and strafed Halmas Island, 100 miles south of Davao, Japanese base, and sighted 25 Japanese fighters in the biggest air fight of the theatre since the Leyte campaign began.

Five enemy fighters were shot down and four others probably destroyed. Three American bombers were lost, and 12 Japanese planes patrolling Japanese-occupied Borneo were destroyed on the ground.

CANADIANS TAKE XANTEN, ALPON IN WESEL BULGE

Compress Bulge Into A Triangle of Less Than Twenty Square Miles

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the 1st Canadian Army in Germany, March 9 (CP Cable) — The key town of Xanten, seven miles west of Wesel, and nearby Alpon, 3 1-2 miles southwest of Wesel, have fallen and the 1st Canadian and 9th Armies compressed the Wesel bulge into a triangle of 20 square miles.

But across the Rhine for five miles east and north of Wesel the Germans have massed the greatest concentration of artillery ever to face the Canadians in the war, it was disclosed, effort to prevent a crossing in this area.

Evidently they fear such an attempt.

If a bridgehead were established in this area, the Allies would have a network of good roads over which to burst into the north German plain, says the Canadian staff.

Fall of Xanten came after one of the heaviest attacks of the mopping-up drive by Gen. Crerar's troops. The fought to eliminate the last German north Rhine bridgehead.

British troops fought through Xanten, capturing the town while Canadians in strength won the open south of the town to complete heavy fighting under terrific artillery and mortar fire, particularly when guns across the Rhine.

Canadian troops, including a Scottish regiment, supported by artillery, fought in the southwest outskirts of Xanten, Globus report which have been identified as fighting with the Canadian Army offensive began Feb. 8 and the Regiment de Maisonneuve, Montreal; the Regiment de Le Chaudiere, Lake Megantic, Que., and the Chaudiere, Grenadier Guards of Montreal, a tank unit.)

Allies Only Mile From Objective

Rome, March 9 —(AP) Allied 5th Army troops were within six of Kalman highway stronghold of Vergato, 17½ miles southwest of Bologna, Reuter reported, after a shoot a mile east of their objective, Allied headquarters announced today.

The push, although slowed somewhat by the enemy in the last 24 hours, was the closest approach yet to Vergato, which is the key to the Apennine Allied attacks for four months.

The Germans, meanwhile, stepped up their artillery fire against the U. S. 10th Mountain Division's positions before the town and reached Line 2 three miles east of Reggio-Emilia, the 1,000-foot Lodendorff rail ridge between Vergato and Bologna-Pistoia highway, Allied dispatches said. Allied patrols farther west in the Serghio valley.

Man is Nailed to Ten-Foot Cross And Mass of Thorns Put on Head

Chicago, March 9 — (AP) — A man identified as Fred Walcher, about 40, was found by police today nailed to a 10-foot cross, with 10-penny spikes driven through his feet bound with rope and a crown of thick mass of thorny bushes on his head.

The police, responding to a report of an unusual disturbance, found the man unconscious on the back of a truck, made of two by-six lumbers, which was fastened to part of a disused railway pillar.

The victim, more than five feet, 10 inches and husky, was taken to the police station where it was immediately remove the nails from his hands.

The police, quoting Walcher, said he was not wearing a coat or hat and his clothing was not disarranged.

Regaining consciousness several hours later, Walcher told Capt. O'Connell that he was summoned from his basement apartment by a knock on the window and asked to assist at an automobile accident. He said when he arrived at the scene of the accident he was attacked by several men who forced him with a gun and forced him to lie down on the cross.

Capt. O'Connell said police were working on the theory that Walcher might have been the victim of a religious cult initiation. In connection he cited a paper found in the victim's pocket which read: "This good man is chosen (Sic) sacrifice for the redemption of the people of the holiest, finest inspiration for world peace. Let's all follow for the good of all mankind and for the unknown soldiers."

In addition a pamphlet titled: "Post-war employment plan for veterans is co-ordination with world order" was found in the victim's pocket. O'Connell characterized this as a psychological dissertation on economics.

The captain said he was unsatisfied with Walcher's condition was satisfactory. There were 2 wounds, one in each palm, and a slight discoloration of the left breast, the doctor said.

Thousands of Men Drive Over Bridge Captured Intact

Foothold Five Miles Deep And More Than That Wide

Paris, March 9 —(CP)— A United States bridgehead across the Rhine — first since the crossing of Germany's historic water barrier since the days of Napoleon—today was being built up steadily somewhere south of fallen Cologne.

Official secrecy masked the direction in which the U. S. 1st Army might next be expected to jump.

Reports originating elsewhere on the Western Front and also broadcast from Berlin said the crossing was won at Remagen, 30 miles southeast of Cologne and 277 miles southwest of Berlin. A railway bridge spans the stream at this point.

The German said the Americans had captured a bridge intact at Remagen. The London dispatches there is a double track railroad bridge capable of bearing tanks, trucks and foot troops.

Allies Mass on Location

Allied Supreme Headquarters declined the exact location of the bridgehead was a matter of military secrecy, since the enemy had clearly been caught off guard.

To the north, the 1st Canadian Army finally captured Xanten, bitterly-contested key town guarding Rhine ferry crossings at Wesel, seven miles farther east. Alpon, 5½ miles southwest of Wesel also fell and the Wesel bulge where a report 20,000 Germans held the last west bank Rhine bridgehead between Cologne and the Netherlands border — was compressed into a 20-square-mile triangle.

But across the Rhine from Gen. Crerar's troops the Germans have massed the greatest artillery concentration ever to face the Canadians in the war, it was disclosed today.

Great stores of ammunition were captured in the bridgehead across the Rhine.

Whether the United States First Army had been able to get tanks across the river was unknown press. Neither supreme headquarters nor censored front dispatches disclosed any detail on the buildup within the bridgehead area.

Protective Air Cover

Some 30 fighter bombers flew a protective cover over the bridgehead through the morning while Allied medium and light bombers attacked railroad keypoints farther east to the Germans would have to move troops over a roundabout route around the foothold.

Leading the U. S. 1st Army's breach of Rhine defences had come at Remagen — about half-way between Bonn and Coblenz — in the Ludendorff rail bridge which the Germans had not only two days ago.

The push, although slowed somewhat by the enemy in the last 24 hours, was the closest approach yet to Vergato, which is the key to the Apennine Allied attacks for four months.

The Germans, meanwhile, stepped up their artillery fire against the U. S. 10th Mountain Division's positions before the town and reached Line 2 three miles east of Reggio-Emilia, the 1,000-foot Lodendorff rail ridge between Vergato and Bologna-Pistoia highway, Allied dispatches said. Allied patrols farther west in the Serghio valley.

Explosion Claims Lives of Two Men

Hamilton, March 9 (CP) — Investigation continued today into the cause of an explosion and fire which yesterday destroyed the Canadian Ansilite plant, a munitions explosives plant in central Hamilton and claimed the lives of two men. Four other persons went to hospital with injuries suffered in the blast.

Firemen and police last night were unconfirmed reports of Gordon Bier, 47, and Thomas R. Farmington, both of Hamilton, from the smouldering ruins. Missing more than eight hours after the explosion, the city chief ordered the debris over a wide area at 11 a.m. EDST. The explosion was described as the worst in an industrial plant here in years.

Explosion pocket in which perhaps 50,000 persons died in explosion. The jaws of the trap along the middle Rhine were only 15 miles or less between Remagen and Muldorf, captured town four miles from Coblenz.

Two-thirds of the Coblenz pincer was captured and the rest was being overrun with ease and speed.

The U. S. 1st Army proceeded with the reduction of the last half of Bonn, university city on the Rhine between Coblenz and Remagen.

Both troops battled also for the last fourth of Bad Godesberg, three miles up-river from Bonn, where Chamberlain who was seeking peace with Hitler before Munich.

Outflank Ruhr.

The Rhine crossing threatened to outflank the Ludendorff-packed Ruhr, without which Germany's war potential would be reduced from a mighty to a relatively weak. Moreover it brought the battle of Germany to its penultimate stage. Gen. Dwight Patton's dash to the middle Rhine just northwest of Frankfurt confounded the Saar district defences to the north.

Briefing reports at Allied supreme headquarters explained that the Remagen bridgehead was "ideal" for the Rhine crossing means that the foothold is beyond the range of light enemy artillery fire. The main German light field piece is a 77-mm. gun which has a range of 9 miles. This would suggest that the bridgehead already pushed at least four miles east of the Rhine and about eight miles along its eastern banks, covering perhaps a hundred square miles.

This much was known through the more than 45 shrouded hours of silence.

Portsmouth City In Ohio Almost Deserted by Flood

Portsmouth, O., March 9 (AP)—This city of 40,000 seemed its fine parks and wide streets almost deserted today as the Ohio River crested a point of 65 feet, 15 feet above flood stage.

The torrential, heavily crested by northeastern Ohio and West Virginia, stretched 2,500 feet across the Ohio and Western Kentucky valley in the southern portion of the state.

As sentries and patrolmen walked their beats, the business district and the industrial community on the other side, lapped by swirling waters of the Ohio and the Scioto Rivers.

One main highway was open to the city.

The rise of the Ohio had slowed to 3/100 of a foot an hour.

The river was stationary at Ashland, Ky., 80 miles upstream, encouraging the citizens in their fight to dyke the flood.

Up the Ohio River, the swollen waters were receding at Steubenville and West Virginia while agriculture and frontier—the latter sandbagged behind a 9-foot floodwall—stood crests of 47.9 and 51 feet, respectively. Marietta, Ohio, was benefiting slowly at Cincinnati after reaching a crest of 48.7 feet Wednesday night, but was not immediately expected a crest of 47.3 feet. Sunday, it was said.

If the sanding dike, averaging three feet in height, holds here, Portsmouth will escape ravage by a major flood for the first time in its 126-year history.

Two-thirds of the city's area, including its industrial section, was virtually deserted. Approximately 8,000 residents fled to higher areas which would be flooded to maximum depth of seven feet should the dike break, had moved to the hilltop section.

The latter group were housed in crowded private homes, four school buildings and Ironton, Ohio, jail. They were fed by the Red Cross, Salvation Army and church women.

All the industries, except a power plant, were closed down. The Portsmouth Downtown, north of the Wheeling Steel Corp., employing 3,500 persons.

Fronts of downtown business establishments were boarded up as merchants moved to the second floor. Downtown grocers earlier had disposed of foodstuffs without ration points in a 24-hour sale.

A few daring souls who remained in their homes in the low section, however, were seen as the water parked at the curb in the dry streets.

Men from all walks of life toiled throughout the night on the giant slate of electric and carbide lights to keep the dike growing. Air-raid sirens sounded and all able bodies and the rail cars hauled in hundreds of sand, gravel and crushed stone, fingernails labored beside the men filling and carrying bags of sand.

Tommy Says Germans Look Like Pigs, Act Like Pigs, They Are Pigs

By DOUGLAS AMARON

With the Canadian Army in Germany, March 9 — (CP)—A soldier sitting on the edge of a dike said "the Germans look like pigs, they act like pigs and they are pigs."

This was the opinion of a Tommy, and Canadian soldiers who moved into some of the German dugouts on the dikes east of Nijmegen after the Canadian Army's winter offensive began were ready to agree with him. They had to spring clean every dugout before they could use it.

These German positions were dug into the sides of the dike and despite the tremendous barrage that opened the winter offensive, most of them were undamaged. They were strongly built, with log walls and roofs, and their entrances were so narrow that a stout man would have trouble entering them.

Men from an Eastern Canadian mortar battalion landed on the dike not far from Zandpoel, while fighting was still going on, but there was no need for spotting anyone as they were given the job of guarding prisoners instead. There were still 66 Germans for several hours at night until Buffaloes came across the flooded fields to take them off their hands.

Their dugout, beside another in which the Germans left a Christmas tree and some Christmas candy, was warm and dry, and the Canadians had thrown out the German dirt the mortar men moved in. There is little of value in the dugout, but the Germans left behind some preserved cherries which the Canadians ate with relish.

Nazis Flee

LA-Oen, Hodges was pouring troops by the thousands into the bridgehead as the Nazis sank into deep mud, which presumably was a good thing for the Nazis, as it bogged down their tanks.

Up to latest reports at Allied supreme headquarters—covering action well into Thursday evening the German defenders were unable to rally enough strength for a counter-attack to get enough troops to the danger point; for Hodges' troops were attacking three small ones were mounted.

The crossing was made and the bridgehead established under some heavier and small army fire. Premis Reporter Bob Post says no particularly effective.

Front line correspondents made it clear the bridgehead was secure and consisted of the villages of Oebisfelde and Ingenhoven.

Allied supreme headquarters said simply: "Our units have reached the Rhine and are in control of a bridgehead on the east bank south of Cologne."

The Rhine is 300 yards east of the Roer River in the area between Oebisfelde and Ingenhoven in the Westerwalde, where wooded hills rise to 1,000 feet. The terrain is tough and obscured, but Allied armies have overcome worse country.

The fight will be fought over fortifications such as the Siegfried line and Adlerhorst wall, or fortress cities like Caen, Metz, Nancy, and Verdun in the German position. Caen are believed to be largely old-style trenches, scattered pill boxes and machine-gun nests and the like with little steel or concrete.

East Bank Bloody

At Remagen, 12 miles south of Bonn, the east bank of the Rhine rises abruptly beyond Erpel (population 1,000) in the hill country just south of the Ruhr, to the highest point, Erpel links with the Ruhr road network.

There was no indication at Allied headquarters whether any specific news of the bridgehead would be disclosed. When the time comes the 1st Army may be in the Ruhr under way with a break-out.

The weather began to break in favor of the Allies. Skies were clearer after three days of drenching rain.

At Bonn, a university city of 100,000 near Cologne, there has been bitter opposition came mainly from the Volksturm.

IN MEMORIAM

CROSS — In loving memory of my dear mother, Minnie Cross, who passed away March 9th, 1944.

It's only a wonderful journey
From a land of woe to a land of joy,
The golden gates have opened wide
To let our mother pass inside

And the heart we cherish so,
Our dear mother waits
For Americ to meet in the land
Where loved ones go.
Sadly missed by her loving son, William Cross, Corbyville, Ont.

CROSS — In loving memory of a dear sister, Minnie (Robertson) Cross, who passed away March 9th, 1944.

She calmly entered home.

Plans to Occupy Austria Have Been Agreed Upon

By JOHN KIMCHE
(Reuters Military Commentator)

London, March 8 (Reuters) — Plans for the occupation of Austria by the Big Three—and possibly by France—have been agreed upon, according to well informed political circles here.

The whole of Austria and also the city area of Vienna has been divided into three zones of occupation, American, Russian and British. Those will be administered as separate and autonomous units by the respective powers.

The Russian zone includes Lower Austria, the Burgenland and Northern Steyermark. That is the highly industrialized area to the north and south of Vienna and includes the important centres of Wiener Neustadt, Bruck, Leoben and Eisenherz.

The British zone is to the south of the Russian, starting just north of Graz, it includes that city and the rest of Steyermark province not in the Russian zone, and also the whole of Carinthia, the Tyrol and the Vorarlberg alongside the Swiss border.

The American zone is made up of Upper Austria and adjoins the American zone of occupation in Germany. It includes Linz with the Hermann Goering works.

More unexpected is the report of decision to divide the city area of Greater Vienna into three zones. After much discussion it has apparently been decided and each district has been allocated to one or the other of the occupying powers.

Allowance has been made in these for French participation, should the French desire it, also it is believed some frontier rectification in favor of Yugoslavia.

As it stands, however, the ultimate position of Austrian independence remains unsolved and no decision on this has yet been taken. It is believed in London political circles.

Churchill Raises Roars of Laughter By His Sally

By E. FRASER WIGHTON
Reuters Political Correspondent

London, March 9—(Reuters)—Prime Minister Churchill served up last night in anticipation of a verbal battle between Prime Minister Churchill and Earl Winterton instead heard the 70-year-old Prime Minister solemnly lecturing Earl Winterton, who is 62, on the duties of "ralling into battle by reason of his years" as age."

The Prime Minister's "victim" joined heartily in the roars of laughter raised by the sally.

Earl Winterton, conservative member for Horsham and Torrington, Sussex, since 1904, raised on the adjournment a question which he considered of constitutional principle—that the government should establish a select committee of inquiry when a charge has been made against a minister.

He made it clear that he made no allegations in connection with the particular minister—Air Secretary Sir Archibald Sinclair—against whose department Austin Hopkinson, Independent, had made complaints connected with administration of 300 Australian overseas airways and air ministry co-operation.

Mr. Churchill in a friendly, after-dinner mood, expressed surprise at what he termed Earl Winterton's lack of background on the matter—that the House of Commons was the final arbiter on select committees.

He made it clear that in this case the government was satisfied that there was no need for such a committee and would oppose it, but that even so it was still a matter in which parliament had the final word.

Pilot Draws Fire From Jap Fighters And Shakes Enemy

Ottawa, March 8 — (CP) — Flt. Lt. H. L. Coons of Kingston, Ont., is credited with drawing Jap fighter fire from a companion Dakota transport dropping supplies to British troops in Burma and then shaking the enemy, an air force release said last night.

Like the other Dakota, his was loaded with a highly combustible and explosive cargo of petrol and mortar shells, but Coon's action saved the other plane from attack and possible destruction. As it was it was never fired on though Coons' aircraft was badly shot up. Coons and his crew spent a half-raising 10 minutes dodging two Jap fighters, but brought his aircraft back to base damaged by cannon and machine-gun fire and by collision with a tree-top.

At one time during the chase Coons was skimming trees and doing fast turns among their tops in his efforts to shake the enemy. Once the Dakota jarred heavily against something, which turned out to be a tree, and it was further damaged. On its return to base 12 holes were found in the fuselage and elevators, and pieces of tree bark were clinging to the damaged wing tip.

Reduced Output Farm Implements Is Seen Likely

Ottawa, March 8—(CP)—A tight steel situation is likely to be reflected in reduced production of agricultural implements in Canada this year, it was learned Thursday.

Munitions Minister Howe, announcing tightening of restrictions on the distribution on warehouse steel, said recently that the steel shortage "is more acute now than at any time in our history."

United States authorities have announced a 20 per cent slash may have to be made in steel allotments for the year starting July 1, but Minister Howe's announcement steel control officials in Canada had taken active steps to cut community use.

This has meant a tooth-combing review of allotments of the steel supply available in Canada, and agricultural implements is one of the places where a cut has been decided that will have to be made, amount to 10 per cent during the next year, with despite any variations in war requirements.

SEND PARCELS OF Gratitude TO PRISONERS OF WAR

• "THANKS FOR MY LIFE" are so often the words of gratitude that come to Red Cross Headquarters from prisoners of war who, every week, receive their Red Cross parcel of food, comforts or medicine to keep them alive and in good health until their day of deliverance.

Prisoners of war can look to none other than the Red Cross to ease their peril or pain. Red Cross can look to no other than loyal Canadians at home for money support to carry on with this vital war work.

Since you gave your last Red Cross donation, growing numbers of prisoners have increased the requirement for Red Cross parcels from 100,000 to 140,000 weekly. The number of parcels that must yet go forward cannot be counted. The task ahead for your Red Cross is staggering.

The Rhine Crossed

One of the war's great obstacles, the Rhine, has been crossed and thereby there has been achieved one of the great victories of the war. The Rhine River, famed in song and story and holding in German mind the symbol of German invincibility was crossed in darkness and in surprise just two days after the great fortress city of Cologne fell. A firm footing has been gained on the east side of the river.

German morale must suffer a mortal blow in this great achievement of the Allies' prowess. The United Nations it spells their superiority as they strike numerous mortal blows with a repetition that allows the enemy no respite to recover even partially. This is a day that German mobility is badly affected. Its power to switch or shuttle forces from front to front whatever aid might be needed having long since disappeared. The deadly repetition of the shattering blows is being felt throughout the entire length and breadth of the Reich. Timing of the blows is telling a tale of victories for the Allies as Russians advance on the east and the British, American and Canadians on the west at the appointed hour with such force that their goals are achieved. The pincer is telling effectively.

On two fronts the Germans have been dealt shattering attacks and the offensives are carried closer and closer to Berlin, the Russians now being very close to the city.

The Germans boast in their national song "Watch on the Rhine" of their watch as standing unflinching and true on the mighty river rings untrue as for about three days the watch on the Rhine has been proved a similar one under Supreme Commander Eisenhower. It has been these who have dominated the river which flows from the highlands and hinterlands of Germany.

News of the Rhine crossing came suddenly and as a surprise to the world apparently for opinion seemed to be cautious in speculating as to when this attack could be made. Into the speed of the current of the river varies up to five knots and a half and this had been thought fast for any attempt to bridge or cross in boats or on rafts. Depth of the crossing were not at once ascertainable. The lack of bridges after demolitions by the enemy was another point considered as adding to the difficulties of crossing this stream.

What the loss of the Rhine as a barrier and as a channel for traffic to the enemy is seen in the fact that the Ruhr is now within range of the Allies, while air assaults dominate the Ruhr and isolate the region.

Mighty events are said to be shaping up as a result of the western offensive which has already carried across to the east side of the Rhine by the successful conveyance of the crossing of the American First Army. The Americans have poured troops across in large numbers to get the bridgehead out of range of field artillery while, it is said, the Germans have been disorganized by the surprise of the crossing of the river.

The sequel to this great event will be waited with intense interest by the whole world as it lies in its hands as an offensive of the American army said the shortening of the war by months. What the Germans will do under this new situation of the Rhine crossed by the Belfast side of the Rhine will likely soon be revealed.

Hitler's Harvest

Adolf Hitler is reaping a harvest of destruction for Germany and his hopes are now in the ashes of his grandiose gun plants and wrecking of his great planned war industries. It must be bitter what he is now having to take. His spirit that hated everything non-German now cannot fly so high as it has done so far as the smoke from the ruins of the tyranny he built up in Germany. The war he plotted and carried out is lost to him and, still not satisfied, he, with Himmler's satanic aid, is extending woes and tribulations of the Germans by fighting on. Letting such a fiend have his way and supporting him has been costly to Germany and the end is not yet. Hitler and every vestige of his control is destroyed in the holocaust he is bringing to pass upon the German part of the earth.

Posterity mocks this arch-plotter. His conspiracy with evil is being avenged by the outraged conscience of the world for there is a world conscience now seen in the advancing forces of civilization against the dark designs of benighted Germany and her leader.

Never has history so clearly depicted for all men to read, even the Germans, what happens to evil in the world among nations and among men. It is pictured in devasted Germany and in the penalty that is being paid before the world's eye for a Germany's and a Hitler's crimes. The titanic drama is a panorama to any man who would be tyrants. Hitler went the whole way of evil, that is why man can see so clearly the course of evil's punishment.

Hitler has nothing of greatness about him for he is the creation of utter selfishness and hate of all things good and reversed. He has been no military genius and not one good thing has come out from him. No leader of any nation in history will bear so great a stigma on his name nor be as cursed for all the rest of human history.

Renaissance Renaissance

(Montreal Herald)

From the choral viewpoint—and that's as good a viewpoint as any—one of the remarkable things about this war is the revival of "Tipperary."

Efforts to revive this last war classic seemed doomed to failure because of the rivalry of "Roll Out The Barrel" and one or two other swingy lyrics which seemed more in tune with the times.

But "Tipperary" came back to stage a remarkable renaissance through the eagerness of Britain's allies to manifest their goodwill to the British soldier.

Poles, in their mountain fastnesses, Yugoslav elders who had heard British troops singing on the march in the last war, painstakingly instructed partisan warriors or gathered in their villages. Children of this war feel at home with enthusiastic rendering of "Tipperary."

Their ignorance of the words didn't matter, for the words don't mean much, anyway.

First British British troops landing in France in 1939 were greeted with "Tipperary." It has been adopted as the favorite marching tune of the Czechoslavak Army and Polish soldiers have translated "Tipperary" into Polish.

"Tipperary," composed for the music hall stage two years before World War I broke out, lives on.

Perhaps it is destined to attain permanent dignity as a folk-tune, no longer dependent upon wars for its survival.

Air Power at Best

Christian Science Monitor.

The sustained power of the bombing attacks on Berlin suggest that it is to this theatre that the German General Staff has given top priority, and that Berlin itself is the narrowing gateway through which the men and materiel for some desperate counterblow are being funneled. But the progress of the Allies' western offensive gives evidence that the bombing of key centres behind the lines is cutting down and slowing up the flow of German reserves and supplies.

This is air power at its best, coordinated precisely with the ground advance on two enormous and distant fighting fronts, each under separate but now co-operating commands.

A tutor should not be continually thundering instructions into the ears of his pupil, as if he were pouring it through a funnel, but induce him to think, to distinguish, and to find out things for himself; sometimes opening the way, at other times leaving it for him to open; and so accommodate his precepts to the capacity of his pupil.—Montaigne.

Men have counted and have scored
Points upon a little board.

Aliens watch the game amused,
Always by the count confused;

In their games, use teachers hired.

Crew Have Tradition, All Wear Same Kind of Cap on a Mission

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Marianas Islands — (delayed)—Major Robinson, the affable commander of "my" crew, has been leading his boys through almost two years of training before they came overseas.

"This means a lot to have been together so long, doesn't it?" I asked.

"It means everything," one of the sergeants said. "We're a team."

So far the crew has been lucky. Though they've been shot at plenty, the bombardier, who had his leg almost blown off, and is now back in Hawaii in a hospital.

To show how they feel about their being a unit, the officers and men asked especially if I would put the bombardier down as still part of the crew, even though he isn't here any more. They'd been together so long, and they liked him so much. He is Lieut. Paul O'Brien, of Dayton, Ohio.

My crew has a superstition, or rather not a superstition, they all wear the same kind of cap when they start on a mission. It's a dark blue beanie cap, with the figure "30" on the crown in yellow numbers.

They got the caps a couple of years ago in Savannah, Georgia, when they were there on a weekend trip for winning some kind of merit award. They all got their own number then, and although it has long since decided to retain, they insist on keeping it.

So now in a while Major Robinson used to forget his cap, and the assisted men would send somebody back after it. Then the mission started.

But they've lost two of the caps now. One was Lt. O'Brien's, and his took it with him when they all evacuated. The other was Major Robinson's. His cap got so moldy from all the sweating in it that he had to throw it away.

My crew lost their first plane right on the field when a jap zero got it. It was named "Battlin' Betty" after Major Robinson's wife, so now he's changing the name of his new plane to Battlin' Jr. from "Small Fry" to "Battlin' Betty II."

Major Robinson carries a movie camera with him on every mission. He has already taken about 1,500 feet of color movies, but can't tell what they're going to look like until he gets back of America. He's got them timed to the minute—just right for safekeeping against the tropical climate.

The other night when he came into the hut after a 16-hour mission, he said, "Well, I'm glad I'm through with that." He's got all the pictures today that should end it.

"There was a jap fighter diving at the squadron ahead of us. He apparently didn't see us at all, for he pulled up and turned his belly to us and just bang there, wide open. Every gun on our squadron let him have it. He just blew all to pieces. And I got it all on movies. So now I'm ready to lay it aside."

One of the finest vital members of a bomber's family is the ground crew chief, even though he doesn't fly. He's the guy who sees to it that the airplane does fly.

A good crew chief is worth his weight in gold. Major Robinson says he has the finest crew chief in the squadron. I could believe it after seeing him.

He is Sergt. Jack Orr, of (377) Normandy St., Dallas, Texas. He's twenty-four years old, tall, rangy and modest. He is so conscientious it hurts, and he takes as much interest in the crew members do themselves.

Major Robinson said that on one trip they had some trouble, and were the last ones in, long after the others had landed. It did look kind of bad for a while.

Sergt. Orr, Andrew's boy, called them at the "hard-stand." Major Robinson said that when they got the front. Everything done for him that had been done out of courtesy since the British Constitution did not include flowers. Then we met Jack and Harry who happens to be leader of a party." It took account only of the number of votes cast in a representative capacity and "Mr. as a group, not individually especially whatever."

CANADIANS TAKE

British troops also took the tiny hamlet of Mingreh on the Rhine one mile north of Xanten and 1,000 yards south of Xanten, another mile to capture the town of Best. Hostess at the Airforce.

The whole Xanten area is being pounded by concentrations of guns, mortars of all calibres, including huge 31-centimetre monsters, and concentrations of more than anything at Caen in Normandy or in the battle for Cassino. Enemy artillery last autumn had every advantage by the Canadians and by Eighth Army, but try is through a bursting curtain of high explosives.

On the left flank of West triangle, British troops captured Alpen and United States 3rd Army troops are on the right took a town in that area. The Americans are fighting to the death to protect his north Rhine bridgehead.

Three hundred prisoners were taken after a dawn attack carried the Canadians to Marienbaum and sought to hammer flat a 40-square mile tangle entrenched in defences of 20,000 fanatically resisting Germans.

Ontario troops dashed for cover through a hail of enemy shell and mortar fire, much of it from the Hitler Line which is 2,000 yards south of Xanten. They broke through the outer defences of the town and also fought into the northern fringe of a forest 1½ miles south of Xanten where the Germans had built another line.

Ontario infantry units named in the offensive have been: the Lake Superior regiment, the Algonquin regiment, North Nay; the Highland Light Infantry of Canada, Galt; the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, Hamilton; Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, Toronto; and the Lincoln and Welland Regiment, St. Catharines.

Glengarry Highlanders, Cornwall.

KING REAFFIRMS

Mr. King said it was not decided whether the Dominion would send observers at the forthcoming session of Parliament.

The Prime Minister is due to arrive in Washington today and will be met by the Canadian ambassador, L. D. Pearson, going later to the White House, where he will spend Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. He expects to be back in Ottawa early next week.

In his absence the three cabinet posts he holds will be distributed by three different ministers on an acting basis, Resources Minister Crerar for Dominion-provincial relations; Finance Minister Ilsley Acting Prime Minister, and Transport Minister St. Laurent Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs.

The Prime Minister said he is not prepared to say whether the Dominion would be given representation at the San Francisco conference with the object of forming a world security organization.

While Mr. King said further details of the Canadian delegation to San Francisco would be given only after consultation with the choice of Mr. St. Laurent as Acting Secretary of State for external affairs was considered a satisfactory to the selection of the Justice Minister for the post.

Beyond saying that only men who have been responsible for framing some of the government's policies in the Commons would be considered, Mr. King gave no indication of how the opposition members would be represented. Could be chosen or whether they would be among the Liberal party members of other parties as well as spokesmen for the Progressive Conservative party.

Critical of Brackin's Speech.

The Prime Minister was sharply critical of the latest speech by John Brackin, National Conservative representative leader, and by his emphasis on the necessity for unanimity in parliament let the implication that he did not contemplate having to take decisions with majority votes.

When asked specifically about this he replied said: "You can draw your own conclusions."

He was asked another question as to what he meant by the opposition, he said "those who are not in the government." He was also asked he had always held the view that in parliamentary life the government and the opposition, not particular parties, should co-operate.

He said the suggestion that parliament be extended was that the time available for debate make the kind of speech which he did.

"I have said all along there would be no extension," he added. "I don't think I have changed my mind again. I never had any such intention and I would oppose it."

Commenting on Mr. Bracken's suggestion that the government was afraid to face the electorate and therefore was seeking delay, for that reason, Mr. King said no man since the beginning of time has had a campaign service behind the people's fights to elections than himself.

The suggestion that Conservation strange coming from "a gentleman who was afraid to appear in the House of Commons and who has been leader of his party for two and a half years and should go and try any constituency and have himself offered for election."

He said Mr. Bracken had received many appointments to the government, including his recent trip to out of the plane he was all over them, hugging and down like a puppy dog, shouting and hugging them, and they could hardly get him stopped, he was so happy.

Major Robinson says he was sort of embarrassed, but I've heard him tell it two or three times, so I know he enjoyed it. Then he is indeed a fraternalism in war that is hard for people at home to comprehend.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

TOOTH CARE AND MIND

Most Americans get from two-fifths to one-half of their calories from white flour and sugar. These are high in nutritional value, but free from or relatively poor in vitamins, particularly vitamin B1, (thiamine).

Still some who think they know what they're talking about theorize and reiterate that people who eat a wide select and enjoy a "well balanced" diet including a liberal variety of foods, vegetables, fruits, milk, eggs, meat etc, get plenty of vitamins in their food.

This glib assurance is based largely upon the widely published dictum of the head barber for the best advertised "clinic" that—

The medical profession would probably do well to point out to worried dietitians and mothers of families that disease which can be definitely ascribed to avitaminosis (lack of vitamins) is very rarely seen among American adults of the middle and upper classes.

The complexities of the best advertised clinic, having conceived and given birth to the theory that the highest benefit of scientific investigation, endeavored to make it unanimous by the simple but modest confession of diagnostic ineptitude:

"Even the physician who has very large practice will see only a few cases a year in which he will suspect that the symptoms are due to too great a narrowing of a diet."

Or in only fair to mention here that the physician who spent seven board on this seven or eight years ago, and no doubt has learned better.

This easy assumption that vitamin deficiency is rare in this country is based upon the ignorance or medical "authorities" of the habit and file of the medical profession —ignorance which was perhaps excusable eight or ten years ago, since the newer knowledge of the function of vitamins in health had not then got into medical textbooks.

It is indeed true that the severer degrees of vitamin deficiency diseases such as beri beri (polyneuritis) and scurvy (infantile scurvy) are rare, but mild and moderate degrees of the latter are widely prevalent as a health impairment by itself or a serious complication of various chronic diseases, that the practitioner who fails to keep it in mind in twenty practice is just ten or twenty years behind the times.

The "clinic" trumpeter loud pates to himself upon the discovery that he referred exclusively to middle and upper class adults. He belongs to the other class and it doesn't know how middle and upper class adults live, what their favorite ailments may be aside from gonorrhea, hemorrhoids, alcoholism, and, when other dodges fail, neurasthenia.

However it is safe to estimate—and if I challenge physicians to controvert this estimate that there are today at least half a million cases of mild rickets in growing youths and young adults and at least a hundred thousand cases of mild scurvy in mature adults in the continental United States, that the symptoms of both of these diseases come under medical observation at all.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Tea

Is very strong green tea harmful to the kidneys? Does it not, tea leaves, seem to hurt crave them.

Answer—Tea or tea leaves has the same effect as coffee or coffee beans, only tea is about one-third or one-half as strong in the caffeine content of coffee. Caffeine is the caffeine.

Caffeine is a diuretic administered in kidney troubles. Whether your green tea drinking or chewing is harmful to the kidneys depends on how much you drink and eat. I believe moderate use of tea is harmless, and not nervous but rather beneficial to most adults.

RATTLESNAKES SHED FANGS

A rattlesnake in normal condition drops its functional fangs every six or eight weeks. Nature has provided replacements for the fangs and potential fangs that is apparently unsurpassed in speed.

No matter how many times the fangs are extracted the rattlesnake will grow another to take their removed. The only effective way to render a rattlesnake harmless is to remove the fangs while alive or to remove not the entire fang but only the tip containing the poison gland and a part of the fang to which the gland is attached. This requires a difficult operation that few would or could perform.

The fangs of a rattlesnake are not solid, but have a groove or tube within—rather than for—along. "attached" normally for the fang is fastened against the roof of the mouth. When the snake strikes the fangs are raised to a perpendicular position.

Surplus of $8,922,400 Announced by Treasurer In Presenting Budget

Reduction of $18,420,350 In Gross Debt and $1,080,878 In Net Debt of Province Based on Ten Months Actual And Two Months Estimated Receipts and Expenditures; No New Taxation

Toronto, March 8 (CP)—Provincial Treasurer Frost in his budget address to the Ontario Legislature today announced a surplus of $8,922,400 on ordinary account for the fiscal year ending next March 31—compared with $6,841,522 for the ninth last year—and proposed immediate payment of $5,000,000 of the surplus to Ontario school boards as an interim payment on their 1946 Legislative grants.

Mr. Frost also announced in his $105,000-word speech a reduction of $18,420,350 in the gross debt of the province and a net debt reduction of $1,080,878 in the net debt—both based on 10 months actual and two months estimated receipts and expenditures.

Payment of a one-mill subsidy to all provincial municipalities, payment of special subsidies to certain Ontario municipalities, a reduction of $2,369,487 in the cost of interest and debt services, a reduction of $27,199,200 in the funded debt, cancellation of present subsidies on farm products and a balance budget for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1946, were announced in the address, the second to be delivered by the Progressive Conservative provincial treasurer who took office from the Frost public party when in opposition.

No New Taxation.

The address gave assurance that "no new taxation of any kind will be imposed" because the "government has decided that in view of the ... conference of provincials Conference that it is undesirable to add to a tax structure which we believe to be faulty".

There was no reference to an overall surplus on capital and ordinary accounts. Such surpluses were announced in 1942 and 1943 by Mr. Frost, gave credit to last year in his budget address. However, he said, at that time, he found the combination of capital and ordinary receipts and expenditures created a wrong impression.

For the coming fiscal year, Mr. Frost forecast a surplus of $60,320, based on estimated ordinary revenue of $113,608,317 and estimated ordinary expenditure of $113,547,997.

Gross provincial debt March 31, 1944, was $606,527,963 said Mr. Frost estimated that by the end of this month it is reduced to $646,107,613. The net debt a year ago was $482,495,503 and the estimated figure for next March 31 was $481,412,625.

Requests Conference

Mr. Frost said: "It is of the highest importance" that a Dominion-Provincial conference be called within 60 days.

"We believe that on such a conference depends the ability of the government of all the provinces and their municipalities to plan wisely for the post-war years. Ontario has been willing and anxious to confer in a spirit of goodwill and co-operation as a member of a great confederation of free governments. Undoubtedly we have been denied the opportunity ... by the government's ... attempt to conceal our disappointment ... that we did not call the provincial government to call" such a conference.

Aim to Attract Capital.

Injustices and inequalities in the tax structure have been "magnified and multiplied" by the impact of heavy Federal taxation, said Mr. Frost. ... One aim of the Ontario government is to attract capital to the province. ... Duplication of taxation, particularly in succession duties, restricted investment and Ontario had to do its share to eliminate of this duplication by entering into agreements with Quebec and Nova Scotia with respect to collection of succession duties.

To Practice Economy

The government had decided not to wait for a Dominion-Provincial conference to re-adjust municipal taxation and education costs. The adjustment — "greatest ever undertaken by any province in the history of Canada" — was designed to correct "glaring defects" in the education system, said Mr. Frost, "excessive burden of taxation which has been borne by real estate ... discouraging construction.

It had been decided not to increase further the burden on the cost of assuming half the cost of the education burden now borne by real estate. It had also decided against increasing new debt ... except "where absolutely necessary."

"In facing the problem, the government decided that a second step was that of practising the old homely virtue of economy." Every effort had been made to reduce overhead costs. In the last two years the cost of interest and sinking fund charge had been reduced by $2,369,487.

Greater provincial efficiency is the result of following sound policy, especially in respect to refinancing maturing obligations."

Mr. Frost said he proposed to:

Mr. Frost said he proposed to submit to the House amendments to estimates "authorizing the advance payment to the several municipalities in Ontario of an amount equal to approximately 94 per cent of the 1945 general legislative grants." The amount would be $5,808,000 and would leave $114,400 as the undistributed balance of the $6,023,400 surplus.

The advance payment will be made "immediately" it is authorized and will be rectified by public and separate school authorities of the province ... not later than March 31, 1946.

Provision was being made in the budget for 1945-46 for an expenditure of $98,365,160 for education compared with $15,742,800 in the present year. "This increase is in addition to the advance payments for which I propose to ask your approval."

Increases also were estimated in expenditures for agriculture, game and fisheries, lands and forests, labour, mines and several other departments. These were offset by reductions in the estimates for municipal affairs—cut from $6,435,700 to $3,216,072 through replacement of a one-mill educational subsidy by increased educational grants highways, public works, treasury department and public welfare.

Mines Estimates Increased.

Mines Department estimates were increased $54,000 because of plans for generally extensive activity. Increases in the lands and forests appropriation were designed to finance depends the ability of the Clearance experiments to secure additional water supplies in the Welland River, and the construction of a new harbour at Sault Ste. Marie for the handling of iron ore products.

The Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission planned to extend its service to about 13,000 additional customers in the 1944-46 fiscal year, chiefly by construction of 600 miles of transmission lines. At the end of 1946, the Commission served about 146,000 rural consumers, including 101,700 farms and 44,300 rural farms.

It was proposed to increase the teachers contribution to the Superannuation Fund to four per cent from the present 3 1-2 per cent. The Government will match the teachers' contributions. The increase would make it possible to increase the maximum pension from $585 to $700, the maximum from $1,200 to $1,500 and reduce from 35 to 30 number of years of teaching required for a full pension from 35 to 30.

No Details of Subsidy

Mr. Frost did not give any details of the proposed subsidy to mining municipalities. His reference came in speaking of the work of the Department of Municipal Affairs when he said:

"I am glad to tell the House that provisions have been made in the estimates of this department for the payment of a one-mill subsidy to every municipality in Ontario, in addition to the educational grants which have already been outlined. This involves an expenditure of $5,078,000. Furthermore, the department is making provision this year to pay a subsidy to certain mining municipalities which, in the opinion of the Minister, have suffered loss of revenue by reason of increased Dominion taxation of mines."

Agriculture Department estimates were being increased $166,362 and subsidies would be maintained. An additional $100,000 was being allotted to the Department of Game and Fisheries so it could extend its work. An increase of more than $600,000 over than their actual expenditures in the present fiscal year was being made in health and welfare estimates.

Department of Labor estimates were being increased $60,350 to meet the cost of additional safety inspectors and the act limiting hours of work and providing vacations with pay. The new requirements authorize higher standards of safety, health and welfare for industrial workers.

Safety League Officer To Speak In Schools

Carrying its education program into the classrooms of schools throughout the province, the Ontario Safety League, through the medium of motion pictures, is expanding its efforts in bringing to the general public the importance of accident prevention, it was announced today.

Mr. F. H. LaTrobe, field safety officer of the League arrived in the city today and will spend the next week addressing pupils of public and other schools here on the importance of care and caution at school and at home.

P. B. LaTROBE

The lectures cover safety in the operation of bicycles and automobiles, pedestrian safety on streets and elsewhere; fire protection; railroad safety and water safety.

Now in its thirtieth year, of operation the League is still busily willing on its work of trying to educate people in the principles of preventing accidents to themselves and others and trying to make them understand that accidents, instead of accidental is largely a matter of personal responsibility.

The sound film depicts how accidents happen, dangers children in the street, in "public places" and how they can be avoided. Children are asked to have their parents cooperate in the prevention of accidents.

Mr. LaTrobe lectured to the pupils of Prince of Wales School during the Canniffon school today. He will return to the students of Queen Alexandra School on Monday morning. Queen Victoria School on Tuesday afternoon; George School on Tuesday morning; Queen Mary School, Tuesday afternoon; the Belleville Collegiate Institute on Wednesday morning and St. Michael's Academy in the afternoon.

Japs Compressed In Small Area On Iwo Jima

Guam, March 9 (AP)— The fierce battle for Iwo Jima is altering the pattern of the final phase of American conquest of other Pacific islands—but it may be several days before final victory.

The Japanese, compressed into a tough crescent-shaped area measuring 300 to 1,500 yards wide along the north and east coasts, have adopted fanatical tactics against the pressing collapse of their organized resistance on Cape Suribachi in the south.

Frontline dispatches tell of small Banzai charges of suicidal attacks against American tanks by Japanese armed only with poles to which explosive charges are attached or of enemy troops confined to a great extent in dugouts and caves hoping combing precipitous coastal cliffs; and of the discovery of Japanese bodies floating in the surf.

25-Year, 10-Year Terms Given 2 Men For Manslaughter

Toronto, March 9 —(CP)— Allan Baldwin, 22, was sentenced to 25 years in penitentiary and William J. O'Sullivan, 22, to 10 years when they appeared in court today for sentence on conviction of manslaughter.

The two yesterday were found guilty on the reduced charge following their trial on a charge of murdering Robert Canning, 68-year-Don Mill guard, killed during a break from the hospital annex of the jail last June 10th.

The two had been charged with murder of the guard, who, a medical officer testified, died as a result of asphyxia caused by breakage of the larynx cartilage.

In their testimony, Baldwin and O'Sullivan said they had bound the guard with a bed sheet and leather straps before the attempted escape.

Baldwin, at the time of the break was in jail awaiting hearing of his appeal against an 18-year sentence arising out of a $94,000 robbery at Wheatley, Ont.

O'Sullivan, who said he had planned to escape with Baldwin, did not leave the hospital annex until June 10 when Baldwin escaped through a window by means of a blanket rope. Baldwin was captured a day later.

ALL LEGISLATURE PARTIES AGREED ON PROPOSAL

United Against Ruling Made by National War Labor Board

Toronto, March 8 (CP)—Agreement among all parties, a rare condition in the Legislature, was reached today on two measures of importance to the province.

Premier Drew announced that the Ontario Labor Relations Board, established a year ago to labor disputes, would be continued for another year.

He also said that the Ontario Municipal Board, which has been reviewing a previous decision of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission to sell power to the Sylvanite and Wright-Hargreaves mines, would be continued.

The International mine, rail and smelter workers' union has gained a clear majority in votes cast at Sudbury and Hall mines in the C.N.R., said Mr. Jolliffe.

Mr. Jolliffe said the majority of the Union gain, a majority of all eligible votes.

The Ontario Board called for "run-off" votes to decide the winner in the C.N.R. It made the "perverse and nonsensical" ruling that there was a tie.

If this were the policy of the Labor Board, said Mr. Jolliffe, the effect would be the shelving of all future applications for certification where a Union failed to gain a "substantial majority" of employees on the first certification. Also the displacement of the House at this session, he said, of the Federal Labor Department.

Dissatisfaction

Labor Minister Daley said dissatisfaction was expressed by C.I.O.-C.C.L.-C.B. members over the overriding powers of the federal board and he and Premier Drew agreed that immediate steps should be made to the Dominion Labor Department. The Legislature unanimously passed a resolution of the House supported the move and Labor Minister Daley and Premier Hepburn, challenged for his statement.

Further sitting in the House of the Controversial Opposition Leader Mitchell Hepburn introduced a bill assembly eliminating the power of provinces authorizing the Ontario Optometry Association to control certain advertising practices. Mr. Hepburn said the provision violated the free competition and permit exploitation and forbade the publication of the "political commitment" made by Provincial Treasurer Frost to the Optometry Association before the 1943 election. Premier Drew said he would reply to Mr. Hepburn's charges tomorrow.

Mr. MacLeod, Labor-Progressive, spoke in reminded Throne Speech of the promised action by C.C.F. for its "cynical" attitude toward "petty" security plans drawn up by the Government.

The annual budget is scheduled to be introduced in the Legislature by Provincial Treasurer Leslie Frost, and reports were that considerable new estimates may occasion night sessions next week.

Churchill Won Sizeable Bet

New York, March 9 — (AP) — Prime Minister Winston Churchill in November, 1940, said he had just become Prime Minister "in order to preside over the liquidation of the British Empire," placed a $100 bet on the United States's possibility of war to the United States in 1941, it was revealed by a book published today. Under the contract, made at Minneapolis Jan. 28, 1941, Mr. Churchill won in a wager with Lord Halifax, then a lecture tour, weareed James Garfield Wyman, Minneapolis book-collector, that the British Empire would not be "substantially reduced" within a year from that date. The British author, Richard Le Gallienne, father of actress Eva Le Gallienne, witnessed the contract.

John Fleming, president of the Rosenbach Company which bought the document from Young's estate, said that the wager had been paid Mr. Young and Mr. Churchill agreed that "substantially reduced" would mean loss of one quarter of India, Canada or Australia within the 11-year period.

Yesterday At Queen's Park

By The Canadian Press

All parties agreed that immediate recess should be called to the Federal Government to amend the Criminal Code, setting up the powers of the National War Labor Board.

Labor Minister Daley said there was dissatisfaction among members of the Ontario Labor Relations Board because of the overriding powers of the National Board.

Liberal House Leader Mitchell Hepburn introduced a bill to eliminate the provision of the Optometry Act regulating advertising, which he charged were the result of a "political commitment" by Premier Drew to the Ontario Optometry Association.

Four other bills were given first reading.

Today: Provincial Treasurer Leslie Frost will bring down his budget.

The Correct Methods Of Shampooing the Hair

Virginia Mayo advocates giving the hair a thorough daily washing

By HELEN FOLLETT

BEAUTIFUL, hair, becomingly and smartly arranged, is a good looks quality that practically any woman can have if she takes the time and the trouble necessary for its health and upkeep. If the hair is thin and soft it can be made to appear abundant by the permanent wave, the greatest beauty the beauty industry has given to women customers.

Cleanliness is the best protection against falling hair, dandruff and locks that lack lustre. It is surprising how much almost invisible dirt the scalp and head can collect in a week's time. Certainly the lapse between shampoos should not be longer than a fortnight.

Use Tepid Water

There is not only dirt on the hair, but there are chemicals, the result of digestion by sweat glands that are likely to impart an unpleasant odor. Extremely oily hair may have to be shampooed every week. Only the fussy old-timers fancy that too frequent washings will have a bad effect upon the growth. Hair is composed of much of the same elements as the skin, and no skin is damaged by cleanliness.

Brushing is helpful because it gives the hair life and luster, without which it is not attractive, but you are afraid that brushing will remove the undulations and crispness, save the grooming, for the night before the shampoo. Then do 100 strokes.

Before the Shampoo

Before shampooing, brush the hair vigorously to remove dead shafts. Comb it free of tangles. Give your scalp a five minute friction; it will loosen dead skin scales, make the tissue less tight, will rouse circulation. Your shampoo will be more effective then.

Use the spray with warm water to dampen the hair and do please have the soap melted. Our teen-age girls are inclined to do a hurried job. She rubs the bar of soap over her thatch. The result is a lather that is mostly air and old-timers fancy that too frequent or as a bowed sash at the waistline. The jacket has a collarless, round, high neckline and is bound with the selvedge.

ANOTHER REVIVAL, sponsored by an important designer is multiple. For this, soft cotton weave that has no stiffening. It is used in black, navy and dark gray as well as pastels, and will be a grand town fabric, comes summery, since it makes up and drapes beautifully.

THE TINY TEEN, meaning the just-past-twelve girl who is very short and dainty, has some fresh ideas of her own. A pretty dress in this group is of beige rayon crepe with the third thursday of each month instead, of every four weeks.

EASY WAY to assemble a good looking costume is to enlist the aid of long tunic overblouses. A beauty in narrow plaid taffeta has a back of taffeta goes beautifully over a dark skirt of crepe or wool. Shocking pink and black striped satin is used for another overblouse.

WEDDINGS

GOULDEN—BOYTING

A wedding of interest to the many friends in Deseronto took place in Bethel United Church, Hallowell, on Thursday evening, March 1st, at 8 p.m., when the Rev. J. R. Kerr united in marriage Vera, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Boyting, Hallowell, and Sergeant Major Harold Neil, son of Arthur Goulden, R.C.A.F., second son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Goulden, Kingston, and former residents of Deseronto.

Miss Dorothy Clarke played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of white satin with a shoulder length veil and carried a white prayer book which was given to her by her library at the R.C.A.F. station in Holland. Her only ornament was a gold locket, a gift of her husband with the R.C.A.F.

Miss Winona Ward, bridesmaid, wore a floor length gown of pale blue sheer, with shoulder length veil and carried pink roses and baby's breath.

The groom was assisted by Mr. James Boyting, brother of the bride.

Following a reception, held over at the home of the bride, Sgt. and Mrs. A. E. Goulden left for a short honeymoon to Toronto and Kingston.

Crownless Charm

By ALICE ALDEN

IN KEEPING with the trend for covering the head with the weather clothing, the milliners are going in for the crownless brim, doing it in elaborate vershos instead of the simple halo brim of other seasons. Madame Pauline designed this crownless beauty to be worn with upswept hair or with the popular chignon. It is made of felt, yellow, green and navy rough straw braid, with a twisted colored maline which is caught with a jewelled ornament high above the brim.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Concerning the Double Chin

We hate to say it, and we shall probably be properly rebuked for it, but we sometimes suspect that the victim of the spare chin has eaten too many cream puffs and that they have gone to her face. That underneath, much is a padding of fat cells, created by consuming more of the good things of life than the body needs for the activities of the day. No matter how slim the plumpler office they can't get away from the fact that they do not mind their diet rules. Fats, sweets or starches are stowed away, one place or another.

Young women who observe that the bathroom scales report an extra pound now and then should take warning, see the writing on the wall. A few curves that curve too much may not seem to matter, but the oncoming years will not lessen them. The spare chin arrives along in the forties. It is no beauty bargain.

If caught young, that bit of fullness under the jaw bone can be annihilated. It will go away. The flesh is anointed with a heavy cream that softens, resistance to manipulations. The flesh is packed up in tiny folds, rolled between finger and thumb; the pressure dissolves the fat cells. This practice is given at night, after the face washing.

If the double chin is permitted to go its own withi way, the pouch increases in size and the skin becomes stretched. That is a sad battle of good-looks fish. The only way to get rid of a pouch, which, if properly performed, will restore the normal contour. To this treatments at the persistent tries is well nigh impossible. Not one woman in a hundred has fish and unreasonable, since many surgeons are with the agreed. Plastic surgeons are with the agreed. Plastic surgeons are with the agreed. Plastic

PARCELS FOR PRISONERS

In a large warehouse in Geneva, Switzerland, hundreds of cartons of food parcels are stored, destined for Allied prisoners of war. Through this warehouse have passed over 13,000,000 food parcels from Canadian Red Cross packing plants in Canada since the start of the war. Each is a life-giving lifeline to an anxious one. Our men in prison camps say that without them they could not exist.

The War Today

Brilliant Coup of Rhine Crossing May Herald Further Crossings

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

The surprise crossing of the Rhine by U. S. 1st Army units south of Cologne is one of the most brilliant coups of our entire war, and one which may shorten the conflict greatly, especially since it is a success so perfectly with the new bridgehead across the Oder against Berlin.

No wonder Gen. Eisenhower is "delighted" since this is the sort of thing a commander dreams of but hardly dares hope for. Details are lacking but apparently a hasty and quick-thinking officer found the men across the river and in Ger-many which was so rugged that the Germans never thought an attempt would be made there. As a result they weren't prepared to defend the position.

Since the first spearhead went over the Rhine at Remagen on Monday, a steady stream has been following. The bridgehead is said to be firmly established, and fanning out.

Nazis German Barriers

This means that at long last both the western Allies and the Russians are inside the final great natural barrier of Germany's ancient fortress. Thus the further defense of Germany now depends largely on the effectiveness of what is left of organization. In short it's a battle with bare hands. Their only objective is the annihilation of the Wehrmacht which soon will be caught between two advancing fronts, unless Hitler is to southern Germany.

The fact that the point where the Americans crossed was virtually undefended is significant of Field Marshal Von Rundstedt's shortage in manpower. No matter how strong the enemy attack was at the place, the German commander would have requested it if he could.

However, we don't have a full gauge of his weakness until we see what he does about staging a powerful counter attack to smash the Rhine bridgehead. That's his next logical move, and if he can't carry it out in force, then we shall know that he is indeed pretty well shot to pieces. We can discount the three weak and unsuccessful counter attacks the Germans managed at the outset, because they were caught off balance.

Rundstedt's Difficulty

Rundstedt's difficult will be that if he withdraws troops from the other points along the Rhine to the north, he will invite further Allied crossings at the weakened places. So he's in a nasty position, for his entire Rhenish line is jeopardized.

I think we may expect other Allied crossings of the Rhine to follow, and the northern flank where the 1st Canadian Army is fighting seems a likely sector for one. Rundstedt's recognition of this possibility is clearly shown in his strong defense of his bridgehead near Xanten. If Canadian and British troops force a crossing over the Rhine there, it will compel the Germans to withdraw their troops from Holland. The Netherlands' Enemy May Evacuate Netherlands

As a matter of fact, the retreat of the American forces on the east bank of the Rhine south of Cologne is likely to confuse the German to evacuate The Netherlands by every road open to avoid being cut off but because Rundstedt will need all the troops he can scrape together from all points. Evacuation of The Netherlands will be a godsend to Britain for the rocket bombs which have been causing death and destruction there are launched from bases on Netherlands territory.

The Allies obviously saved much time by the surprise crossing of the Rhine. The cracking of this great barrier normally would be one of the most difficult and dangerous amphibious operations of the whole war, and couldn't be undertaken without much preparation of work boats, were displayed and the walls covered with art work. There were several interesting exhibitions, one of them being composed of souvenirs from various war zones.

London, March 8 — (AP) — The crossing of the Rhine by American troops captured the imagination of Londoners more than anything since D-Day, and some morning newspapers proclaimed enthusiastically today that the end of German organized resistance now seemed surely at hand.

BROWN BOMBER PUT SEVENTH ON SHARKEY'S LIST

Boston Gob Says Dempsey Was the Hardest Puncher He Ever Met

Boston, March 2. (AP)—After bestowing silent—for more than eight years—honors on Boston's own Jack Dempsey as the hardest hitting ring foeman, hoiler, Jack Sharkey, Boston's former heavyweight champion has settled definitely stating that Jack Dempsey was a more effective puncher than Joe Louis, the current titleist.

Sharkey is considered the ablest authority, being the only one to fight both men.

Ignoring Dempsey's present conception of himself from the farmer's seat to opponents, Sharkey placed the ex-Manassa mauler first on his own first 10 list and the Brown Bomber seventh.

"The best I met, in order, were Jack Dempsey, Harry Wills, Tuffy Griffiths, Young Stribling, Mike McTigue, Max Schmeling, Joe Louis, Jimmy Maloney, Jack Delaney and George Godfrey," Sharkey told a sports writer yesterday last night.

Then he added: "let Mr. Louis fight guys of that calibre".

Toronto, March 2 — (CP) — Bill Cowtelle, who used to play hockey for Canadiens, has his own opinion as to which is the best hockey team in Canada. He has seen every team in Eastern Canada play as well as a calculating part of a few of the best in the west.

Well, Bill has watched the National Hockey League Canadiens play and tells Harry (Calgary Albertans) Sinden that the pro Canadiens are not the best team in the Dominion today. It's Copper Cliff, Ontario, Intermediate Nickels, who finished on top of the Quebec Senior League.

Such words of praise for the Canucks' farm team will be welcome to Roger (sorry) Wyatt, Hamilton and coach Frank Carlin, but undoubtedly the second place Queens Ace will be inclined to think that pro Bill's opinion is wrong. Royals boast a number of N.H.L. players in their on their line-up and it might be interesting to see the results of a game between the two clubs.

Meanwhile, Aces, current holders of the Allan Cup, have issued a second challenge for the championship emblem of Canadian hockey. Dotsie's frontmen in Vancouver, feel they should win the Allan Cup before they attempt to make arrangements for the five-game total-goal series. Don Denneny's Quebec team fared pretty well against the Aces last season and of the season and are looking to sweeping through their series with Ottawa Commandos. clan.

Aces, in accepting the Dotties challenge, stipulated that should the series get an official vote they will be willing to go through with it purely on an exhibition basis.

Getting back to Bill Cowtelle, he will probably never live to hear that he will never get the blame again for one to one hockey installed in a plane crash overseas.

Things and Such:

Heartbreak of the season: A. E. Hall, Toronto golfer of North Bay left the 6-9th standing in his last frame after a great exhibition of pleasing the other day, leaving him with a 46 score.

Quoting a Query: "Now that Maurice Richard has broken Joe Malone's record, will Charley Hamilton and coach Frank Carlin, but undoubtedly the second place Queens Ace will be inclined to think that pro Bill's opinion is wrong. New York, March 2.—(AP)—Frank Murray, coach, University of Virginia football coach, is frankly at odds with folks who have made a categorization of the one-year rule of United States college then No. 1 problem. "For 30 years I have been asking, Why can't football players have the same opportunity as other students? Why can't college have any regular University or College have to wait around a year before being permitted to compete in intercollegiate athletics?" Frank writes, "Nobody, as yet, has given me a suitable answer, though I have asked all the brainiacs and phony sayers."

Answering Himself.

Murray continues to ask another pesty question, then help to answer his questions. "Football players think started out with the best, of intentions has developed into the most unsatisfactory thing in football. I refer to the rule which stipulates that once a frosh has participated in as much as a single play in any varsity contest from ever representing any other institution in football. The object aimed to protect the coach of a smaller college who, having discovered some budding star in the prep ranks, we kept him having said star under wraps for a year before the other entrants, is the case of the large institution which gleefully corralled boys who could never hope to see action, thus effectively barring them from being regulars as colleges now do. Football players think has given you answer, Frank. We're going to have to do away with the "artificial" schools and the "regular" ones."

Shawinigan Cataracts Beat Valleyfield Braves

Shawinigan Falls, Que., March 2 —(CP)—Jimmy Tuupin scoring the winning goal in the last quarter of the second overtime period, last night ended his team's two-game total-goal series with Valleyfield Braves 6-5 and its 3-3 tieto Provincial Hockey League best-of-seven semi-final playoffs here.

Tuupin scored three points in all for his team and once assisted G. Carnegie to register one of the goals. The other Shawinigan marker was shot by Manny McIntyre.

Ted Campeau was the leading Valleyfield scorer with two goals. Other Braves' points were made by Rosario Pommette, Gerry Hanrahan and Bernard Vinet.

The first overtime period was called after both teams were tied 4-4. Campeau registered in the first two minutes of overtime and Carnegie made it even for Shawinigan less than five minutes later. The second overtime period failed to score, both teams still deadlocked and it was not until 16:14 that Tuupin, assisted by McIntyre, found a loophole in the Braves' defence to shoot the winning point.

All Wrong.

A certain couple, having been married about ten years, lived a life made up of little annoyances, irritations and bickerings. One day the husband ventured a friend advice which, however, only served to aggravate matters. On leaving he said to his friend: "Remember what I've told you and you'll be happy; how do you do it?"

The friend replied: "I simply tell my wife, 'I make a fuss of my wife, and she's not going to leave me.'"

The husband decided to try this method, and when on arriving home his wife opened the door, he kissed her. His wife burst into tears.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"Oh, dear!" sobbed his wife. "Fergus' dog has gone wrong indoor, I fall down and broke a lot of china, the maid has given notice, and now you come home drunk!"

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 636
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

No human mind is proof against selecting a bad opening lead. It may be correct according to rule. Or what best judgment would advise. But it could still turn out to your disadvantage.

You are declarer in the south at a contract of four spades in this deal:

	NORTH
	♠K 10 7
	♥K 9 2
	♦5 4
	♣K J 9 6 3
WEST		EAST
♠A 7		♠J 8 5
♥10 8 7		♥Q J 6 4
♦Q 9 7 3 2		♦K 10 8
♣5 2		♣Q 10 7
	SOUTH
	♠A Q 9 6 4 2
	♦A 6
	♣A 8 4

If the opening lead from west is a heart, you could be defeated if east returns a diamond at once. But the west opening lead may be the diamond five and east goes up with the king.

With four possible losers, starting you in the face, how should you plan? Whatever you do, keep west out of the lead. Why? So west can not lead a heart through your dummy king.

Refuse to take that first diamond trick. Drop your jack on it and let east keep it. He will return a diamond, win that with your ace and draw two trump rounds. Then lead club ace and a small club.

Play dummy club card for a finesse. East wins that. But now you are safe. No lead from east will defeat you. The holdup of your diamond ace for one round saved you twelve.

The holdup of an ace is common practice. But its advantages as an entry-stopper are often overlooked. Use it to play up those holes.

Perhaps nothing in bridge is so exasperating as a partner who complains about your opening lead. You are already unhappy about it. He should sympathize instead of criticize.

Usually, he is second-guessing himself. Probabilities are, the mug would have made the same bad lead you did if he had been sitting in your seat.

There is no arguing with such a guy. Anybody that mean wouldn't have the decency of admitting it even if you could prove it.

Hofmeyr Rebukes South Africans

Cape Town, March 9 —(CP)— Finance Minister Hofmeyr criticized South Africans for their attitude toward the war during the past two years.

Addressing a public meeting here, the minister said that for many South Africans the war had come to be "not a chance to serve, but rather an annoyance and a nuisance."

"We have allowed ourselves to think in terms of contraction of effort rather than of summoning our last reserves for a supreme achievement."

No one could go from South Africa to Italy without feeling rebuked, the minister said, referring to his recent visit to the warfronts. South Africa had been ravaged by war during her history, but her people did not know what the destruction of modern war meant. Even on a basis of her own interest there was an urgent call for South Africa to redouble her efforts, he said. South Africa could lead you did if he had been sitting not regain prosperity unless the rest of the world recovered from its present plight.

Oppose Sale Margarine

Margarine will definitely not be on sale to the general public in South Africa, Agriculture Minister Strauss announced following a behind-the-scenes battle brought on by the government's announcement that a certain amount of the butter substitute would be permitted in the Union to alleviate the butter shortage.

There would be no danger that the margarine industry would harm dairy farming as its distribution would be under the control of the dairy board, the minister said. The original official announcement said margarine would not be sold in shops but would be distributed through the Social Welfare Department only to needy persons in the lower income brackets.

Farmers strongly opposed the open sale of margarine as a menace to the dairy industry. If the butter shortage forced public sale of the substitute it should be tinted green, blue or pink in order to prevent its being passed off as butter by unscrupulous dealers, the farmers urged. The Rand Daily Mail countered editorially that this proposal was made not so much to prevent fraud as to discredit margarine in the eyes of the public.

Three-Way Struggle for Fourth Place in N.H.L. May Continue Until the Last Game of Season

Black Hawks Look to Have Best of Argument at the Present Time

By EDDIE LIU
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

That three-way struggle for fourth place in the National Hockey League may be no laughing matter for Boston Bruins and New York Rangers but Chicago Black Hawks today have good reason to need a chuckle in the direction of their rivals for the coveted position.

The Hawk fortunes appear to be on the upswing while those of Boston and New York seem to be in reverse.

Bruins haven't won since Feb. 18 when they beat Rangers and the Hawks themselves won only three downing Bruins the following night. Meanwhile Hawks have collected three victories and clambered into a fourth-place tie with Bruins, one point ahead of Rangers.

Boston, Rangers Bomb

And last night both Boston and the New York were defeated, Bruins 3-2 by Canadiens at Montreal and Rangers 7-3 by Red Wings at Detroit.

Canadiens started on the road to victory when Elmer Lach blasted in a rebound 10 seconds from the Boston nets from a face-off midway through the second period. Butch Bouchard and Kenny Mosdell added others in the 3-2 frame before Bill Thoms and Herb Cain scored for Bruins.

Meanwhile, Canadiens defenceman, and Frank Mario, Boston defenceman, engaged in a first-period collision and were taken to hospital. Mario suffered a possible broken ankle and Mario with a possible broken leg.

Red Wings Trouble

Red Wings had little trouble with Rangers. Leo Reise got his first goal since Dec. 17 and Buckie McDonald opened scoring for Detroit. Then Rangers tied with Eddie Bruneteau and Joe Carveth. Detroit then went ahead to stay for the period ended, Fred Hunt of Rangers and Carl Liscombe of Wings matched goals in a third period collision and were taken to hospital. Hunt suffered a possible broken ankle and Mario with a possible broken leg.

Ted Lindsay, Steve Wochy and Gerry Couvelis, his second of the night, scored before Fred Thrower, Rangers' goalie, got to bench his all-time point total to 515 and break Bill Cowley's previous mark of 514.

Miami, March 9 — (AP) — It is pleasing indeed to come back after three years away from the golfing scene and find little Ben Hogan still whipping out those crisp drives and iron shots and Sammy Sneed still belting the ball that same fiery country mile.

Of course, the picture isn't quite the same.

Hogan is a lieutenant now, on temporary duty coaching and instructing the boys at an army air force hospital here, and Sammy is not long away from a hitch in the navy.

Hogan teamed with P.G.A. president Ed Dudley to whip Ky Laffoon and Jack Grout eight and seven in the first round of the fourball invitation yesterday.

Because they had streaks of looking so good and Dudley, at 42, still was getting there with the accuracy and money needed, neither their match today with Byron Nelson and Harold (Jug) McSpaden promises to be the top event of the warm-up tourney.

The other second-round matches, all at 36 holes, sent Chick Reise and Claude Harmon against Perry Picard and Johnny Revolta, only former winners in the field; Sneed and P.G.A. champion Bob Hamilton against Craig Wood and Tony Penna, and Frank Stranahan and Joe Zarhardt against Denny Shute and Sam Byrd.

The international flavor went out of the tournament yesterday when Sneed and Hamilton thrashed Stanley Horne of Montreal and Jules Rizzi of Ottawa 10 and 8 to book a four at the end of the morning round, the Canadians never Struck ened.

CAPS WIN FIRST GAME IN 3 WEEKS

(By The Canadian Press)

In their first victory in three weeks, Indianapolis Capitals bettered their chances for a berth in the American Hockey League play-offs when they defeated Providence Reds 3-1 last night.

Putting an end to their losing streak, Capitals moved up to within two points of second-place Pittsburgh Hornets in the league's western division.

Pete Lewick accounted for the only tally of the first period that gave the Capitals a 1-0 lead over the Hornets. Roger Gagne evened the score for Pittsburgh in the second frame and from then on it was a bitter struggle for the breaking of the 1-all tie.

The tie was snapped after more than 14 minutes of play in the third period by Cy Rouse, Fred goal for the Caps less than three minutes before the end of the game.

Shifty Quebec Aces Eliminate Commandos

Ottawa, March 9 —(CP)— The shifty Quebec Aces eliminated Ottawa Commandos from the City Senior Hockey League play-offs last night by defeating them 4-1 before a crowd of 4,791 fans.

Bob Thorpe drew first blood for the Aces at 11:34 of the first period. Jim Smith equalized for Commandos at 17:26.

Aces took the offensive as the second period opened and Maxy Bentley, with Tondreau assisting, put Aces one goal ahead. Then Edith Marchand, playing only in seven minutes later, Commandos missed unable to hold the visitors in check. Flay dragged in the third frame and it was late in the period before Emberley slipped through to notch the final Quebec goal.

Hamilton, Glanford Curlers Win Three Of Five Trophies

Hamilton, March 8. (CP)—Hamilton and Glanford, Ont., curlers last night captured three of the five trophies in the 34th annual Hamilton bonspiel, the Spectator, Westinghouse and Wilson events. Tom Beattie and his Toronto Victoria quartet won the Hamilton trophy and the Canty Memorial play reached the finals.

Gordon Campbell of Hamilton edged veteran Dr. A. E. Walker of Hamilton Victorias 12-10 to snare the Spectator Trophy, the Wilson went to H. G. Turnbull and his Hamilton rink.

Two Glanford rinks met in the final of the Westinghouse trophy, Mel Mead taking the Canty trophy with a single shot on the last end. He defeated skip Bob Murphy 13-11.

Beattie edged Dr. M. J. Hunt-sperles of Prince Albert, Sask., 8-6 to win the Harstone event.

The Wilson finals rinks led by D. T. White and C. W. Mackinlay meet in the finals of the Canty Memorial.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER 15

"Now you see Fran," Cherry started better at last, with the bright day going dark about her, "Fran's the amazing sort you have a side glance. 'How d'you mean?'

"She brought me down to Friday, to make arrangements and engage rooms, on Thursday, and she was—well, she was—

"I didn't know Fran was there! He was honestly astonished. "Did she come to see Allie, Rosamond?"

"Well, apparently she didn't," Again Cherry must stand corrected about Fran. Evidently the solution occurred to her. Fran had learned in some way that Kelly was there, that by an extraordinary accident he was the Rasmussen's guest, and she had deliberately avoided him.

Perhaps she had made her other trip only to ascertain that he had happened to mention him. Whatever she had done, Cherry knew she could believe Kelly now, for his consternation at the thought of her having been so near and his having missed her was unmistakably genuine.

This might be her chance to speak for Fran.

"Maybe she didn't want to see you, Kelly. Maybe thought it would be too sad," she offered timidly.

"I haven't any illusions as to its being any use, if by 'it' you mean my feeling for her," he answered decisively, almost sarcastically, and there was a silence. After a moment or two he said that he was sorry to be so rude, and they talked rather awkward figures of other things until they were at ease again.

But the morning's gala mood was hard to recapture, and Cherry felt something lacking in the beginning of the day. The bridge and the Sausalito hills were wreathed and buried in fog; the picnic turned itself into a house party. Three or four friends had been asked to lunch with Kelly, all bringing their contributions, and more asked to the woods or the beach than to the living room.

But the gayest of these frankfurters at the open fire, toasted their buns, ate them with dripping and burning, had brewed coffee, and after the meal, while the women cleared the room and got the kitchen in order, the men went out for a walk. Cherry liked gentle Mr. Wilcox and the talented portrait painter, Helena Yare, but she felt stunned of Kelly's company and drifted indoors with the others and dried the dishes in a sober mood of disappointment.

Immediately afterward, however, matters took a turn for the better. Rosamond came back, reporting best of all spring afternoon so beautiful for walking that the entire party would go along, and presently they were briskly mounting a hill trail, crossing up-planted slopes where cattle veered away from them in the fog.

Cherry's cheeks glowed; more than once the others smiled to hear her laughing delightedly.

"Oh, Kelly," she said ingenuously when they were bad friends the first time again, "it's such fun here! Why don't we do this always?"

"All right by me," Kelly said, busy with drinks at Cherry quite naturally took charge of him in a way, going to the kitchen for hot water, stopping the others' protests to make toast.

"It seems so horrible to go out again into the fog!"

"We'll give you girls the bedroom," Kelly arranged it, "and we can go over to the studio and bunk there."

"Oh, no!" Cherry turned a fire-flushed face toward the room. "I was only fooling! I have to be at Judge Marshbanks' for dinner."

"We have to go. We'll take you over," said little Mrs. Wilcox.

"No, I'm responsible," Kelly told them. "I brought her here and I'll see that she gets back safely."

All the driving carefully in the fog, he talked off Fran.

Cherry leaned against the rough homespun shoulder of Kelly's coat and listened dreamily although this talk was mostly about Fran. She was deliciously tired after the long day in the open air, and Kelly's nearness, his voice, and how proud she would be to belong to him in the front seat of his car, were all exciting against him.

They reached the Marshbanks' house only too soon for her, and she said good night and ran up the long flight of steps. Mrs. Marshbanks is to Palo Alto had not been asked of her; Martha Lee had not called her, with the message that Miss Amy had gone for a ride but would shortly be there, and her friend May told her that she was to have the room next to Amy's as usual.

Cherry found a comfortable robe, slippers and a nightgown laid out for her. She was antiseptic-ing the comfort of an hour's reading before Amy arrived when there was a knock at her door.

A little puzzled, she said "Come in" in her heart leaping with irrational terror when the invitation was accepted by old Mrs. Marshbanks, the formidable woman who was her grandmother and Amy's.

"I hoped I'd find you alone, Miss Rawlings. I wanted to speak to you," Jora Marshbanks said. She sank into a nearby chair, seated herself and by a slight inclination of her head indicated that Cherry was also to be seated.

"I don't know whether you know," the old woman began, with a steady look, "how extremely distasteful your presence in this house...You should know, for I've asked her son to speak to me, but I have no idea that he has done so."

For a few seconds the words did not seem to make sense to Cherry; their shocking impact reached her, in all its deadly simplicity and she felt her throat thicken and her hands grow cold.

"Or has he done so?" demanded Mrs. Marshbanks.

"He—he—No," was all Cherry could feebly stammer.

"I thought he hadn't. I thought that a person of your position would hardly come here after any suggestion from him. I am—I am astonished at this house," said the old lady, in a sort of cold thinking. "Did you think I slipped yet? I am asking you civilly not to make it a habit to come here."

Cherry sat staring at her in a fascinated horror of silence.

"Have you any answer, child?" said the inflexible voice. "You have my very presence here is an —an insult to decency and to me. I bitterly regret the circumstances that have brought you again to my house."

"I am a daughter of the house!" Cherry answered, her own words surprising her as much as they could possibly have surprised her companion.

"How dare you say that!" Mrs. Marshbanks said sharply. "You have absolutely no claim. You have been well established, in life; you have held card for more. Be careful that you don't lose even what you have!"

"I am not afraid of losing it, and I don't care for it," said Cherry, rising, at white heat. "I will come to this house 'as long as' Amy and Judge Jud want me! I will stay with you would go out of my room! I am sorry you are afraid of your guests in my veins!"

"And you think you can go on with your college work, be asked about in good society, once your history is known?" the older woman demanded, rising. "You think that Amy will continue to think you the most charming pal in the world once she knows that you were her sister, that you are the living reminder of her father's weakness and immorality. I think you won't risk that. I think you'll take good care that Amy does not ruin your own people from being disgraced in the eyes of the world. Good night, child. Good night, too, you know."

"Grandmother, son!" cried Cherry. "What about Gran's own son?" she asked, coming in from her room, tired and cold and blown after her long ride. "What's Uncle Jud done? Why what's...." She looked in amazement and concern from one face to the other. "What is it?" she asked. "What were you saying about Uncle Jud?"

There was silence while the three looked at one another. It was Cherry's voice that broke it.

"Then we stood like statues," Cherry said, telling Kelly about it a few weeks later, "until I thought we must all be insane! Amy knew something was horribly wrong, and she kept asking, 'What is it? What is it?' and old Mrs. Marshbanks was sort of panting, and she wouldn't say anything, and I couldn't. And finally Amy said: 'I know! It's about Uncle Jud, because I heard Cherry say so!'

"'You hadn't said so!' Kelly was lying face down in the fresh deep grass now, biting a blade thoughtfully; he looked up at her. The sun was sinking. Below the hill where Cherry and Kelly were sitting were the lake and the college buildings, and beyond them the roofs of Palo Alto.

"No, I haven't said a word about the judge, but I had said 'your son' and Amy heard that. Cherry said that she'd heard Uncle Jud say so. That old devil—that's the kindest word I can find for him—couldn't break off my friendship with Amy, and I'd said that I would, and I mean her son is to look after her family reputation hereafter!"

"Kelly, you wouldn't help me to mind that. . . Well, after we'd all stood petrified by what seemed a long hour, cold Mrs. Marshbanks said to Amy, 'It is extremely distasteful to me that the conversation of others' and walked out of the room. Of course Amy was mad with curiosity and so I pretended that I'd heard grandmother say that because Emma was once their nurse, and she didn't think it was a very suitable friendship for her grandaughter."

"Good girl, Cherry!"

"Yes, but Amy'd heard something, too, you know. She said right away that she'd always suspected that her Uncle Jud was my father. I denied it, but she thought it all the more. And, Kelly, Cherry finished, in a voice of infinite distress: "I can't have her go on thinking that! I simply can't! It can't fail to hurt."

"That was how long ago?"

"Three nights! We came back from your house."

"Cherry, today, D'you suppose the old ghoul told Amy anything more?"

"I don't think she did. I don't imagine she'd ever mention it. Amy lives with the Monroes to Harvard after all, and I believe that old Mrs. Marshbanks will just let it all hide matter drop."

"She very probably doesn't know that Amy suspecting at all, but if she walked out of the room."

"The way I think it is. I was so upset," Cherry went on, "that I wrote it all to Aunt Emma. I had her never mentioned, she said that the best thing to do was to keep mum about it. But, Kelly, you know how girls are. They get gossiping, and Amy's bound to tell Jud, and it'll gradually get around."

"What does the Judge think? He's the one to speak to."

"But how could he—how utterly flat it would be for him to send for Amy and tell her that he isn't her father! It would be so—so humiliating for him, and so flat! And besides that, I think Amy won't believe him."

"But I hate to know the truth about your real father. Why not? You've taken it on the chin long enough. All Jud can do is tell you'll see he thinks Amy ought to know."

"You always say that, Kelly. You always make things seem so simple."

"I wish I could work out my own problems," he said, looking away with darkened eyes.

There was a long silence, Kelly lost himself, on his elbows and stared at her.

"What are you thinking?" Cherry said.

"That you look very nice, today. That's all. I'm thinking that you'll see he thinks Amy ought to know."

"You always say that, Kelly. You always make things seem so simple."

"I wish I could work out my own problems," he said, looking away with darkened eyes.

POLICE COURT

Toronto Woman Given Nine Days After Conviction

"Is it true you were an informer or stool-pigeon for a certain law enforcement officer?" was the first question asked Attorney B. C. Donnelly, Toronto lawyer who appeared in police court here today charged with assaulting Mrs. Pearl Aitkinson of Trenton.

In reply Mrs. Dorten said she had been employed in the above-suggested capacity for "13 years."

After hearing much contradictory evidence in a case that saw Mrs. Dorten quite visibly excited during her own defence and cross examination, Magistrate T. V. Wills convicted the woman and sentenced her to serve nine days, to date from the time of her arrest. As she had been on remand for that period the prisoner was released from custody at the termination of the court.

During the proceedings the case had to be adjourned briefly when one of the principal Crown witnesses, Mrs. Daisy Donaldson, refused to testify. Mrs. Donaldson had to be escorted from the court room by police to prevent the charge arose out of a scuffle, that occurred in the city hall on Feb. 26th.

Toronto Woman Given Nine Days After Conviction

when Mrs. Dorten was alleged to have struck Mrs. Aitkinson. Mrs. Dorten denied the accusations, claiming it was Mrs. Donaldson who was fighting with Mrs. Aitkinson. After hearing the evidence of Sergt. Jack Kidd of Toronto, the court ruled the accused woman guilty. A second charge of perjury was dismissed at the request of Crown Attorney Donman.

Fined $10.

Robert McCoy, 18, of Belleville, was fined $15, and costs after pleading guilty to purchasing beer for a person under 21 years of his own. Police Inspector Hayes told the court McCoy had been seen to hook bearing the name of R. L. Jones of Toronto and had erased the name substituting his own. This looks like a fabrication of crime," commented His Worship.

Convicted of Vagrancy.

James Nevery, 17 of Purdy Street was convicted on a vagrancy charge and placed on probation for one year. "This boy is incorrigible. His own parents and police inform me he can be seen wandering about the streets at 2 hours in the night," revealed Mr. Donman, who suggested the strap be applied. "We'll reserve that part of the punishment," added His Worship. Besides being placed on probation, Magistrate Wills ordered the lad to go to work and stay in his home each night before eleven o'clock.

Will Be Turned Over.

Hazel Paul Bergeron, Three Rivers, Que., appeared charged with failing to notify the National Selective Board of his change of address. He pleaded guilty and upon the record of Cpl. Wm. Beatty, of the R.C.M.P., will be subsequently turned over to the immigration authorities at Kingston. Bergeron has been working on the Bay bridge in Trenton for the past few months. He also paid a fine of $26.00 and costs, that was imposed.

Hun Barge "Admiral" Chugging Down Rhine Gets Big Surprise

With the United States 1st Army at Remagen Bridgehead, March 8 (AP)—The luckiest German encountered by United States 1st Army troops, who crossed the Rhine Wednesday was a German barge skipper who, upon chugging down the river in a barge at an embarrassingly slow speed, found American troops leveled guns at him and his barge. Aboard the barge were his wife and blue serge, and his crew, just stood in the boat with their hands up.

Ice Harvest One of Best In Recent Years

Despite labor-saving devices manufacturers claim that take speed-up through patterned ice-fields and the reliable load-operated "conveyor" are blamed for the shortage in the Government Dock, where local ice firms are nearing the end of the season's harvest.

The ice, averaging some sixteen inches in thickness, is said by dealers to be the best sample taken from the bay in some years. There is little evidence of snow-ice in this particular ice, and the cakes show remarkable clarity.

Loading operations are made easy by simple gadgets aided by the engines of motor trucks. Harry Smith uses a hoist which is operated by the rear wheel of his truck, raising a rear wheel of a jacked-up truck to which is attached a pulley and rope. The car is thrown in gear, the rope winds around the pulley and up comes the ice load.

Black's men are using a long cant-hook to be pulled up by means of a rope attached to a truck, which simply backs up and pulls the load from the ice to waiting trucks.

An accident which was not without humor occurred this week when one of the Smith trucks dropped partially through thin ice near coal piles at the east end of the wharf. The rear of the vehicle sagged through with the front wheels pinching up in an angle of forty five degrees. The truck was extricated with only some dirty ice on board.

4 MILLION HOUSES NEEDED IN BRITAIN AT END OF WAR

2,500,000 Needed at Once for 10 Million People Sharing Homes

By MARGARET BUTLER
Reuters Staff Writer

London, March 9 —(Reuters)— Britain is facing the greatest housing famine in her history. Solving it is a task second only to winning the war. Four million houses will be required as soon as the hostilities end, while 2,500,000 are needed immediately for 10,000,000 men, women and children sharing homes with other families.

Thousands of men coming back from the war, many thousands of mothers and children still evacuated in "safe areas" will be without homes unless drastic steps are taken at once to provide this accommodation.

New houses have not been built in Britain for more than four years. Many thousands have been destroyed or badly damaged by air attacks.

Houses unaffected have had no paint or repairs since the war began.

Many damaged by bombs are still fit to live in but with tarpaulin for roof and paper instead of glass in the windows. No stretch of imagination could describe them as comfortable.

London faces the greatest problem. Here well over 1,000,000 homes were damaged by flying bombs last summer and some 80,000 were destroyed or made unfit to live in.

Twenty-one thousand houses have been requisitioned for more than 150,000 people in addition to nearly 100,000 billeted, but it is not enough.

Three hundred thousand prefabricated houses have been ordered from the United States, British Columbia offered 100,000 plywood homes. Pre-fabricated but permanent houses are coming from Sweden where Britain is to purchase the whole export production—about 20,000 a year—and a British Commission is now in Sweden arranging for their delivery.

But supplying these houses will take time, and the need is immediate.

Washington Spotlight

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, March 8 —(CP)— President Roosevelt touched upon something that may be a thorny problem for the major peace-making powers when he told a Press Conference it might be a good idea to have German ex-soldiers put to work restoring war-wrecked Russian cities.

Whatever the feelings may be against Nazis and Germans generally, the Anglo-Saxon people are not likely to look with favor on anything that smacks of slave labor.

But there is reason to believe the Russians, who feel differently about such things, will want to force the Germans to help restore what they so wantonly destroyed in the land of the Soviets.

Perhaps the President's remark, which was in reply to a question about his stand on the question of forced labor, was a feeler to sound out public reaction.

There has already been editorial reaction against the idea, with criticism finding it repugnant to Anglo-Saxon ideas of humanity and ill-advised except that it would serve the Germans right. If it could be done without making them martyrs, and without upsetting the post-war economic and labor relations structure.

Foreign correspondents lunching at the Press Club were taking some satisfaction from a forecast that the war in Europe will end during the San Francisco conference, until a London correspondent suggested: "That's such an optimistic hope for early victory but it's a pessimistic idea of the length of the conference."

Reaction to the President's appeal to the senate to avoid the mistake of 25 years ago when it kept the United States out of the league of nations seems to indicate grounds for hope that this time the treaty-making body of congress will approve full collaboration for collective security. But the fact remains that such approval requires at least two-thirds of the voting strength of the senate. There are two senators for every state regardless of population and it would be possible for the senators representing only a small fraction of the population to swing a vote against the proposed treaty.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking the 2nd half of his first cigar, and ma said, William, I want your advice!

It's any particular subject pop said, and ma said, Well naturally. You know how long I've been holding those 10 shares of General Amalgamation stock that you advised me not to buy in the first place? Well, it's gone up a quarter of a point last, and I've been wondering whether to hurry and sell it before it has time to sink back to its old monotonic level again. So what would you advise, William? she said.

Well, when an apparently dead stock starts to show signs of life, it's generally an indication that there's some kind of activity going on behind the scenes, pop said, and ma said, Then you mean I ought to sell?

On the contrary, I mean you ought to hold on to it till you find out what it's all about, pop said, and ma said, But, William, maybe those ruthless specialters have forced it up just as a lure to induce innocent investors to hold on to it till it drops down to practically nothing. What do you think, William? she said.

I've gode, you asked for my advice and I gave it to you, what more can I do? pop said, and ma said, You can reconsider for land sakes, can't you?

Okay, I reconsider and advise you to sell it no matter what anybody advises, pop said, and ma said, Well I'm relieved to hear you say so, because this afternoon I sold the man at the bank to sell it for me, and you seem to know so much about the stock market I'm sure you've given a good advice, and I certainly hope you haven't advised me wrong.

I've gode it's a crooked world and if I marry any more women I believe I will write a book about it, pop said.

Saying it from in back of the sporting page.

PICKS FRANK McCOOL

Detroit, March 8 —(AP)—Coach Frank Selke of the Montreal Canadiens today named goalie Frank McCool of Toronto Maple Leafs his choice for rookie of the year in the National Hockey League.

"McCool hasn't much chance for the Vezina Trophy for goalies because Bill Durnan of the Canadiens has that safely in hand," said Boucher. "But Frank's work entitles him to some honor and I would call him the season's best newcomer."

GERMAN ATTACK ON BRIDGEHEAD REPULSED DANZIG AND STETTIN UNDER ARTILLERY FIRE

Russians Win Some Streets in Altdamm Suburb of Stettin

Reds Pouring Across Oder On Both Sides of Kuestrin

London, March 10 (AP)—Russian forces apparently have won some streets in Altdamm, the east-side suburb of Stettin, and may have gained a footiond on the west side of the Dammscher Lake just north of Stettin's Baltic port, Moscow dispatches reported today.

Stettin itself was under artillery fire for the first time, and the Russians also were lobbing shells into the defenses of Danzig.

Altdamm is 3-1-2 miles east of Stettin on the east side of the Oder. Dammscher Lake is the Lagoon-like water 2 1-2 miles wide and 10 miles long northwest of Stettin through which the Oder finds its way to the sea.

"Altdamm was subjected to intense artillery and mortar fire and the Russians appeared to have won some streets in this northern part of Stettin," correspondents in Moscow reported.

"Soviet engineer units which have been moving out into the Dammscher Lake appeared to have won some places on the western bank under heavy artillery fire from guns firing from the eastern bank on Stolzenhagen, Fraendorf and Zuelsdorf, one report said.

Four Reinforcements Arrive.

The Germans said the Russians were pouring reinforcements across the Oder River from the plain of Kuestrin, and Moscow said other fresh troops had been thrown into the outskirts of both Stettin and Danzig.

Paris radio early today said one of the new Russian armies driving on Danzig had broken into the city, and street-fighting was under way.

Henry Cassen, United Press correspondent at Moscow, said Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's 1st White Russian Army was consolidating its west bank Oder river bridgehead in the fierce assault on Berlin although thrown back from below St. Germain, 20 miles from the capital, after penetrating to that town Thursday.

The Russian drive from Kuestrin, Oder fortress which Berlin said had been partly overwhelmed, was in accounts appeared to be at least the gravest danger of a Nazi-side offensive into the heart of Germany, despite the fact that the Russian High Command for the third successive day recorded the action in military secrecy.

Announced in Communique.

The regular Soviet communique announced that Danzig had been rolled within five miles of the docks of Stettin, great, Baltic port for Berlin, and had closed to within nine miles of Danzig City in the area where scores of thousands of Germans are trapped.

The new soldiers said Zhukov's northern wing gained three to five miles yesterday through 80 miles of ice east of Stettin, capturing Mostkiebeck, Kolbitzow, Wussow, all of Altdamm gateway city to the big enemy stronghold at the mouth of the Oder.

North of Stettin, Moscow said, Russian troops "on the Pomeranian" only a mile from the narrow channel leading to Stettin's Dammscher See to Stettin. South of the Baltic city itself the Germans said their troops had abandoned Greifenhagen, on the Oder's east bank 11 miles upstream.

The 2nd White Russian army, driving forward through Pyritz, overwhelmed the Nazi Pomeranian coast and Rhetelfelde, nine miles southwest of Danzig and 15 miles south of Gdynia, and cut the last communications hub, Moscow said 4,000 Germans were slain in Stolp.

AIR CANOPY KEPT OVER BRIDGEHEAD ACROSS RHINE R.

Bombers From Britain Hit Communications In Effort To Block Supplies Coming Up

London, March 9—(CP)—Swarms of U. S. 8th Air Force planes today kept a constant air canopy over American troops crossing their Remagen bridgehead across the Rhine.

As the planes repelled German airmen's attempts to hit the Ludendorf bridge—lifeline to the bridgehead area—Allied heavy bombers from Britain again hit communications "behind enemy lines. The German radio reported that the "swarms" of bombers approached western and southwestern Germany before 11 a.m.

Eighteen German planes were downed over the battlefront yesterday—14 by Ninth Air Force pilots and four by the R.A.F. Seven were knocked down as they tried to break through for a crack at the bridge and troops on the other side.

Ninth Air Force dive-bombers, supporting the British Second Air Force guarding 1st Canadian Army flank fighting in the West area, shot down 11 German planes.

Nine American and four R.A.F. planes were lost.

Last night British underwent its 151st attack of the month and its 16th in succession by R.A.F. Mosquitos. The Air Ministry said it was the heaviest attack of the present series, during which the Mosquitos have dropped more than 1,200 tons of bombs on the enemy capital.

Mosquitos also struck at road and rail targets in the Ruhr and as far east as Magdeburg.

U. S. 8th Air Force bombers yesterday hit five railway centres behind the battlefront, including Hamm, key German junction, at a cost of 10 bombers and 15 fighters. The actual raiding force of Flying Fortress bombers from Italy flew within 30 miles of Munich, Nazi shrine, and attacked Nazi communications for the third successive day.

British Spitfire bombers hammered rocket installations in the Netherlands and Germany in close attending in France between assaults.

Cpl. E. A. Nault, of Meadow Lake, Saskatoon, Sask., poses a dramatic sign on the road to Calcar, Germany, to remind Allied soldiers not to fraternize with the enemy.

Cost of Interest, Debt Servicing Show Reduction

Toronto, March 10 (CP) A reduction of $1,282,487 in the cost of interest and debt servicing—$27,109,209 reduction in the province's funded debt, and payment of $123,000 of the province's debt were announced by Provincial Treasurer Leslie Frost in his budget address yesterday.

Net cost of interest and foreign exchange had been lowered in two years from $22,944,000 for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1944, to $20,-962,600 for the year ending March 31.

"This impressive accomplishment," said Mr. Frost, "is the result of following sound policy, especially in regard to re-financing maturing obligations."

Treasury bills amounting to $2,-000,000 had all been paid off, while added to the $27,109,209 reduction in the funded debt was a corresponding decrease of $30,000,209.

There would be further reductions in interest charges in the next fiscal year, Mr. Frost said, when $123,000 of the province's bonded interest charges on $15,000,000 borrowed in New York in May, 1941, on a three-year term. A coupon rate of 2½ per cent and cost of the debentures had resulted in the money costing only 2 per cent.

It had been decided to refund the whole loan in New York, and the interest cost of slightly less than half that of the existing loan had been obtained. The actual saving during currency of the loan would be in excess of a quarter of a million dollars per annum.

"This one transaction," said Mr. Frost, "is a notable achievement in government financing by this province and indicates the high credit standing of the province."

CANADIANS TAKE STRONGPOINT IN WESEL TRIANGLE

Encounter Stiffest Fight in Effort to Crack German North Gate

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army in Germany, March 10 (CP)—Canadian infantry of the 4th Canadian Division today captured Veen, a strongpoint in the Wesel triangle west of the Rhine—which now has been compressed by Canadian, British and United States troops into an area of 12 square miles.

For three days several hundred German paratroopers have fiercely held the fortified village of Veen—three miles south of fallen Xanten—but the Canadian infantry, supported by persistent attacks in extremely heavy fighting.

Quickly Clearing Woods.

North of Veen, the 2nd Canadian Infantry Division advanced more than two miles southeast of Xanten around the southern end of the Alterrhein Lagoon south of the Wesel bend in the Rhine.

Western Canadian and Quebec French-speaking troops of the division were swiftly clearing a large area, 1½ miles due south of Xanten, while other Quebec and western troops were probing down the main Xanten-Wesel highway.

The Canadians were fighting against two divisions of fiercely-resisting German paratroopers, backed by the greatest concentration of artillery fire ever turned against the 1st Canadian Army.

Astride Highway.

Scottish troops of the 1st Canadian Army were astride a highway two miles south of the 2nd Division's spearhead. U.S. 8th Army infantry cleared Geesberg and advanced on the right of the British column.

Thus Canadian, British and American forces all were within 5½ miles of Wesel.

The German paratroopers are fighting a particularly orderly withdrawal under a screen of shell fire from guns across the Rhine around Wesel, but the enemy now has lost his last good lateral road and the capture of Veen means the base of his triangle had to be shortened.

Mystery About Bridge.

There is a mystery about the state of the road bridge and the massive rail bridge across the Rhine at Wesel. It was at first believed that they had been destroyed, but some reports now indicate both may be intact. The Germans could be expected to destroy the bridges on the bridges to make them appear to have been blown.

At any rate they probably are prepared for demolition if not already blown, and it will be a miracle if either is captured in usable condition.

YANKS SUFFOCATE THOUSANDS OF JAPS ON LUZON

Enemy Sealed Up and Suffocated in Caves East of Manila

Manila, March 10 — (AP)—Silent on Japanese reports that Mindanao Island has been invaded, Allied officials disclosed today that several thousand of the enemy have been sealed up and suffocated in caves east of Manila by United States troops operating with phosphorous grenades, flame-throwers and demolition charges.

American successes east of Manila carried the invaders past the first line of a maze of caves and tunnels known as the Shimbu Line, the guest heavily fortified defences encountered on Luzon.

Between "several thousand" dead Japanese there probably pushed the foe's casualties on Luzon, invaded Jan. 9, to around 100,000.

The forces of Lt.-Gen. Yamashita had laid careful plans to exact a fearful toll of Americans making a frontal assault on the Shimbu Line, stretching between Wawa and Antipolo, 14 miles east of Manila.

Plan is Foiled

This plan was foiled by a systematic attack which drove down the Japanese to die in the caves "without taking any compensating toll on the troops" The Japanese had curved the approaching lateral line to prevent shells from reaching the inner positions.

Flat-trajectory artillery and plane attacks drove the Japanese into the depths. They were kept there by flame-throwers and white phosphorous hand grenades. Thus covered, demolition squads planted explosives which sealed off the four or five lateral tunnels leading from each underground compartment. The 10-foot vertical shafts were closed by explosives.

One brigade of the 1st Cavalry Division in a 46-hour period accounted for 187 caves and 646 outlets.

It was also disclosed Americans on Luzon have succeeded in capturing launching devices used by the Japanese to fire eight-inch rockets.

Headquarters described the weapon as "extremely powerful" but of doubtful accuracy.

American planes bombed Zamboanga, Mindanao's biggest city.

BIGGEST B-29 RAID OF WAR SPREADS FIRES OVER TOKYO

Incendiary Bombs by The Thousands Pour Down From 300 Superfortresses

Guam, March 10. (AP)—A "hell-ish sea of fire" touched off by the greatest raid ever made by superfortresses, engulfed the heart of Tokyo today and spread to the Imperial Palace grounds.

"It looked like the whole damn town was burning", said one airman returning from the first mass night-time raid on the enemy capital.

More than 300 B-29s poured thousands of incendiaries on the city causing "no more damage than ego" than the record Feb. 25 raid which devastated 360 city blocks, said Brig.-Gen. Thomas S. Power.

"The area blew up like literally a sea of flame," Power reported after two hours and 40 minutes "It was the greatest show on earth".

A Japanese communique asserted fires broke out at the Imperial Palace but were put out before 3 a.m. Tuesday. Tokyo radio said flames "reached the Emperor's palaces," but the communique declared all fires were under control by 8 a.m. Tuesday. Tokyo radio said fires were engulfing by flames.

An estimated 1,000 Japanese perished in the target area.

1,200 Tons Dropped.

The B-29s dropped an estimated 1,200 tons of bombs—every bomb in the superfortress' traffic manifest, completed central Tokyo from home targets to the Marianas—causing small factories not sufficiently valuable for precision bombing and industrial workers homes.

The greatest precision landing-strip bombing in the Pacific fired 360 Tokyo city blocks as 300 superfortresses roared over the city Feb. 25. Total tonnage of that night's attack was little more than half today's record, for which every plane was carried a greater load than on any of the 11 preceding bombardments, Gen. Power said.

Tokyo radio reported fires still were burning many hours after the Feb. 25 attack. Today, Tokyo radio said, Tokyo also claimed 15 B-29s were destroyed, although in fact only there was no U.S. confirmation.

Yesterday's Raid.

Power said the area turned into "a sea of flame" was larger than the ten square miles originally planned. Possibly it again was hit today, Gen. Power said. The largest area was approximately four miles by two miles.

Senior Officer on the raid, Power flew with Lt.-Gen. Barney Giles and over Tokyo to observe results.

TO BRING PART BACK

Washington, March 10—(AP)—The War Department said today that part of the troops in Europe back to the United States will be retained before sending them to the war in the Pacific and some discharges will be granted under Controller General Chief of the Army Service Forces Somervell said in a broadcast address (COB).

Troops Supported By Tanks Stopped Cold by Americans

Massive Forces Continue To Cross Ludendorf Bridge

Paris, March 10 (AP) — Thinly-spread German infantry struck at the 50-squaremile U.S. 1st. Army bridgehead over the Rhine at Remagen today, but were stopped cold at noon by thousands of infantrymen sped over the bridge in a race against enemy columbns moving up for battle.

A front dispatch said several hundred Germans supported by armor were halted in a thrust on the Rhine bridgehead, five miles deep and ten or more wide.

Two miles from Cochem.

Further upstream the U.S. 3rd. Army smashed forward to within two miles of Cochem, home of 5,000 of the enemy were boxed in northwest of the city by the junction of the 1st. and 3rd. Armies.

To the north the 21st Canadian Army compressed the Wesel pocket, containing the last German bridgehead between the Rhine-Ijssel lands border and Cologne, to a 12 square mile area.

Ontario infantry of the 4th. Canadian Armoured Division seized Veen, strongpoint three miles south of Fallen Xanten, Canadian Press War Correspondent J. Munro Reported.

The build-up of the U.S. 1st. Army's wedge over highlands across the river from Remagen continued overnight with hundreds of tons of supplies hurried across the Ludendorf bridgehead under fire from the Ehrenbreitstein fortress.

German convoys, desperately trying to escape in night travel, converged on the bridgehead, and a major, perhaps decisive, battle impended.

But the initial German counterattack in the Remagen area which were forces rolling over the bridge that a formal correspondent declared "the Germans already have lost the race."

The 3rd Army's 4th armored division seized Roebenach, on "a main road two miles from the tottering Cochem, a city of 80,000 population.

Further northwest the 3rd and 1st Armies had linked at the Moselle River southeast of Treves to trap an 20,000 or more Germans in the Treves area. The 1st Army's 5th infantry Division has pushed up to the Eifel mountains above Cochem, within 10 miles of 101,000 on the Rhine, 14 miles southeast of Cologne, was in 1st Army hands.

The Germans stepped up artillery fire against the Remagen and Ludendorf bridge, seized a few minutes before the Germans could destroy it, and added to the more abortive bombing raids yesterday. In the Cologne area they put up armored division captured the bridge, allied troops rushed and tried to wreck it to prevent the Germans from escaping across it.

German artillery sent the bridge at Bonn tumbling into the

Escaped Convict Wanted To Tell What He Knows of Three Slayings

Washington, March 10 (AP) — Police are hunting an escaped convict to learn what he knows about the deaths of three women in three widely scattered cities.

Detective Chief Robert J. Barrett said he will swear out a warrant today against Joseph Medley, 43, charging that he killed well-to-do Mrs. Nancy Boyer, 48, who was hit in the mouth and shot three times early Tuesday morning.

Barrett added that Medley also is wanted for questioning concerning the bloodstained death of two widowed house bodies were found in Chicago and Washington, D.C., and New Orleans.

Miss Lillian Bember, 28, a textile worker from New York, was discovered dead in the Ile Sole Hotel, New Orleans, Christmas Eve. Mrs. Blanche Zimmerman, 38, a telephone company employee, died in the Atlantic Hotel, Chicago, February 11.

Thursday night, Mrs. Boyer's body was found slumped in the kitchen of her fashionable apartment. Barrett said she had been shot with a .32 calibre gun, between 5 and 8 a.m. Tuesday. Unlike the two other victims, Mrs. Boyer was fully clothed.

Barrett said Medley, a former Chicagoan, who also is known as J. H. Gardner and who has been in and out of state prison, escaped from the Jackson, Mich., prison, November 27. He was serving 10 to 50 years for kidnapping and armed robbery.

Robbery evidently was the motive in the Boyer murder, Barrett added, for a fur coat worth $500, a diamond and an emerald ring are missing.

Barrett expressed the theory that Medley may have killed the Washington since January. For this convict left behind a trail of three stolen fur coats, two rings and a man's coat reported from Washington's second-hand store, Barrett said. The owners of these articles had been murdered, Barrett said, and they said the man who sold them the goods was Medley.

Fellow-residents of the apartment house described Mrs. Boyer as "a very sweet woman who seldom went out with men."

Residents Asked To Put in Coal For Next Year When Available

By JACK WILLIAMS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 10 —(CP)—Canadians will be asked to put up grade fuel next winter, regardless of consequences, in the face of condition of individual) coal bins when cold weather rolls around again this autumn, Donald Gordon, Chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Controller of Rationing said today.

"There are lots of uncertainties about next year's fuel situation, but one thing is sure—domestic consumers will have a must," Mr. Rumning said in an interview.

"We are going to have a massive program now to make sure that everyone HAS ENOUGH COAL for fuel for next winter and if everyone follows that program there won't be any real hardship."

There are a number of factors that enter into the complex picture of the Canadian fuel situation, Controller Gordon said, but the big problem is the transportation that it will catch up before next winter.

"To meet that demand it has been necessary to work mines that were not worked under peacetime conditions and this has been one of the reasons for poorer quality during the war years, but we have not yet faced acute labor shortages.

"Production in mines and this summer there can still be little hope of any improvement in the coal situation although it would be months at least before miners now in the services could be released to return to work. Added to that is the prospect of a severe winter which avalanche will reach Canada for next winter.

Stock piles built up last summer along the Great Lakes are not the end as far as the fuel situation in central Canada is concerned, Mr. Gordon said.

"We plan to build stockpiles again this year," Mr. Brunning said. "In addition we are going to take further steps to get fuel in Lake deliveries of any suitable fuel as it becomes available. Details of this program will be announced in a few weeks.

"Some people seem to overlook the fact that delivery difficulties which developed last summer and fall and winter can be met during the summer when coming conditions are good. That is one of the reasons we are asking people to put their coal in when it is available."

STUDENTS' COUNCIL ELECTS SCOTT DENTON

Other officers chosen include George Manjuris as collegiate vice president; Helen Ferguson as commercial vice president and Percy Marcus as vocational vice president. Beryce Hamilton was chosen as secretary and Bruce Burns as treasurer.

One of the coincidences of the result of the election of officers for the Student Council is the fact that only one of the successful candidates, George Manjuris, is a "day" student. Other officers elected with the exception of one are taking courses in the commercial department.

Speedy 'Jack' Races Train

Passengers waiting for trains at the Newcastle station of the Canadian National Railways on Saturday almost had first-hand evidence of the fleet-footed prowess of jack rabbit can outdo speedy passenger train.

Just before the morning Jack rabbit can outdo speedy passenger train.

Just before the morning Toronto train was due to leave Fruit Inspector Clarence Stevenson, of this town, noticed a jack rabbit which had been listening with some curiosity to approaching train, suddenly decide to get into action.

There was absolutely no warning of the sudden surprise to see the grey furry animal dash along the track with the speed of lightning. A few minutes later a C.N.R. train pulled to a stop at the station.

That Jack rabbit was going so fast that I doubt if the train would have overtaken it," the inspector smiled as he afterwards learned that a Toronto hunting club advised of the presence of the hare in the Newcastle district had organized a hunting party and scoured territory north of and in the vicinity of that town, travelling north by truck. They returned south in checkerboard pattern covering every foot of outlined territory, it was said.

One hundred and twenty-five hares were bagged in the drive, industry, the professions, civic, educational, welfare and federal government, his native township, of Huntingdon and other rural parts of the province, as well as distinguished visitors from other points, at a testimonial banquet sponsored by the Belleville Chamber of Commerce held last night to pay tribute to the man whose achievements for over half a century in the years have contributed largely to the success of urban phases of community life, service clubs, church and community work in general in the district.

Tinged With Pathos

The banquet, marked with drama was the keynote of the banquet. There was pathos in the scene when Robert A. Pringle, Industrial Commissioner, chairman of the event presented the guest of honor with a handsome illustrated address and a handsome illustrated address and a handsome illustrated album in the banquet hall, when Mr. Eugene V. Haney, Secretary-Manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, presented the toast to Mr. Herity and presented him with an engraved pen and pencil set. "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" preceded the final act of the banquet at which Lieutenant-Jack Trudeau, of the Chamber of Commerce, handed Mr. Herity a leather bound autograph album containing the signatures of the many guests present.

List of Speakers.

Heading the list of speakers who paid eulogistic tribute to the guest of honor were Messrs. Russell T. Kelley, past president Ontario Association of Real Estate Boards; Commerce, Hamilton; F. W. Collins, Industrial Manager, Canadian Pacific Railway, Montreal; and S. J. Raymond,

2,000 Years Ago and Now

Crossing of the Rhine River on Wednesday night by the Americans was the swiftest crossing of the river within recorded history, the Allies using a bridge which was intact, took the Germans off balance and established a powerful bridgehead. Even so long ago as the century before the Christian era began, the Rhine was known to military commanders as a formidable waterway. Caius Julius Caesar, the greatest of Roman generals and statesmen, crossed the Rhine eighteen times and he had completed the construction of a bridge across the waterway. That was two thousand years ago.

Canadian schoolboys and schoolgirls will know something of this feat of the mighty Julius through their studies of his own commentaries on his war in the Province of Gaul, (now France.) Caesar was one of the greatest military captains of all time and was himself an admirer of military genius of Alexander the Great, though in the ancient world Caesar ranked along with Alexander as a soldier and a general while he surpassed the Macedonian in political genius.

This Caesar who had become the hero of the Roman populace decided that it was time the warlike Rhine-dwelling German tribes were crushed for they had indicated that they were prepared to contest with Rome the possession of Gaul, (now France.) He had seen the necessity of aiding the Aedui and Sequani tribes against the ambitions of these Germans. Caesar defeated the Germans under Ariovistus, and the Nervii in the bloody battle of the Sambre River. In another campaign he has attacked and defeated two of the German tribes which had crossed the lower Rhine.

Earlier somewhere between what are now the Wesel and Neuss-Duesseldorf he built a wooden bridge over the Rhine for the purpose of carrying fire and sword to the raiding Germans who had crossed the Rhine and the Meuse on one of their foraging and looting expeditions and had been withdrawn with their loot. Caesar in his story of the Gallic Wars tells of the deep and swift-flowing Rhine and how he had the operation of building the bridge completed in ten days from the time he began to collect the timber for the structure. Then marching his legions across the bridge the Roman commander finished in 18 days the task of punishing the Germans east of the river. The Germans had fled into the woods leaving their villages.

Caesar had no plan for complete conquest of Germans or of making them part of the Roman Empire, but he aimed to teach them a lesson so that they would remain on the east side of the river which in those days was looked upon as separating the Germans from the Gauls. Then to secure Gaul against the warlike tribesmen from east of the Rhine.

Today the Allies of the East and West have a goal a purpose, the surrender of Germany unconditionally. The West have in the East an ally, the Russians, who are battering their way toward Berlin from the East. And today the Allies have an evil gang to round up, the Nazi regime and all those guilty of atrocities and so the modern invaders of Germany will go on until Germany as a combattant ceases to exist.

For twenty centuries and more (for it was just two thousand years ago this year that Caesar whipped the German tribes across the Rhine into the forests), these Germans have been bad neighbours of every nation. Now the neighbors of Germany have come to chastise Germany at home. Nothing but the evil genius of Hitler can do can prevent the uprooting and destruction of Nazism and the military tyranny the Germans have exercised against their neighbors on all sides for long ages. The Huns have complained that the Allied Nations have ganged up on Germany. What has happened is that the nations that love freedom have united in determination to put Germany in her place—and that place will be not to interfere in the freedom of her neighbors or of nations far away. Just as law is required within a state so law is required and respected among nations of good will and Germany has been a nation of ill will, hating and grasping at others until forming their own police, the free nations have decided to settle this question of Germany's lawlessness for good. So the Rhine and Oder are crossed as international law enters to prevent recurrences of the two Great Wars.

Caesar in 55 B.C. did not go far enough. Had he known what a force of evil Germany on the Germans would become he might have gone into Germany for the sake of the Roman Empire that was to grow out of Caesar's regime.

Wednesday night's crossing by bridge over the Rhine therefore will rank among events long to be remembered. It is the latest answer to Hitler's daring in 1936 on the seventh of March.

The hand of retribution is seen to have been in this crossing. It was just nine years from the day that Hitler's troops crossed the Rhine at Cologne bent on world conquest. On that day he openly defied the world and the allied peoples of the last war especially and Germany's treaty of Versailles as he marched his troops into the demilitarized zones of the Rhineland. There he threw defiance at the world. On Wednesday, nine years later, Cologne had already fallen to the United Nations and on that day the Allies crossed the Rhine east-bound and Berlin-bound.

Paints With Germs

(A. A. Brown in "Your Life")

Dr. Alexander Fleming, the scientist who discovered penicillin, has the unique hobby of painting with germs. He takes various organisms which, when they incubate, produce different colored colonies of bacteria. He brushes these organisms onto a culture medium, sets aside to incubate, and the germs do the rest. When the colors are set, he has his germ painting. Some of the "pictures" he has produced in this manner are the British flag, a street scene and the fleur-de-lis.

Ideas for Tomorrow

(The Rotarian Magazine)

A patent granted to an Evanston, Illinois, man covers a new type of refrigerator for the frozen dessert. Inventor, a circular affair in which the shelves rotate like Washington's rotary table server, with each shelf adjustable for height. The door opens to the touch; ice cubes come out by lifting a lever. On the floor of the refrigerator is a drain so that anything spilled runs into a cup below. These ideas and probably others will be included in tomorrow's refrigerators. It seems certain, too, that a quick-freeze unit will often be included or attached.

Grim Season on Fashion Front

(Montreal Daily Star)

A Paris milliner explained at a style show that "we might as well allow a small note of gaiety in coiffure. Gaiety? Hysteria, probably would have been a better word.

Even when our own designers were struggling along without the assistance of the Parisian stylists m'lady's chapeaux were enough to make many a man feel like he was choking (and wishing he were choking the designer). Now, with inches of old at work, it looks like a grim season on the fashion front.

A New Headlamp

(U. K. Information Office)

A new headlamp which goes far towards solving the problem of safe motoring has been produced by an English firm. The beam has a flat top with a very definite cut-off level, and the beam itself is in perfect focus, giving not only a distant view of the road ahead, but a sharply defined picture of the road sides. The range of the lamp is stated to be well over 1,000 feet, and it further claimed that the special lens employed makes falling rain or snow invisible to the driver.

Crews of B-29s Have Trouble Getting To Sleep on Nights Before Missions

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Marianas Islands.—(Delayed)— There are five officers and six enlisted men on the crew of a B-29. All of them have to get used to stay in the same hut, because that's the way the Army does things. There are usually three crews of six men each in a "combat team."

The enlisted men's huts are more crowded than the officers'. Outside of that, there's no difference. They have a few more duties than the officers, when not on missions, but they still have plenty of spare time.

"Ajo" crew is a grand bunch of boys. As I suppose most of the crews. They have trouble sleeping the night before a mission, and I was there before the takeoff. As one of them laughingly said at the time, just before takeoff one morning "How do you get rid of that empty feeling in your stomach?"

But they relax and expand and practically all of them get over that feeling once they get back and have another crew member to confide in besides.

The six enlisted men of "my" crew are Sergts. Joe Corcoran, of Woodhaven, L.I.; Fraud Smith, of Des Moines; Nev Meraz, (near Raton); Joe McQuade, of Gallup, N.M.; Jack Ford, of 633 West Second Avenue, Columbus, O.; Norbert Springman, of Minneapolis, and Eugene Florio, of (1343 South California, Blvd.) Chicago.

Springman and Florio are radio men, and all the others are gunners.

Sergeant Corcoran is the oldest of the crew. The first time I walked into their hut he called from his bunk, call "Hi Ernie, the last time I saw you was in the Stork Club."

"But I've never been in the Stork Club in my life," I said.

So we straightened that a while, and finally decided it must have been two other guys who look like living a double life which I don't know about.

Sergeant Corcoran was a chiropractor before the war, and still gives the boys a good workout now. He practiced for three years at Hollywood, and had a few businesses worked up. I asked him how a chiropractor ever would get to be a side-gunner on a B-29, and he said demand of he knew.

It's unusual to find two men from thinly populated New Mexico on the same crew, and McQuade never knew each other until they met in the Army and both were surprised ed out they had joined the Army the very same day. Now they are the closest friends.

McQuade was a fireman on the Santa Fe. He has served a good many stoke, but finally had to sell them. They just had letters saying it was below zero back home, and they were at least thankful to be away from that.

Both the boys have had experiences McQuade made the trips to the Aleutians as a gunner on a B-24 bomber. He served his time and tour of serial combat overseas.

Smith was in the South Pacific in the early days, and flew 31 missions as gunner on B-17s. He had all his missions painted on the back of his leather flying jacket—two Japanese flags and Rising Suns, and red ones for Japan. He says he had got seven or 27 more missions on his jacket, and then they quit counting them.

I asked Sergeant Smith if he had to bother to come back overseas as badly as I do.

"Twice as bad," he said.

"Tell me about it."

"Well, as bad then," he said. "But I haven't replied to much about it since we got here. It's not nice to talk about it overseas. In fact we're living as good here as we did in America."

Sergeant Smith's odd first name —Faind—is Syrian. He is growing a little regimental goatee, and his black as coal. I asked him how long he was going to keep it. He said, "Probably only until the colonel threatens to notice it."

Sgt. Bill Corcoran are the only two sergeants on the crew who are married. Both their wives are living temporarily in California.

Bill Corcoran is named around Corcoran's and Smith's cots one day, when Corky rewarded under his bunk and pulled out a bunk rat trap to show me.

"It seems they have a mouse in the hut, who eats their candy and sneaks it to a great, unsuspecting mouse. They couldn't find the mouse trap, so they set this rat trap."

But every night Mr. Mouse eats all the cheese, even licks the plunger clean, but the trap is so strong it won't go off. Corky has strung the strong thread through the trap, then ran the thread and got his teeth caught in the thread and thus yank the trap off. We're waiting with baited breath to see how this noble experiment turns out.

The funniest man is my hut of B-29 pilots is Capt. Bill Clifford, of Buford, Ala.

He's a dryly talking Southerner, lean, profane and witty. He has a long neck, a long nose, sandy hair and a wide mouth and he is the gab of the hut.

Retired Arrived Clifford held the record for being the oldest man in the B-29 base. The other boys call him "the 97-Pound Wonder." They can laugh at him now, but instead of him when we go to take our outdoor shower.

Bill Clifford is an old-timer in aviation, almost older than his fellow pilots here. He is 36, and has been flying about 17 years. As he says, he's been flying since the days of the bombing business."

He says he gets so scared over Japan he can hardly think, and I imagine that's true. He certainly he volunteered to go on a certain specially tough mission when it first came out.

It turned out that Cliff and I had a lot of mutual friends. We went to almost days, such as Dick Merrill and Jim Mollison, and the ones in Hyde, so we've become practically known as the Grandi Twins, you could call us.

Bill has been around in this world a good deal, and has a wonderful airmail. He flew for Pan American in South America, for the British Royal Canadian Air Force, and ferried bombers to England.

It's worth a theatre ticket to hear Cliff tell about the missions he gets back. He uses his hands and his face and his fine voice and a great portion of his vocabulary. He gets tickled and then he gets mad.

It seems that everything always happens when Cliff goes on a mission. He had an experience to top all others the other night. He gone to visit in a neighboring hut and his own crew left without telling me, or I would have been with him on it. Then goodness knows I'd have been on it at the right moment.

Anyway, it was just a half hour before supper, when Cliff got an inspiration that he'd like a nice, airstrip right outside and take a ship up on a few hours test hop.

He made the flight all right, but when he got ready to land the wheels wouldn't come down. It was very annoying, you know.

Well, Cliff hated the field, and then began working on those wheels. He tried this and that, but are so complicatedly automatic that you do everything by little electrical gadgets and you can't do it by hand.

Gasoline guy must have spent all day crossing up wires on that airplane. I'll bet it's the biggest exaggeration when he got back.

Instead of the wheels coming down, out of the wings popped guns. When I tried to shut them, the bomb doors opened and dropped. I hit the light switch by mistake, and the flaps went down. I was ready for the hell of it I tried to lower the flaps, and instead the bomb bay doors went shut.

By that time I'd turned it over to the co-pilot, and he got out of the bomb bay trying to make some kind of sense out of those things to working again.

Then Cliff's radio head nor tail out of it. I worked on the damn thing for half an hour and was getting nowhere.

"Find anything?" I asked.

"Finally I just got so disgusted I hauled off and kicked the damn box a good smack with the screwdriver, and suddenly it came to life. And just like that the wheels came down and everything was all right."

Cliff looks more like a Texas cowpuncher than a flier, and has a conscientious objector to all forms of violence. All the same, he's a night and half the day, but Cliff sleeps more than any of them.

Cliff's wife is a very unmilitary man in the outfit. He's just married a few months, and he's as crous as can be. On his wall are a few of the pictures he's received from his wife. He goes around most of the time in nothing but white under-drawers.

The first two fingers of Cliff's right hand are like the claws of a hand. No, he didn't lose them from frost bite. He got them in a fight one night with a shotgun when he was shooting quail on his father's farm. He writes a beautiful hand by holding the pen between thumb and the first two fingers. He does it the same way.

Cliff calls his plane "Honahu Hank." He wants to form a new Honahu Hank Club, composed of B-29 membership would be limited to those who had flown over Japan on the mission. Cliff says he says if he never goes on another mission in his life it would suit him fine.

KNOWN DEAD NOW SEVEN

Vancouver, March 10.—(CP)—Toll of known dead in last Tuesday's explosion of the aboard the 10,000-ton freighter S.S. Greenhill Park rose to seven today as another body was found in the wreckage-strewn hulk gate up two more bodies. None has been definitely identified.

URGENTLY NEEDED

Montreal, March 10.—(CP)—R. C. Vaughn, president of the Canadian National Railways, last night in a statement said that a belt-line railway now under construction in the Montreal district from CN.R. was "urgently needed in the interests of efficient and economical railway operation." The Transportation House Wednesday in a city council meeting had unanimous in a motion built to "punish" the Canadian Pacific Railway.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

HOW DO PROTECTIVE FOODS PROTECT?

In the past ten years or so it has become almost a cliche, this phrase "protective foods." Some physicians who practise "protective foods" are literally talking about use it glibly, some humbug "food experts" or "food specialists" have adopted it as the phrase with selling effect upon prospective customers.

In reality it is no nice sounding phrase with which to conjure up the stereotyped phrases of yesteryears' "good nourishing food" and "delicious food" because these phrases by the doctors used to say that was what the patient needed was "plenty of fresh air" And how they never stopped, to specify precisely which foods were nourishing and easily digested!

Well, the present generation is more difficult. People today have the impudence to ask the doctor sometimes, please to tell them just what foods they can eat and may not eat—and worst still, by jungo, some of them now know enough about the kinds of the trade to elevate an eyebrow if the doctor has the temerity to order them a dietary diet list in lieu of his own advice.

So in these years de decades, in order to save face, have adopted a new term for these foods and they contain "vitamins" developed, the doctors found this happy solution for their predicament. Now they are more inquired about vitamins the doctors used to say "eat plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables" and let it go at that. Now they are more inquired about vitamins the doctors say "eat plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables or greens, as well as all fresh, green foods, such as fruits, fruits and eggs, and just as important, drink plenty of water every day" and let it go at that.

Now the point is that the vitamin season not mentioned at all, fresh fruits and vegetables are "protective" foods, because these foods are the richest sources of minerals and vitamins. If they make up the main part of the diet one is thereby protected against deficiency diseases. If one already has mild deficiency diseases, liberal use of these foods tends to correct the trouble.

Now for good. But let's not fly off the handle. The doctor who says, or blatantly implies the world that the use of these protective foods in liberal quantities assures the body all the vitamins the body needs, is talking through his hat.

"If the American diet continues to use wheat and sugar in amounts now consumed, pellagra will appear," Dr. Russell M. Wilder, of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., told Dr. H. C. Cowgill of Yale University, in an official report to the Council on Foods, American Medical Association. (J. A. M. A., Dec. 1, '39) "Simple calculation reveals that, in order to secure the 500 units of vitamin B1 which the person, but fundamental to the well being of the body, would be forced to consume prodigious quantities of these particular foods." The author quotes Dr. Cowgill's estimate that the average American daily eats 826 Gm. (1½ pounds) of wheat and 100 Gm. (3½ ounces), and about 1 2-4 pounds of other vegetables and fruits. Well, you don't let me stop you, folks, if you want to eat that way you shall, you can get all the vitamins you need from the protective foods. When you've finished you'll know about rolling your own cigarettes.

Answer—One-fourth of a grain of saccharin is the sweetening quantity of about a teaspoonful of sugar. You can obtain three grains of powdered saccharin (up to five grains) a day.

All of the Presidents of the United States have been born in this state.

Half of the chief justices of the United States have been appointed from two states—New York and Virginia.

In 1794 President George Washington appointed Vice President John Adams minister to England. Quincy Adams, minister to the Netherlands, later was made President. John Adams appointed George Washington commander-in-chief of Washington, a member of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Two political enemies call Henry A. Wallace a star-gazer, rainbow-chaser and blue-sky peddler. Yet Henry "Corn" Wallace makes about $100,000 a year from the Wallace Farm corn business in Iowa.

Leon Henderson, chief of Deputy Coordinator of Fisheries Ira N. Gabrielson contains this intriguing paragraph:

"In Bristol Bay, which includes the Nushagak River, famous in song of Western Alaska, the runs of red salmon are abnormally small in all years trivisible by five. Although there are many exceptions to this rule, every fifth year' for at least the past twenty years, with no reason for the decline in this particular stock of fish being known."

Manila, capital of the Philippines, received its name from "mauilla," a species of mangrove found commonly common in that vicinity.

The Kingdom of Rumania and States Edward Stettinius received their credentials from Queen Marie, capital of Ponsarnia in Prusela and a second on the Oder river and Stettin on the Baltic. The latter is pronounced "Stett-TINE-i-un." In medieval times the Latin "ne" is the end of a name denoted that the person's father was a literary or personal person.

A "stein" in the sense of a "bite to eat" is not so recent in origin as one might suppose. It was already in use in 1800 in the United States. Washington noted in his diary that he took a finish Mrs. Dercon's."

U.S. ARMY PLANS CANOL WIND-UP

It Will be Sold to Canadian Government or to Private Interests

Ottawa, March 10 (CP) — The External Affairs Department announced last night that the United States army will wind up its operation of the $134,000,000 Canol Oil project in Northwest Territories by June 30 and that preparations are being made for the purchase by the Canadian government or sale to private interests.

The announcement disclosed that a new exchange of notes between Canada and the United States provides for valuation of refined oil distribution lines as well as the refinery at Whitehorse, Yukon, and the crude pipeline to Whitehorse from Norman Wells, N.W.T.

The Canol project was started in 1942 when there was fear that the Japanese might cut north-south oil supply lines to Alaska. Crude oil to make oil from deposits at Fort Norman available for the forces in Alaska and the North Pacific area, the project consists of a crude oil pipeline from Norman wells to Whitehorse, and refined distribution through from Skagway, Alaska, to Whitehorse, down the Alaska highway to Watson Lake and up the highway to Fairbanks.

The department said the new agreement provides for a speed-up in procedure for dealing the project and preparing the way for its purchase by Canada or for a private sale. Representatives will be appointed shortly by two governments to inspect the property to make preliminary reports, possibly before terminating the contract.

The decision to discontinue the project was reached because the "anticipated requirements of the tanker situation as well as the greatly-improved military situation of the Alaskan area supplied by the refinery in the light of progress in the Pacific war."

Orders Recalling Aircrew Reserve Being Dispatched

Ottawa, March 10 — (CP) — All navigators, navigator-bombers, wireless air gunners and air gunners, Air Observers never called to a civilian reserve will receive notices in the next few days asking them to report next month for duty, Air Minister Gibson announced today on his return from Hamilton.

Reservist pilots, navigators, navigator - wireless operators and flight engineers will not receive the notices. While all the reservists in the specified categories will be requested to report, an air official said that the number actually called back to duty would depend on the indicated needs at that time.

Increased losses of the bomber offensive has seen crews completing operational tours much rapidly than was anticipated and the need to call in the reserves became apparent.

However, Col. Gibson emphasized that reservists now in civilian jobs should not resign from their occupations "until further notification is received."

An airforce official said this statement was included because the R. C.A.F. was not certain just how many men would be needed to supply future overseas demands.
